The New Umbrella "The India"

The biggest event in Umbrella history since the idea first came to us out of the East is "The India" Umbrella advent. "The little umbrella with the big spread" best tells "The India" merits. The shape is graceful and while capable of being carried close to the head—without harm to hats—it admits a perfectly clear outlook. Though the spread is wider than that of the ordinary, the length when closed is considerably less; clever devices admit of their being readily enclosed in a suit case. PUBLIC LIBRARY BOARD HAS A BUSY SESSION

A regular monthly meeting of the Public Library Board was held in the Board room of the Library last evening at 8 p.m.

The members present were Messrs. E. H. D. Hall, chairman, H. R. H. Kenner, D. Walker, A. Mowat, T. F. Matthews, J. Corkery, H. Ritchie, and Dr. McNulty.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from Miss H. M. Cahill, assistant Librarian, tendering her resignation, to take effect on 31st inst.

Moved by Mr. Walker, seconded by Mr. Kenner, that the resignation of Miss Cahill be accepted, and the secretary be instructed to convey to her the Board's appreciation of her services and regret that she feels obliged to sever her connection with the work of the Library.—Carried.

A communication from Miss Dorothy Aylmer, applying for the position of Assistant Librarian, rendered vacant by the resignation of Miss Cahill, was received.

Moved by Mr. Kenner, seconded by Mr. Ritchie, that Miss Aylmer's application to be appointed Assistant Librarian be accepted, to take effect 1st January, 1912.—Carried.

A letter was read from Mr. Dela Fosse reporting on the cost of mending books and the number repaired to date.

Moved by Mr. Matthews, seconded by Mr. Kenner, that the report of the Librarian be received.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Matthews, seconded by Mr. Ritchie that the matter of appointing a second assistant librarian be referred to the Library Committee to consider and report to the Board. —Carried.

A letter was read from the Peterborough Lumber Company with reference to the disposal of discarded books, and was referred to the Librarian with power to act.

The report of the Finance Committee was read by Mr. Corkery and adopted, recommending the payment of the following accounts.

Bell Telephone Co'.... .... $3 65
Cassels Co... .. ..15.79
White Bros. .. .. .65
Otonabee Power Co. 15.90
H. Edmonson 1.60

Virtue & Co. 25.00
R. Fair & Co. 1.05
F. M. Dela Fosse 9.95
Peterborough Hardware Co..8.70

Mr. Walker, chairman of the Library Committee, submitted the following:

Gentlemen, — Your Library Committee would report as follows:

1. That the contract for supplying magazines and newspapers for the year 1912 has been awarded to R. J. Soden. The amount required for this purpose will be $193.50.

2. That at the request of the committee appointed to select books for the juvenile department an order has been placed with McClelland & Goodchild for books amounting to $38.00.

3 That your committee has endeavoured to keep the expenditure for books for the present year within the sum of $1000, which the Council was good enough to award us out of the special fund obtained from the sale of the building handed over for library purposes by the Nicholls estate. This year, the books have, therefore, really cost the city nothing, and it has been found that this sum of $1000 is barely sufficient to keep the library in a satisfactory condition.

Moved by Mr. Walker, seconded by Mr. Ritchie, that the report of the Library Committee be adopted. —Carried.

Mr. Matthews, chairman of the Property Committee, made a verbal report on several matters in connection with the library fixtures.

Moved by Mr. Corkery, seconded by Dr. McNulty, that Mr. Matthews be authorized to order a card cataloguing cabinet and have the repairs made, as reported, by him.—Carried.

A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Thos. Allen of Millbrook, for the presentation to the Library of a copy of Liddell and Scott's Greek lexicon.

IN DREAD OF CROUP

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses, at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and gives relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered

GREETING CARDS

Now is the best time to order your private Christmas cards, Samples are in, call and inspect them at, Peterboro Examiner, Limited.

Takes Over Managership

A new wholesale grain store is now opened in the city, situated at the rear of Messrs. Kishor's premises.

The title by which the store will be known is the Peterborough Flour and Feed Store, and the managers are Mr. J. F. McCarthy, who has had considerable experience in the business as traveller, and Mr. J. T. Donoghue, of Sherbrooke street, who is well known in the city.

The store contains a splendid stock, and the company's specialty will be "Purity Flour." The premises opened for business yesterday.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE

The City Property committee met last night, prior to the Council, with Ald. Duncan in the chair and the following present: Mayor Morrow, Alds. Graham, Bradburn and Brown.

A communication was received from Mr. A. E. Dixon re a foot of land running along Victoria avenue. He enclosed deed of the property for the city. It was accepted.

There was no action taken in the C.P.R.-Canoe Co. matter. The C.P.R. requested that the ybe given part of the lane belonging to the Peterborough Canoe Co. and the Canoe Co. requested to be given a piece of land by the city upon which to move their buildings. No action was taken.

"Will we do anything more about Rutherford Bros." asked Ald. Duncan.

"No," said Ald. Bradburn, "we have done our part. They can come to us with their proposition now."

This concluded the committee's business.

CHRISTMAS DRY FRUITS

THE WEATHER.

The beautiful spring-like weather of the last few days is in great contrast to the corresponding date of last year. We have not as yet had it down to zero, though last Monday came very close to it, being but one degree above. A glance at the weather of last December will show how favoured we have been up to the present date. On Dec. 3, we had it zero; 5th, 10 below; 6th, 3 below; 7th, 11 below; 9th, 10 below; 10th, 14 below; 11th, 3 below; 12th, 6 below; 13th, 5 below; 15th, zero; 16th, 11 below; 17th, 15 below; 21st, 5 below; 22nd, 11 below; 25th, 8 below; 26th, 11 below; 30th, 16 below; and 31st, 16 below—the last was the coldest day of the winter, Altogether we had 18 days of zero weather, or worse. It was much the coldest month of the winter. Good sleighing began Nov. 30, and continued to the last week in February.—W. P.

Sent Up For Trial

Gilbert Horton, the Lakefield cheese maker, who was arrested a few days ago by County Constable Cochrane, on a charge of stealing $115.00 and a quantity of butter from the Lakefield Dairy Co., was sent up for trial by Magistrate Edmison at this morning's sessions of the County Police Court. Horton will be tried by a jury at the coming sessions on Tuesday. He was represented by Mr. G. N. Gordon, and did not plead or elect. Very few witnesses were examined, but the evidence brought out showed the defendant to have a counter account against the company. The charge of stealing the money was separate from the charge of stealing the butter. The latter will be allowed to stand until the first is disposed of, when it will then be dealt with.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF LANSDOWNE LODGE S.O.E.

Enjoyable Gathering Held Last Night—A Bountiful Supper and Splendid Programme Were Features.

A LARGE ATTENDANCE

The Lansdowne Lodge of the S. O. E. held their 28th annual banquet and concert in the S. O. E. Hall, Hunter street, last evening.

At 7 o'clock upwards of a hundred persons had assembled, and a sumptuous supper was placed before them. The Tucker orchestra provided music in the meanwhile. After full justice had been done to the viands, the chairman, Mr. E. A. Peck, proposed the toast of the King.

The musical programme was an excellent one and was listened to with marked appreciation. The items were:

Instrumental solo—Miss E. Shearer.
Cornet solo—Mr. J. Miller.
Vocal solo—Mr. J. Hampton.
Instrumental solo—Mr. E. Andrews.
Recitation—Mrs. H. Conolley.
Vocal solo—Mr. B. Bolam.
Instrumental (piano and cornet)—Miss E. Shearer and Mr. J. Miller.
Vocal solo—Mr. J. Hampton.
Instrumental solo—Miss M. Flowers.
Vocal solo—Mr. H. Wilford.
Pianoforte duet—Miss Shearer and Miss Williams.
Recitation—Mr. H. Conolley.

Verses Read At Old Boys' Reunion

The following verses were read by Mr. W. J. Spence, formerly of Peterborough, at the Peterborough Old Boys' banquet, in Winnipeg, last week, and through the kindness of Mrs. John Spence, 260 McDonnell St., the Examiner has an opportunity of presenting them to its readers:

You must write, yes, write me early, very early, Willie dear,
Of the banquet in your city, your companions and good cheer;
Since your last letter reached me, I have thought of you all the day,
As never before I've done, since you have been so far away.

The news you had to tell me of a forthcoming, festive spread
At the Royal Alexandra, with Max Dennistoun at the table's head,
Was greater joy than I could tell you, for it proved to my anxious heart
That the boys who go out from us can still play the true son's part.

In that far-off, frigid climate, with its struggle with winter's cold,
In the stress of its busy commerce, where men drudge and slave for gold,
I had feared the boy I once nurtured might soon forget the way
Back to the town and mother's hearth stone, beloved in childhood's day.

They tell of your banks and your pavements, of town lots and prairie farms,
They tell of Yankee enterprise, backed by strong Canadian arms
But your mother, my boy, hears little of the things that touch the heart
Of a boy and keep warm his affection for the home where he made his start.

I am glad that your home-bound letter is never too long delayed,
Though sometimes the brief epistle leaves far too much unsaid;
I am glad you have not neglected your Church and your Bible class,
Though sometimes, I fear, your interest is more with the work of the week that's past.

But I yearn with all the passion of a loving mother's soul
To have my boy cling fondly to the scenes and friends of old;
It is a joy unquestioned to know of his fresh success,
But sweetest of all it is to feel that he still holds old friends best.

You can never know how bitter a struggle it cost to part
With the boy on whom I had lavished the love of a mother's heart,
To cease to care for his wardrobe, no longer to prepare,
To tempt his favourite dishes, to gaze on his vacant chair.

Not again to hear his footfall, as the evening hour draws nigh,
And see him enter the hallway, and greet as he passes by
His mother, at her duties domestic, who, yet in their ceaseless round
Finds joy untold and unstinted, for their sake to whose lives she is bound.

But your father and I have it settled long ago in unwilling minds,
That old things will pass in the family and for them we must not repine;
If only our lads, as they leave us, and go from the nest of home,
Still cherish a tender affection for those from whose care they have come.

I've discussed it with Charlie's mother, 'way over on Harvey street;
I've told you before how I'm drawn to her now every time we meet;
We can talk of naught else, but our children, and the news of our boys in the West,
Of how much money they're getting, and to what new heights they have pressed.

Last time,—it was just this morning,—we spoke of the news we had had,
Of the banquet they're preparing,—an idea not too bad,
For boys far from home and its comforts and too busy often to seek
The society of others than such as their business compels them to meet.

But most of all we rejoiced in the news you had given us about
The toast-list and in it the item you placed at the end to close out;
"The Old Folks at Home" ran the title,—why who in the world could that be,
But the mothers and fathers, and sweethearts, and old friends at home, don't you see?

If our boys in their fun and their frolic, in their music and laughter, and song,
Can find time and a will to remember us still, and give a bravo to help us along,
We'll take heart then once more, for the tasks that long we bore,
And move on to our rest with good cheer in our breast,
For the loved ones that honour us the living among.

My dear boy I must close,
And would bid you dispose
Of this letter of mine
As you best can design;
If by chance it should prove
That some one can move
To have it read out
To the boys round about
Your banquetting table,
Then I should be able
Thus faintly to express
My delight, ('tis nothing less)
That the boys whom we knew
Are still to home so true.

Long may it abide,
This love that is tried
So sorely by objects and interests aside,
From the old life, where still must remain
We parents with gray hairs,
Whose duty is plain,—
To tarry in patience, and breathe out our prayers,
That our boys' love for the best may always subsist,
And the evil they meet with they may always resist.

—Your Mother.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF LANSDOWNE LODGE S.O.E.

Enjoyable Gathering Held Last Night—A Bountiful Supper and Splendid Programme Were Features.

A LARGE ATTENDANCE

The Lansdowne Lodge of the S. O. E. held their 28th annual banquet and concert in the S. O. E. Hall, Hunter street, last evening.

At 7 o'clock upwards of a hundred persons had assembled, and a sumptuous supper was placed before them. The Tucker orchestra provided music in the meanwhile. After full justice had been done to the viands, the chairman, Mr. E. A. Peck, proposed the toast of the King.

The musical programme was an excellent one and was listened to with marked appreciation. The items were:

Instrumental solo—Miss E. Shearer.
Cornet solo—Mr. J. Miller.
Vocal solo—Mr. J. Hampton.
Instrumental solo—Mr. E. Andrews.
Recitation—Mrs. H. Conolley.
Vocal solo—Mr. B. Bolam.
Instrumental (piano and cornet)—Miss E. Shearer and Mr. J. Miller.
Vocal solo—Mr. J. Hampton.
Instrumental solo—Miss M. Flowers.
Vocal solo—Mr. H. Wilford.
Pianoforte duet—Miss Shearer and Miss Williams.
Recitation—Mr. H. Conolley.
Vocal solo—Miss Williams.
God Save the King.

Verses Read At Old Boys' Reunion

The following verses were read by Mr. W. J. Spence, formerly of Peterborough, at the Peterborough Old Boys' banquet, in Winnipeg, last week, and through the kindness of Mrs. John Spence, 260 McDonnell St., the Examiner has an opportunity of presenting them to its readers:

You must write, yes, write me early, very early, Willie dear,
Of the banquet in your city, your companions and good cheer;
Since your last letter reached me, I have thought of you all the day,
As never before I've done, since you have been so far away.

The news you had to tell me of a forthcoming, festive spread
At the Royal Alexandra, with Max Dennistoun at the table's head,
Was greater joy than I could tell you, for it proved to my anxious heart
That the boys who go out from us can still play the true son's part.

In that far-off, frigid climate, with its struggle with winter's cold,
In the stress of its busy commerce, where men drudge and slave for gold,
I had feared the boy I once nurtured might soon forget the way
Back to the town and mother's hearth stone, beloved in childhood's day.

They tell of your banks and your pavements, of town lots and prairie farms,
They tell of Yankee enterprise, backed by strong Canadian arms;
But your mother, my boy, hears little of the things that touch the heart
Of a boy and keep warm his affection for the home where he made his start.

I am glad that your home-bound letter is never too long delayed,
Though sometimes the brief epistle leaves far too much unsaid;
I am glad you have not neglected your Church and your Bible class,
Though sometimes, I fear, your interest is more with the work of the week that's past.

But I yearn with all the passion of a loving mother's soul
To have my boy cling fondly to the scenes and friends of old;
It is a joy unquestioned to know of his fresh success,
But sweetest of all it is to feel that he still holds old friends best.

You can never know how bitter a struggle it cost to part
With the boy on whom I had lavished the love of a mother's heart,
To cease to care for his wardrobe, no longer to prepare,
To tempt his favourite dishes, to gaze on his vacant chair.

Not again to hear his footfall, as the evening hour draws nigh,
And see him enter the hallway, and greet as he passes by
His mother, at her duties domestic, who, yet in their ceaseless round
Finds joy untold and unstinted, for their sake to whose lives she is bound.

But your father and I have it settled long ago in unwilling minds,
That old things will pass in the family and for them we must not repine;
If only our lads, as they leave us, and go from the nest of home,
Still cherish a tender affection for those from whose care they have come.

I've discussed it with Charlie's mother, 'way over on Harvey street;
I've told you before how I'm drawn to her now every time we meet;
We can talk of naught else, but our children, and the news of our boys in the West,
Of how much money they're getting, and to what new heights they have pressed.

Last time,—it was just this morning, —we spoke of the news we had had,
Of the banquet they're preparing,—an idea no' too bad.
For boys far from home and its comforts and too busy often to seek
The society of others than such as their business compels them to meet.

But most of all we rejoiced in the news you had given us about
The toast-list and in it the item you placed at the end to close out;
"The Old Folks at Home" ran the title,—why who in the world could that be,
But the mothers and fathers, and sweethearts, and old friends at home, don't you see?

If our boys in their fun and their frolic, in their music and laughter, and song,
Can find time and a will to remember us still, and give a bravo to help us along,
We'll take heart then once more, for the tasks that long we bore,
And move on to our rest with good cheer in our breast,
For the loved ones that honour us the living among.

My dear boy I must close,
And would bid you dispose
Of this letter of mine
As you best can design;
If by chance it should prove
That some one can move
To have it read out
To the boys round about
Your banquetting table,
Then I should be able
Thus faintly to express
My delight, ('tis nothing less)
That the boys whom we knew
Are still to home so true.

Long may it abide,
This love that is tried
So sorely by objects and interests aside,
From the old life, where still must remain
We parents with gray hairs,
Whose duty is plain,—
To tarry in patience, and breathe out our prayers,
That our boys' love for the best may always subsist,
And the evil they meet with they may always resist.

—Your Mother.

our own inspectors. As usual, Mr. Cchrane and Mr. Henry. So far as our wards placed in Peterborough County are concerned, Mr. Kelso, Provincial Superintendent, appointed these gentlemen at the solicitation of your officers, who felt that they would like to have this work performed by our own inspectrs. As usual, Mr. Cochrane has rendered invaluable services, and a great deal of our success is due to his untiring efforts. We are also under deep obligation to Dr. C. Hewitt, whose services have been at our disposal at all times.

We must also thank the many organizations and associations who have given various entertainments for our aid and have sent us money which has been collected in an undenominational way, and we have a good deal of gratification and feel that the Children's Aid Society of Peterborough is perhaps the only strictly undenominational work which is being carried on in the community and which appeals to all nationalities and creeds alike, and which is able to offer splendid machinery for child-saving which could not be reached through any other channel.

As usual, I give a brief review of some of the cases dealt with during the year in order that some of the varied character of the work may be appreciated.

All of which is respectfully submitted. E. L. GOODWILL, Secretary.

1. The "A" family, composed of four children, two boys and two girls, ages 1, 7, 9 and 11. The mother died of tuberculosis, and the father, although struggling to maintain the family in a partially finished house unfit for habitation, found that it was impossible to care for the children. They were all placed in the Shelter and have been, with the consent of the father, placed in foster homes, three of whom are adopted.

2. The "C" family, composed of four children. This is a similar case where the mother died leaving a young family. The father was struggling to keep the family together and finally began to drink. The oldest girl, an infant attempting to be a mother to the younger children and care for the house. By co-operation with the father, we placed the younger children in the Shelter, and the father has since been able to have a relative come out from the old country and keep house for him, and the family has once more been united.

3. The "N" family, consisting of two children, a boy and a girl. These shocking circumstances in one of the shockin geircumstances in one of the eastern townships of our county, investigated by our society in the early part of the year. They have both been placed in good homes and adopted.

4. The "C" family. Through investigation of your society it was found that two small boys were living in what was reputed to be a disorderly house. The matter was investigated, and the mother was convicted and sentenced to the Mercer Reformatory. The father of the boys, who separated from his wife some three years ago, was finally located and the children placed with him. The last report we have states that they are attending school regularly and that they have the best of home surroundings.

5. The "E" case. This represents a field of labour where the society is able to do good work offering temporary relief. The mother, a woman in poor circumstances, with a family of young children, was taken ill and was in need of surgical treatment. She was placed in the hospital, and the society cared for her children until she was restored to health and able once more to look after her household duties.

6. The "M" family, a boy of nine years and a girl of 13. These children were taken from a home in one of the Northern townships. According to the evidence produced at the trial, they lived in a shack in conditions that were not fit for animals. Their mother died some years ago, and they lived with their father following him from place to place in his lumbering operations. Their education was completely neglected. The magistrate made them wards of the society, and your officers were able to bring pressure to bear upon the father to board the children in a good home in the country where they can be sent to school and be under proper hme influences under the society's direction.

TREASURER'S REPORT

There being no special business on hand, the general business was proceeded with. Magistrate Edmison moved, seconded by Mr. Cochrane, that the Secretary's report be adopted.

On motion of Mr. Sawers, seconded by Mrs. Gibbs, the Treasurer's report was adopted.

Mr. Cochrane, Agent for the Society, reported that he had made an investigation of the eastern part of the county and found the children all in a satisfactory condition.

Mrs. Gibbs read a report of the Women's Auxiliary of the Children's Aid Society.

Mr. P. Campbell moved, seconded by Magistrate Edmison, that the President, Secretary and Treasurer be a committee to decide what acknowledgment will be given Mr. Henry's services in connection with the erection of a septic tank.

OFFICERS ELECTED

The following were the officers elected for the coming year:
Hon. Pres.—Mayor Morrow.

A CORRECTION

The published reports of the breaking of the windows in the Queen Alexandra school conveyed the impression that these breakages were done during the present school term. This was not the idea intended to be conveyed. The breaking of the windows referred to in the report occurred during the midsummer vacation, and, at the same time, windows in the Central and King Edward Schols were broken as well as those in the Queen Alexandra school. In some cases the culprits were discovered and punished, and they proved not to be the pupils of the schools, in all cases. The tampering with and obstructing of the Queen Alexandra sewer did occur this term, and this following upon the depredations of the midsummer, the Property Committee felt that some action must be taken to discover and punish the guilty parties.

UPSET WAGGON

An exciting runaway occurred on Park street, near the C.G.E. to-day about noon, when a team attached to a light wagon, the property of Mr. James Brown, a North Monaghan farmer ,bolted. He left the team standing outside a residence while he delivered some goods in the house, and during his absence something frightened them, with the result that they ran south on Park street, and turned west on Romaine street, upsetting the waggon and almost completely demolishing it in making the turn. They broke free from the waggon after dragging it for some distance, and kept on going west. It has not yet been learned where they were caught.

WEDDING BELLS

SANDERSON-CANN

Yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock a very pretty wedding was solemnized at "The Elms," the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Cann, Smith Township, when their daughter, Jennie Vera, was united in marriage to Francis H. Sanderson, son of Mr. Frank Sanderson, Communication road.

The bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the drawing room to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by her cousin, Miss Kathleen Thorndyke of Millbrook. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Jas. Rollins, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Peterborough, under an arch of smilax and narcissus. The bride, carrying a sheaf of cream roses, looked charming in a gown of Paris de Soie with trimmings of seed pearl and duchesse lace.

Dejeuner was served in the dining room, which was beautifully decorated in white and gold. The presents were handsome and of great variety; the groom's gift to the bride being a set of Persian lamb furs. There were a large number of guests present, many being from out of town.

The happy couple, amid showers of rice and confetti, left on their wedding trip, which will include Toronto and Port Elgin.

"The Gospel of The Hereafter" by Rev. Paterson-Smyth, on sale by Trebilcock Bros., price $1.00.

LIBERALITY APPRECIATED

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I am instructed by the Ministerial Association of Peterborough to convey to you their unanimous expression of thanks for the valuable services rendered by your paper in the appeal recently made for the Grenfell Deep Sea Mission fund. The success of this appeal has, in a large measure been due to the assistance given so heartily and generously by the press of the city. We desire also through your columns to thank the public for their liberal response to the appeal. Acknowledgment of the full amount subscribed will be made by the treasurer, Mrs. James Wood, within a few days.

ROWELL AT PALMERSTON

Liberal Leader Goes Over the Charges Against Government

IS A SPENT FORCE

Palmerston, Dec. 9.—"This is our charge against the Government: that it lies down in face of difficulties, instead of courageously grappling with them," said Mr. Rowell in the course of an address before a large meeting held here last night.

"If a man is lacking in courage, statesmanship, and vision, but will lie down in front of difficulties, he is not worthy to retain the confidence of his fellow-men. The Government appears to be a spent force, a burnt-out volcano, unable to initiate progressive legislation."

Dealing with the so-called bilingual schools, Mr. Rowell charged the Government with vacillation, indecision, evasion, and once more enunciated his own policy of solving this vexed question, not by trifling with the matter nor by wiping out the schools, but by securing through proper training schools an adequate supply of competent teachers, able to give every child a thorough English education.

Mr. McEwing, M.P.P., went on with an indictment of the retiring administration for the giving away of money to the Bruce Mines and Algoma, Central Ontario, and Manitoulin and North Shore Railways, and said the only reason that scandal had not been spread about the Whitney Government was that its huge majority enabled it to out-vote the Opposition when they wanted an investigation.

J. Nelson Hay of Listowel spoke on behalf of Mayor John Brown of Stratford, the candidate of the North Perth Liberals.

Mr. James McMurchie of Harriston, president of the West Wellington Reform Association, was chairman. The Carnegie Library Hall, which is the largest hall in the town, was crowded to its capacity, with over 500 people.

Potato Famine In United States.

New York, Dec. 9.—Importations of potatoes from abroad are beginning to arrive in this part, the main bulk of them coming from Ireland. Up to date this fall about 25,000 sacks have arrived.

Wholesalers quote Maine potatoes in the market here at $3 a sack, and say this price is just about double the price of a year ago.

Since early fall the price had risen steadily and $4 a sack is expected by February.

Not only is there a scarcity of potatoes in this country, but from practically all the potato producing countries of the world reports show slack crops.

Local Option In Blandford.

Tavistock, Dec 9.—At the meeting of the Blandford Township Council yesterday a petition was presented asking that a vote be taken on local option at the January elections. If the vote favors local option there will be a large area of dry country, as the hotel in Bright, which is the only licensed one in the Township of Blandford, is the only one between New Hamburg and Woodstock.

Farmer Shot Through Heart.

Tillsonburg, Ont., Dec. 9.—While out inspecting his mink traps yesterday, Archie Barham, a young farmer of Middleton Township, was accidentally shot and killed as he walked through the woods. He stumbled and the gun exploded, the bullet piercing his heart.

ATTACKS STUDHOLME.

Sir James Whitney Criticizes the Hamilton Laborite.

Hamilton, Dec. 9.—Into the constituency Sir James Whitney came last night and by a whirlwind summary of the Government's record sought to throw the sentiment of the electors in favor of Controller Cooper, the candidate of the Conservative party.

Sir James did not in any way attack Allan Studholme as a man, or as a politician. The Premier admitted that he could not and did not want to say anything against Mr. Studholme.

"But in the interests of good government," said Sir James, "I would urge you to support my colleague, the Hon. Col. Hendrie, and to support Mr. Cooper that you listened to a few minutes ago, whom no sane man will ever excuse you people for refusing to elect as your representative."

It was a big meeting. The large rink of Britannia Park was crowded with upwards of 3,000 people, and the galleries were also filled.

Sir James got a cordial reception.

"I must refer to Mr. Studholme," was the Premier's remark, "but I do not want to say anything against him. And, indeed, I hear that Mr. Studholme is saying kind things about the Government and myself. A good many people are saying the same thing, in fact nearly everybody in the province, being sensible men and women, are saying kind things about the present Government." (Laughter.)

"I merely want to say that I never received any help from Mr. Studholme in the Legislature as regards labor matters. I thought when he was elected by the intelligent and clear-thinking mechanics and artisans of East Hamilton that he would be able to give the Government valuable assistance with regard to the interests of labor. He didn't do it and at last I stopped expecting him to do it."

Sir James has splendid visions of what the Ontario act for compensation to injured workingmen may develop into. "I am looking forward," said he, "to the time when workmen will be compensated for injury no matter how the injury is caused, and when this expenditure for compensation will be regarded as part and parcel of the expenditure of the enterprise where the men are employed, just as the expenditures for coal, lighting, taxes, etc., are regarded."

Rebuke For Judge.

Montreal, Dec. 9.—Practical censure of a judge was the unusual course taken by the council of the Montreal Bar Association at a final meeting over an appeal by a young advocate from sharp censures passed upon him by Judge Leboeuf last May. Not only did the council exonerate Joseph Jenkins, the appealing lawyer, from all blame attaching to him by the judge, but they added a clause expressing regret that Judge Leboeuf, during the hearing of the appeal, should have borrowed the dossier and altered a document therein.

It is understood that a copy of the council's decision will be forwarded to the Minister of Justice. An appeal from the finding of the council lies with the censured judge to the council of the Provincial Bar Association.

Militia Department Sues Welland.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 9.—The Welland County Council is threatened by the Militia Department with a suit for $772 for services of the militia at Bridgeburg during the Grand Trunk strike. The militia was requisitioned by Warden Mackenzie, but County Solicitor Raymond gives it as his opinion the county cannot be forced to settle.

Killed on Way Home.

PROBLEMS OF THE RACE

Anglo-Saxon Ideals Discussed at New York

BORDEN AND BRYCE SPEAK

New York, Dec. 9.—Hon. Robert L. Borden, Premier of Canada, and Hon James Bryce, the British Ambassador to the United States, were the leading speakers at the fifteenth annual banquet of the Canadian Society of New York at Delmonico's, last night. In addition to these two, Governor John A. Dix of New York, R. C. Smith, K.C., of Montreal, and Rev. C. A. Eaton, D.D., of New York, third vice-president of the society, spoke. Dr. A. C. Humphries, president, was chairman of the dinner, while about 400 guests assembled.

Among the old members of the society present were Dr. Wilfred Nelson, and Dr. J. J. McPhee, former presidents. At the guest's table besides the speakers were: Justice W. R. Riddell of Toronto, Maj.-Gen. F. D. Grant, Rear-Admiral Leutze, U.S.N.; Courtenay Walter Bennett, British consul-general; Recorder Weir of Montreal, Justice John J. Delaney, Bishop Courtney, formerly of Halifax; Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the New York Life; while among others at the tables were D. Lorne McGibbon, Montreal; Frank W. McLaughlin, treasurer of the society; Julius

HON. JAMES BRYCE.

M. Mayer, former attorney-general of New York; Wm. Loeb, jr., collector of the port of New York; Senator Howard R. Bayne and many other men distinguished in the business world of New York.

The banquet hall was bountifully decorated with British and American flags with the Canadian ensign, an occasional Irish and Scotch flag adding variety to the scene. While no provision had been made in advance for the presence of ladies, it developed that a number of fair Canadians wished to be present and among those in the gallery were: Mrs. R. L. Borden, Ottawa; Mrs. W. R. Riddell, Toronto; Mrs. R. C. Smith and Miss Smith, Montreal; Mrs. Wilfred Nelson, Mrs. J. J. McPhee, Mrs. Frank W. McLaughlin, Mrs. Courtenay Walter Bennett, Mrs. Alfred Downing and several others.

Hon. R. L. Borden received a right royal welcome as the leading citizen of the home land of the great majority of those present. His declarations of friendship for this country, and his explanation of Canada's attitude to the late election were well received.

Hon. Mr. Borden, after a declaration that the constitution of Canada was as democratic as that of the United States, pointed out that the powers of self-government conferred upon Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa were so extensive that the Parliament of the United Kingdom had in one sense ceased to be an Imperial Parliament and the chief tie which bound together the Motherland and the great dominions was a common allegiance to the same sovereign. The strength of that tie had increased with its importance and Canada yielded not even to Britain in her attachment to the crown.

"I have the opportunity," he said, "merely to hint at problems that are common to the English-speaking democracies. There are others which may be regarded as in some sense peculiar to the United States and Canada. I do not pretend to deal with these, but merely to suggest them. Both countries are endowed with enormous and abundant resources. The tendency is naturally toward wastefulness and prodigality. On the other hand the vast accumulation of wealth in the hands of a few men confronts us with the possibility that great national resources may pass into the hands of an oligarchy of wealth and may be used for the oppression rather than for the benefit of the people. We, in Canada, are not insensible to this danger and in this as in other respects we hope to profit by your experience. Our natural resources have not been very appreciably diminished by waste but we are approaching the danger line and already we have taken precautions."

Referring to the defeat of reciprocity as in no sense a manifestation in Canada, of an unfriendly spirit towards the United States, he pointed out that from 1878 to 1897 Canada had been open an offer to exchange native products but the United States, as it had a perfect right to do, had declined to accept. He continued: "For thirty years and more we have followed certain national ideals and policies which we firmly intend to pursue and continue in the future. We reached the conclusion that the recent proposals were inconsistent with those ideals and policies. Moreover, we entirely disbelieve in the framing of tariffs by diplomatic methods. That system has been tested between different states under the British flag, notably in South Africa and the results have been far from satisfactory.

"May I be permitted to express my personal conviction that in the interests of good relations between our countries it is better that each should maintain and preserve unhampered to the fullest extent the control of its fiscal policy. And assuredly good relations between the two countries do not depend upon the existence of any particular form of reciprocal trade relations. No press, however prejudiced, can lead me to accept any such conclusion."

Hon. James Bryce was the next speaker.

In matters relating to the internal questions of Canada, in which it became necessary to represent the wishes and interests of Canada, he said he was at the service of the Dominion for the time being, as an intermediary conveying their wishes (subject to His Majesty's instructions) to the United States. In matters, which, while Canadian, were also of imperial concern, the British Home Government communicated directly with Canada through the Colonial Secretary. In neither case has he anything to do with the policies adopted, but only with the communications between the British and Canadian Governments and that of the United States. But his visits to Canada had been of the greatest interest to him, by enabling him to understand more fully than he could otherwise have done, what were the views and ideas of the Canadian Government, so that he could better secure a perfect understanding between them and the United States, and endeavor to help in solving any difficulties that might arise in a way just and satisfactory to both.

THEY WILL NOT TELL.

McNamaras Vow Not to Say Anything to Grand Jury.

Los Angeles, Dec. 9.—The scope of the investigation undertaken by the federal grand jury here and the one in Indianapolis, Ind., so far as could be learned last night, has not been sharply defined. Government officials, it is thought, will be able to determine only after the testimony of witnesses has practically been finished, whether to return indictments here or in Indianapolis against those persons alleged to have been implicated in a conspiracy unlawfully to transport explosives from one state to another.

Both James B. and John J. McNamara remained in their cells yesterday, reiterating that they would tell nothing even if called before the grand jury. Oscar Lawlor, the Government's special prosecutor, saw them but obtained little satisfaction. It was suggested that perhaps after the McNamaras had a taste of prison life and are visited by labor leaders who are anxious to cleanse organized labor of alleged charges of lawlessness, they might be prevailed upon to give the desired information.

Ortie E. McManigal, confessed dynamiter, continued to tell the grand jury his experience, and he was followed by William Kaiser of Muncie, Ind., a nitro-glycerine manufacturer, who says he sold explosives to J. B. and J. J. McNamara, as well as to McManigal. The latter corroborates Kaiser's story. Though the proceedings of the grand jury are kept secret, it is assumed that Kaiser, who identified J. J. McNamara in the courtroom recently, told of the persons to whom he sold explosives.

Ironworkers' Books Seized.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Dec. 9.—The books of the Ironworkers' Local Union here, seized by U. S. deputy marshals and held by them yesterday to await instructions from federal officials in Los Angeles, are wanted, it is said, on high authority, to trace to their ultimate disposition large sums of money sent by the secretary of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Union (J. J. McNamara), in the local union, ostensibly for "organization in the west."

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Owing to the outbreak of rabies, all dogs at Goderich have been ordered to be kept muzzled or locked up.

Newton Cossitt, a wealthy retired manufacturer, and one of the founders of the Cossitt Co. of Brockville, died last night at an advanced age.

The Winnipeg Trades and Labor Council discussed the McNamara case, and decided in favor of maintaining international relations with United States unions.

The Berlin Street Railway, owned by the municipality, has completed the most successful year in its history. After providing for the debentures, interest and improvements, the profit for the year will be $4,500.

The loss of the Turks in the recent battle at Ainzara, when they were defeated by the Italians, was less than 100 killed or wounded. It is the hope of the tribesmen that they may be able to draw the Italians beyond the range of the Italian warships lying off the coast.

Despatches from Teheran say that Persia is ready to enter into friendly negotiations with Russia with regard to the matters contained in Russia's recent ultimatum, but that she cannot submit to future appointments of foreign advisers in Persia being referred to Great Britain and Russia.

LOOTING IN SIANFU

Missionaries Were Killed in the Province of Shensi

LOYALISTS LOST 8000

Pekin, Dec. 9.—The first direct and uncensored news received from Sianfu since the recent outbreak there was brought here yesterday by messenger. It consists of letters to the British and American legations and the director of posts. The letters say that 8,000 Manchus were slain by the Chinese, and that there was much looting. Several mission houses in the province were destroyed and eight foreigners, some of them children, were killed. Four of the dead were Americans.

According to the letters most of the foreigners in the Province of Shensi, of which Sianfu is the capital, numbering 75, 17 of them being Americans. A majority of these are now in Sianfu, the others having fled to the Province of Kansu, where trouble is expected.

"We apparently are safe now," says one of the letters, "but the lawless reign. He had hoped to escape down the Han River, but the road is dangerous. The Kansu missionaries may have a hard time. Twenty-two of them, including children, are Americans. Money cannot be sent them as all the mails have been stopped, and the banks were robbed and burned."

This letter is signed by V. J. Plymire of the Christian and Missionary Alliance at Tsochow, Province of Kansu. It is dated Nov. 26.

The terms which the imperial delegates will take to Shanghai or Nanking in an endeavor to settle the question in dispute between the Government and the revolutionists are believed to provide, first, that the Emperor shall be retained, though he will be entirely without power; second, that a president and cabinet shall be elected by the nation and the president shall possess the same authority as the president of the republic, and, third, if the foregoing conditions are accepted, the Government will grant provincial autonomy.

These terms are considered largely a bluff. Yuan Shi Kai still controls a substantial army, but is unable to pay the soldiers, and, desiring to save the nation, he must accept the republican demands.

Steerage Neglected.

Washington, Dec. 9.—Penalties aggregating $70,960 were yesterday imposed by the Department of Commerce and Labor upon the British steamer Orteric, charged with what the Department characterized as the worst case of neglect of steerage passengers ever brought under the Passenger Act of 1882.

The penalized vessel was employed to carry Spanish and Portuguese immigrants through the Magellan Straits to Honolulu. Among the 1,262 passengers there were in the eight weeks of her voyage 56 deaths, 57 being children. The births numbered 14.

The investigation further revealed that the sexes were not properly segregated, and that inadequate ventilation increased the mortality. The general sanitary condition of the vessel, including the hospital quarters, was found to be almost beyond belief.

Schultz Was Spying.

Leipsic, Saxony, Dec. 9.—Reports which have leaked out regarding the progress of the espionage trial now taking place before the imperial court, in which the English shipbroker, Max Schultz, and four German associates, who were arrested at Hamburg on March 18, are accused of attempting to procure information regarding German naval secrets say that it has been established that Schultz is connected with the general organization of an English information bureau.

The activities of this institution cover all the shipyards and naval machine works in foreign countries, and aim at the discovery of every naval development.

Schultz, it is said, has been forced to admit the most incriminating charges.

The sentences will be fixed to-day. It is expected that Schultz and two German naval engineers, who are among his accomplices, will be punished severely.

Three Burned In Quebec.

Quebec, Dec. 9.—In a fire which destroyed a three-storey building on Champlain street shortly after eight o'clock yesterday morning three persons lost their lives and a fourth is likely to die.

The victims are: Mrs. Thomas Jones, aged 25 years, and her two sons, Charles, aged 5, and Alfred, aged 4, and still lingering between life and death is Mrs. Jones' two-months-old baby, who is badly burned about the face.

It seems that Mrs. Jones, after giving her husband his breakfast, and seeing him off to work, went back to bed and shortly after the fire occurred.

Local Option In Brockville.

Brockville, Dec. 9.—At the instigation of the Ministerial Association of Brockville, the Protestant clergy of the town met with lay representatives from each congregation to discuss the advisability of starting a local option campaign here next year. Some of the delegates questioned the prohibitive effects of a local option law. Ultimately it was decided on account of divergent opinions to appoint a committee of members of the Ministerial Association and laymen to report to a big meeting composed of church organizations and secular bodies in town.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED
—BY—
J. W. BROWETT
Optometrist
Q. Why is it that glasses are worn so much more now than years ago?
A. Years ago the science of optics or correcting errors of sight was not understood as it is to-day; only old persons or those near-sighted wore Glasses. Now we correct with lenses all errors of sight.
Q. Why is it that cheap glasses do not give satisfaction?
A. Cheap glasses are so faulty in construction and are of such poor quality that they distort the vision and cause pain in the eyes. The optical glass used by us is brilliant, clear and perfect, insuring comfort and ease to the wearer.
Q. Can my headaches be relieved with glasses?
A. A personal visit will be necessary. Let us talk it over.

Job For Major Herron.

Ottawa, Dec. 9.—Major John Herron, who went down to defeat as Conservative candidate in Macleod, Alta., is likely to get a place on the commission which is to investigate the needs of agriculture preparatory to the granting of federal help to the provinces. Andrew Broder of Dundas, who almost got the portfolio of agriculture, is sure to go on this commission.

"Maine" Really Blown Up.

Washington, D.C., Dec. 9.—The battleship Maine was blown up in Havana harbor by an explosion from the outside.

This is the gist of a short statement issued by the U. S. Navy Department yesterday, based on findings made by the joint army and navy board which spent several months in Havana harbor investigating the wreck.

Tobacco War Over.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 9.—It was announced here yesterday that the American Tobacco Co. had purchased from the Burley Tobacco Society, at sixteen and a half cents a pound, all the tobacco remaining in the 1909 pool, about eight million pounds. This closes out all the pool holdings, and marks the end of one of the most novel industrial wars ever waged.

Father Bressel Drowned.

Quebec, Dec. 9.—A despatch received in town yesterday from Bersimis brings news of the drowning of Rev. Father Bressel, who went through the ice at that point. No details are given.

QUALITY, SKILL & CARE,
THE LADDER BY WHICH WE CLIMB
To Those Requiring Glasses
Eight years is a short time in the life of man, but it is a period of sufficient length, in business, to carry with it a guarantee of honest effort and satisfaction.
For this number of years I have carried on an Optical business in this city and I have fitted thousands of people with glasses. The fact that I have been successful leads me to believe that my methods are right and for that reason, I wish to give you the additional assurance that there will be no change in them in the future. I am in a position to give you the best of everything that means eye comfort.
It is barely possible that you are in need of new lenses, frame or an eyeglass and I would ask that you give me the privilege of giving your eyes a scientific examination and of providing the glasses for you if you need them.
I exercise the greatest care in the examination and fitting of the glasses. I do not overlook the feature of making glasses which will add greatly to the personal appearance of those who wear them. In other words, every detail will have my most careful consideration.
I carry the largest up-to-date Optical Stock in Peterboro, and grind all my own lenses. You will incur no obligation by calling and consulting with me.

THE SECRET OF HOW TO BE HAPPY

"Oh, dear!" sighed Edna, as she pressed her tear-stained face against the pillow. "I just think everything is all wrong. I never can do what I want to! I wish I lived in a place where every one could do as they pleased!"

And all because her mamma had thought that it would not be best for her to go for a ride on her bicycle with some school friends.

"Well," said a voice near her, "I think I can gratify your wish."

Edna sat up in surprise. At first she saw no one at all, but at length she discovered, standing on the floor at the foot of the couch, the queerest looking figure, not more than six inches tall. He was dressed in a long robe of purple velvet, and wore a sort of crown that sparkled with all kinds of jewels. Edna thought that he looked like the pictures of the Brownies, but she did not say so. Instead, she stammered, "What wish?"

"Why, did you not just wish that you lived where you could do as you pleased? I am the king of the land Do-As-You-Please, and I am willing to take you there. Come."

Edna decided that she would go, and slid from the couch on to the floor. As she did so she was greatly astonished to see that she was not as tall as her companion.

When she came to herself again she was in a beautiful room of a wonderful palace surrounded by many tiny people like the one that had brought here there.

"And this is another earth child," said one of the midgets. "Why did you bring her here to this dreary place?"

"She came by her own wish," answered the king. "You know I never bring any but those who express a desire to come."

"Poor child!" said another. "She is young, and I hope her probation may be short."

* * * * * *

Of course, all of this astonished Edna very much, for she could not understand it. Looking from one of the surrounded by beautiful grounds, although they appeared neglected.

"May I go out and walk around awhile?" she asked eagerly.

They all looked at her in amazement.

"Do as you please," answered one of the midgets. "Have you forgotten so soon where you are?"

Edna hardly understood what was meant, but she took the words for permission and ran out into the fresh air. A little kitten that looked like the one she had at home rubbed against her, and she picked it up. She reached a stream, and shortly afterwards a couple of boys came along.

"Hi, there!" cried one. "See that cat? Now for some fun! Throw it into the water! Let's see if it can swim."

"You wicked, cruel boys! I shall go right to the king and tell him," and she ran sobbing towards the palace.

The king listened to her story. "I am very sorry," he said.

Edna gazed at him with wide-open eyes, but before she could voice her astonishment a servant entered the room, and the king asked if dinner was ready. Edna remembered then that she was very hungry.

"I will see, sir," the man answered. In a few moments he returned. "The cook is upstairs reading a book. She says she does not wish to get dinner to-day.

* * * * * *

Edna expected to see the king very angry, but he only sighed. "This is the third time this week we have had no dinner. Come, my child. We will see what we can find in the pantry."

Edna asked boldly for jam.

"My cook never makes such things," said the king in surprise. "It is too much trouble."

He managed, however, to find a plate of honey, and with that they had to be content.

When night came and Edna went to her room she found it in wild disorder. Not a thing had been touched to make it."

The next day Edna remembered that she had been invited to a party, but she did not see any nice new dress hanging on a chair ready for her to put on, as she had expected. The sewing lady said that she had attended a tea the afternoon before and had to neglect the dress.

Edna's eyes filled with tears. "Then I can not go at all," said she. "You might have finished my dress. Mamma would."

"No doubt, but you see this is the land of Do-As-You-Please and no one bothers about any person's pleasure but his own."

Edna looked at her, wonderment beginning to fill her heart.

"Do you mean," she asked slowly, "that mamma did not always do just as she pleased?"

"You poor little world child! Of course she did not. Do you think that she always wanted to sew for you children when her friends were perhaps having a nice time at some tea or party?" Do you think she always liked to be obliged to have a well-cooked meal right on time? Do you think she always enjoyed washing, ironing, sweeping, baking? Do you think it was always pleasant for your father to work all day when his friends, perchance, went hunting? You dear child! It is so fortunate for you that the king found you and brought you here."

But for some reason Edna was beginning to doubt it. She thought of the many things that her father and mother and brother did to please her, and somehow a big lump began to swell in her throat, and she burst out, "I don't think this is a nice place at all, and I don't want to do just as I please any more, and, oh! I want to go home!"

And then the strangest thing happened. The palace seemed to fade slowly before her eyes, and a voice said: "Wake up now, dear. Papa will soon be here," and she opened her eyes to find that she was on the couch at home and her mother was bending over her.

"Mamma, are you quite sure I was here all the time?"

"Quite sure, my child."

"Then," said Edna, with a sigh of relief, "it must have been a dream, and I am glad of it, but I am glad I dreamed it, too."

And then she told her mother all about it.

"I am glad," her mother answered when the story was finished, "that my little daughter has found out that no one can do as she pleases and be happy, but that our chief happiness consists in making happy those around us."

HER CELEBRATION

BY C. B. LEWIS

In his parish at Bay City the Rev. Hiram Burt had had the hearty co-operation of most of his flock in carrying out Thanksgiving festivals, Christmas trees and the like, for the benefit of the children and the poor. But he had not been located at Wellsville many weeks when he discovered that here was a wonderful lethargy about such matters. When he began to talk up Thanksgiving contributions for the poor, there was half-heartedness or total indifference, and as he thought of a Christmas tree bearing a hundred or more presents for the Sunday school children in order to incite new interest and ambition his heart grew heavy. He kept pounding away, however, and it was not until a few days before Thanksgiving that he realized he would have to give the idea up.

The minister was sitting in his study one day when Aunt Mary Fraser was announced. Aunt Mary was a little old woman sixty years old. She lived in a little old house and supported herself on an income of $2 per week sent her by a relative. She had belonged to the church for years. Now and then some good soul sent her a lot of groceries, a ton of coal or a new dress, but she did not consider herself an object of charity. On the contrary, she felt herself "almost as good as anybody," and she had come to call on the minister as other folks had called. He had noticed her and been told that she was good-hearted but rather eccentric.

Aunt Mary had made a ten minute call and was on the point of departing when Deacon Hope was announced. She thought of one more thing she wanted to say, and therefore slipped into the parlour, next to the study, to wait for the deacon to go. It was a full hour before he went, and she left five minutes ahead of him. There was a long and confidential conversation between the minister and the deacon, every word of which was overheard by the eavesdropper. The two men believed alike about church work and church interest in charity, and the deacon had been sent around to do some more "sounding."

Aunt Mary's wrinkled old face had a look of resolve on it as she left the minister's house, and she went straightway home and changed her dress and put a new edge on the butcher knife by drawing the blade across the stovepipe. Once upon a time she had kept chickens. That is, a flock of half a dozen had foraged for themselves during the day and came home to a poor old coop at night. One by one they had given up the ghost until only a poor old rooster was left to wonder how he was to pass the winter. Aunt Mary had had no thought of killing him for a feast. She had none when she was sharpening the knife. He was to be killed for another reason, and killed he was, and the body was hardly cold when she changed her dress again and took a walk of half a mile in the gathering darkness. Her errand was at the house of perhaps the richest man in the congregation. She had always looked upon the house as a palace, and upon its owner as something above this mortal clay, but she was not afraid to ring the bell and ask for the master. Her errand justified a display of nerve. Seated in the library she found the man she had come to see, and as he looked at her with wonder in his eyes she laid the dead body of that old rooster on his desk and said:

"That is for you. I'm awfully sorry I can't do more, but I am poor, you know. If you boil him for a day or tw I think he will be tender enough."

"W-what does this mean?" he demanded.

"It's a chicken for your Thanksgiving dinner."

"But I don't understand. Why do you bring it here?"

Women Must Stop Smoking

Special to The Examiner.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Dec. 8.—Because young women insist on making cigarette smoking a feature of their afternoon social gatherings a general war on tobacco, with Dr. Jay W. Seaver at its head, is to be started here. Dr. Seaver, who was for many years director of the Yale gymnasium, has been making some alarming discoveries, as a result of which he has determined to organize a branch of the Non-Smokers' Protective League in New Haven.

"Smoking is bad enough anyway," said Dr. Seaver to-day. "But when our young girls take it up it is time we did something to check the evil.

"I happen to know that the young girls of New Haven have taken up the habit. I know of one society in the girls' high school here which used to meet afternoons to plan good work and to discuss healthy things. Now they meet to smoke cigarettes. Everything else has been forgotten in their love of tobacco.

"There is a young woman's literary society here, too, the members of which used to meet for real literary purposes. Now they spend the afternoons smoking. Not only the impropriety of smoking but its dangers have been pointed out to them again and again, but they will not heed.

"The only thing to do is to enforce the laws. There are laws in this State regulating the use of tobacco, the same as there are laws regulating the use of liquor. The Non-Smokers' Protective League was organized to enforce these laws. There is certainly plenty of room for the work in New Haven, and I propose to take it up. A number of men and women who have discovered the same conditions that I mention will join me in the work. If we don't accomplish anything more than stopping young girls and women from smoking the work will be worth while."

Dr. Seaver added that cigarette and pipe smoking is also on the increase among the students of Yale, and that the league will fight this, too.

The Bank Of Montreal

The 94th annual general meeting of the Shareholders of the Bank of Montreal was held Monday at noon, in the Board Room, at the Bank's headquarters, Montreal.

Amongst those present were: Mr. R. B. Angus, Sir Edward Clouston, Bart., Sir William Macdonald, Sir Thomas G. Shaughnessy, Messrs. D. Morrice, H. V. Meredith, E. D. Greenshields, Hon. Robert Mackay, James Ross, W. Molson Macpherson, C. J. Fleet, K.C., Dr. H. B. Yates, G. F. C. Smith, Rev. G. H. Parker (Lennoxville), C. H. Cahan, K.C., Wm. H. Evans, Hugh Paton, G. Hooper, Henry Joseph, M. S. Foster, W. R. Miller, John Hamilton, Geo. Durnford, C. S. Garland, W. Blackader, William Stanway, Mr. Archibald, C. Meredith, Mr. Alexander, Bartlett McLennan, James Crathern, P. F. McCaffrey, John Bently, H. Meredith Smith, H. Dobell, J. B. Learmont, John Patterson, H. B. Scott, C. W. Buchanan, and James Skeoch

On motion of Mr. W. M. Macpherson, the President, Mr. R. B. Angus, was requested to take the chair.

It was then moved by Mr. C. J. Fleet, K.C., seconded by Dr. H. B. Yates, that Messrs. G. F. C. Smith and Bartlett H. McLennan be appointed to act as Scrutineers, and that Mr. James Aird be the Secretary of the meeting. This was carried unanimously.

The Annual Report.

Sir Edward Clouston, Bart., the General Manager of the Bank, was then called upon to read the annual report of the Directors to the Shareholders at their 94th annual general meeting held 4th December, 1911:

The Directors have pleasure in presenting the Report showing the result of the Bank's business for the year ended 31st October, 1911.

Balance of Profit and Loss Account, 31st October, 1910	$ 961,789.11
Profits for the year ended 31st October, 1911, after deducting charges of management and making full provision for all bad and doubtful debts	2,276,518.75
Premiums on New Stock	365,677.50
Adjustment Bank Premises Account	3,400,000.00
	$7,003,985.36
Dividend 2½ per cent. paid 1st March, 1911	$360,000.00
Dividend 2½ per cent. paid 1st June, 1911	360,000.00
Dividend 2½ per cent. paid 1st Sept., 1911	360,000.00
Dividend 2½ per cent. paid 1st Dec., 1911	360,000.00
	$1,440,000.00
Amount credited to Rest Acct.	3,000,000.00
Amt. expended on new Premises during year	708,800.00
	$5,148,800.00
Balance of Profit and Loss carried forward	$1,855,185.36

Since the last annual meeting branches have been opened at Grand Falls, Nfld., West Summerland, B. C., Suffield, Alta., Athalmer, B.C., Kamloops, B.C., and Port Haney, B.C.

At a special meeting of the shareholders, held on 5th September, 1911, an issue of $1,600,000 new capital stock was authorized, making the total paid-up capital of the bank $16,000,000, and at this date $1,013,000 of the new stock has been subscribed for.

It has been decided to increase the bank premises account to an amount which, while still thoroughly conservative, more closely approximates the value of our land and buildings as assets than did the former practice.

All the offices of the bank including the head office, have been inspected during the year.

(Signed) R. B. ANGUS, President.

Bank of Montreal, 4th December, 1911.

The President's Address.

The President, Mr. R. B. Angus, then moved the adoption of the report, seconded by the Vice-President, Sir Edward Clouston, Bart. The President said:

I beg to move the adoption of the report; and in doing so I have to call attention of the shareholders to two important changes in the annual statement.

The one that was authorized by you at the special meeting of 5th September and subsequently approved by the Treasury Board provided for an increase of the capital stock by $1,600,000—mainly with a view of extending to that amount the right to increase the issue of notes in circulation. This appeared to be urgently demanded, as the circulation of this bank had reached the legal limit, the amount of the paid-up capital; and as other banks were much in the same position, it was feared that a great scarcity of currency would soon be experienced.

Business of Bank.

The business of the bank has been fairly prosperous during the year, although the employment of spare funds, in call and short loans, has been less productive than usual, the prevailing rates having been extremely low in New York and London during the whole period. The ordinary deposits show a gratifying increase while those of a temporary character have, to some extent, fallen off as we have been unwilling to encourage them at a higher rate of interest.

The money markets of Great Britain and the Continent of Europe have taken freely of Canadian bonds and stocks, municipal, railway and industrial. There was a brief interval of dullness, but that condition seems to have passed, and well vouched for securities are again in good demand. There is ample room for the employment of foreign capital in this rapidly-developing country, and it becomes the more imperative that no issue having any taint or doubtful value should be submitted to the foreign investor.

During the year under review Canada has enjoyed a period of great prosperity in almost every department of trade and commerce and has undoubtedly added largely to her permanent and productive wealth; although this has been more marked in the prairie Provinces and British Columbia, Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime Provinces have not failed to participate.

I regret to announce the retirement of Sir Edward Clouston, Baronet, from the General Managership of the Bank. After 47 years of service, 20 of which have been passed in the Chief Executive Office, it is natural that he should seek some relief from the arduous duties of that position. I am happy to say, however, that his mature judgment and great experience will still be available to the administration, when required, in the less strenuous office of Vice-President.

He will be succeeded by Mr. H. V. Meredith, an able and well-qualified officer, who will surround himself with such capable assistants as are always to be found on the Staff of the Bank.

Sir Edward Clouston.

In seconding the adoption of the Report, Sir Edward Clouston said:

As the President has dealt with the general business of the country, I will confine the few remarks I make to the statement, a copy of which you have in your hands.

To meet the wishes of the Shareholders, expressed at several of our meetings, and to conform to the custom of the other Banks in Canada, we have shown the amount expended on new Bank Premises during the past year. We have also obtained valuations of all our lands and buildings, and I do not think we can be accused of overvaluation when we place the value in our statement at $4,000,000, somewhat less than the value of the land alone. In fact, to the amount of $9,000,000 should be added the cost of uncompleted buildings, making it $700,000 more. The increase of $3,400,000 over former statements has been employed partly to increase our rest to an amount equal to our Paid-up Capital, and the surplus has been carried to our Profit and Loss Account. Speaking as an individual, and in no way as a mouthpiece of the Board, I would not advocate increasing, in future, our Rest beyond the Paid-up Capital. I should always like to keep the Profit and Loss Account at its present amount, as a Reserve, to be used when the Directors might see fit to do so in the interests of the Bank, and any surplus profits, after full appropriations having been made, I would suggest distributing among the Shareholders.

Men Come and Go.

The President has mentioned that I have decided to retire from active Executive work. I have held the stage for a long time, for I find my service in the General Managers' position is more than double that of any predecessors. I have kept in mind, however, that while Corporations may go on forever, the men who manage them come and go, and with that in view I have always tried to arrange that the exit of any one man should not in any way interfere with the business of the Bank. In passing over the reins of office to my successor, I feel I am doing a good thing for the Band and its Shareholders. Mr. Meredith has spent all his active buiness life in the service of the Bank, is familiar with its policy, is trained in its traditions, and has been uniformly successful in his previous appointments. I have no doubt he will be equally successful in the high office to which he is called, and I am quite satisfied your property will be handled conservatively.

The ballot for the election of Directors was then proceeded with, and without much delay the Scrutineers appointed for that purpose reported the following gentlemen duly elected, the old Board being re-elected:

Messrs:—R. B. Angus, A. Baumgarten, Sir Edward Clouston, Bart., E. B. Greenshields, C. R. Hosmer, Sir William C. Macdonald, Hon Robert Mackay, H. V. Meredith, D. Morrice, James Ross, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, K.C.V.O., Rt. Hon. Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O.

Officers Elected.

At a meeting of the Directors held lately, the Right Honourable Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., was elected Honorary President of the Bank, Mr. R. B. Angus, President, and Sir Edward Clouston, Bart., Vice-President.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

The custom of making out a Christmas list of articles, that would be acceptable to one's self as Christmas gifts, came up for discussion the other day.

The custom was promptly stigmatized as cold blooded and generally undesirable.

Do you think it is?

Myself, I can't see it that way. If Christmas were a time when those whom the spirit moved, made gifts to those whom they most loved, a Christmas list of all one's wants would not be the proper thing.

But since we all knw that at Christmas time, certain persons are undoubtedly going to make us gifts of a certain monetary value, whether the spirit prompts or not, and that said persons are probably racking their brains as to what said gifts shall be, I can't see why a Christmas list isn't a very logical and kindly custom.

Indeed, I think the making of such a list is not only within the pales of good breeding, but even a positive duty.

Make your list long enough so that there will still be room for the element of surprise and uncertainty.

Try to think up plenty of needs which can be inexpensively filled.

Put the list in the hands of mother or someone else, who will be ready to show it to inquiring friends and relatives, and I think you will be doing a truly good deed.

In the first place, you will be helping some one to solve the nagging problem of what to give you.

In the second place you will be giving some one the opportunity of presenting youiwth something yo ureally want. Now, don't you take double pleasure in giving any one a gift which you know will fill a niche of need? Very well. Remember then that other people are likely to feel the same way.

Not only do I think that everyone ought to make out such a list, but I further believe that everyone ought to consult such lists, or, when they are a missing quantity, to inquire of the beneficiary's next friends what his wants are.

Perhaps I ought to feel ashamed, but I never can feel the same gratitude for a gift which was evidently selected at random, that I do for one which has plainly been chosen after consultation.

Last year I received among my Christmas gifts, a little rubber face cloth bag. I had two of these already and I sadly needed a soapbox. Both these facts my family knew, and would gladly have told the purchaser of that superfluous bag, if she had taken the trouble to ask. But she didn't. Am I frightfully ungrateful that I can't feel any warmth of gratitude for that totally superfluous article?

We are always saying that it is he thought, and not the monetary value, which makes a gift valuable.

Is it illogcal then to consder the gift less desirable when the thought is quite left out?

We can all of us imagine a finer, more spontaneous, less cut-and-dried Christmas celebration, in which Christmas lists and consultations of them would be superfluous.

But remember, we are dealing with Christmas as it is, not as it ought to be.

* * * * * * * * *

MOLLY, the little stenographer lady, had stopped in on the way from town to show us some of her Christmas purchases.

Said the authorman's wife after Molly had departed with her armful of bundles. "I should think that Molly would like to make some things instead of buying all her gifts. One always feels as if there were so much more love and personal thought in a gift anyone has taken the time and trouble to make."

"Why, you know perfectly well that Molly has to help so much at home, that she has very little time, and anyway, she doesn't like to use her eyes in the evening," retorted the lady-who-always-knows-somehow, warmly. "Besides, you people who are always talking about gifts that are made representing more love and thought than gifts that are bought, make me cross. How much time does it take you to make one of those little silk bags? Perhaps an afternoon if you sit right down to it. Well, then, you know Molly doesn't earn very much and if she pays fifty cents for a gift, that means nearly half a day's work for her. Of course, she is working through the medium of a typewriter, instead of directly on the gift, but I can't see that that makes it any less a labour of love."

I quote the lady-who-always-knows-somehow with glee because she has punctured a thesis, which has always made me indignant.

To say that because one works to earn the money to buy a gift, instead of working directly to make it, the gift represents any less love, thought, and effort has always seemed nonsense to me.

Is it really any less of an effort to sit down with a group of friends and laugh and chatter over some dainty and attractive bit of work, than to pound a typewriter, or stand behind a counter, or address envelopes for several weary hours at a stretch?

Myself, I can't see it that way.

* * * * * * * * *

A letter friend has a reminder for you.

"There is one thing you have not said a word about yet, and that is Christmas for our friends in the asylums. Not that they are forgotten, but they may not be remembered in a way beneficial to them. The best way is to visit such a friend, find out what his condition is, and what he would most appreciate, or what would do him the most good. And it is well to remember that what he used to like, he may no longer notice, especially if he is improving. The only way to find out is to visit him. The asylum folks have not time to ascertain such things, and report to friends or relatives. Much time, thought and money may be wasted in selecting things a patient may no longer care for, and it is most desirable to send him the thing that will brighten, if only for an instant, the existence he endures. He may no longer care for books and pictures, but for fruit, candy, nuts or something to eat, and it would be well to send a little box of such dainties, enough for a little lunch for one or two days, and place the balance of the money, that would be otherwise expended, to his credit to be used to get him fruit and other extras from day to day. One might cheer him by visiting him and at the same time see what he may need in the way of clothing to make him more comfortable."

The writer of this reminder evidently referred to people in the insane asylums, but here words could apply equally well to any inmate of any kind of home or asylum.

And if you do not number any such unfortunates among your friends, may I suggest that you adopt some?

Christmas is above all things, the festival of the home—with a small letter. Wherefore, it must be an especially cruel time to those whose lack of home it emphasizes.

Surely your own Christmas will be happier if you seek out some of these, and bring them what you can of good cheer.

Do not say you do not know where to find such people. In every town is an almshouse. In almost every town is an old folk's home and few indeed are the communities which have not besides these, some other asylum, hospital or home which presents all too fertile a field for such kindness.

Shoots Woman Kills Himself

Special to The Examiner

NEW YORK, DEC. 8.—Frenzied by jealousy because he believed the woman with whom he was in love received attentions from another, Andrew J. Maisch, forty-five years old, a tailor, living at No. 889 Greene avenue, Brooklyn, last night shot and perhaps fatally wounded Mrs. Anna Blank, twenty-five years, in her home at No. 609 Knickerbocker avenue. He then shot himself in the right temple and was found dead by a policeman.

Maisch, according to Mrs. Blank, who remained conscious in spite of a serious wound, went to her home and denounced her when he found a strange man there. He ordered the man from the apartments and then compelled Mrs. Blank to enter a small room. He made no threats, she said, but calmly pulled a revolver and fired. The bullet struck her in the right cheek and taking an upward course lodged in her head. She ran from the room and was met in the lower hallway by Captain Becker and Policeman Brown, of the Hamburg avenue station.

Captain Becker cared for the woman until an ambulance surgeon arrived. Brown ran upstairs and found Maisch in the dining room, dead on the floor. Mrs. Blank was taken to the Bushwick Hospital, where her condition late last night was said to be critical. She knew nothing about Maisch's family, she said, but had seen him frequently, although she had tried to discourage him from visiting her.

STOMACH DISTRESS IS ENDED FOREVER

No Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Gas or Indigestion in Five Minutes

Take your sour, out-of-order stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22-grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your former misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring, the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness or many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas, or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself in five minutes that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

THE FAMILY HEARTH

Christmas stands for love and for charity, for hope and for joy at the fruition of that long-made promise of the prophet of the coming of one who should bring peace and good will to earth; so the churches hold their services and the people congregate to join in singing or to listen to the rendition of carols, some of which have come down from the early ages of the Church. The children have their Christmas treats, and they are the very merriest of the merry in their participation in these annual school festivals.

* * *

There is one way to make a white Christmas even though there may be not a flake of snow in sight. Let the whiteness be in your heart. Put aside all thoughts of guile. Forget all the big or little bitterness you may be entertaining against some other person. Cast out all envy, all covetousness, all unkindness. Endeavor to harbor in your heart only such thoughts and feelings as the Nazarene knew when he dwelt by Galilee. Cultivate human brotherhood. Practice Christian charity. Look beyond and above your workaday horizon. Get out of yourself. Get into the heart of others.

* * *

Brotherly love was the one original concept of the man whose birthday we celebrate at the winter solstice. He discovered no new law of nature; he formulated no new principle of philosophy. He added nothing to science, nor did he reveal the least mystery of the unseen world. When in the bitterness of his cruel death he reproached the Almighty with deserting him, science, philosophy and theology stood exactly where they were on that starry midnight thirty-three years before, when heaven opened before the eyes of the wondering shepherds and shining angels proclaimed his birth. But one thing was not the same, and that thing was enough to make all difference between the ancient world and the modern. No Confucius with all his golden rule had ever dreamed of it. No Socrates had dragged it from the depths in the net of his dialectic. No stoic ponderings on the secret of the highest good had conceived it. Of all the crucified saviours of the world not one had revealed it. The shepherd of Galilee alone of all the human race perceived that men are brothers. In the solitudes of the Syrian desert with struggles which the imagination can only typify as fought soul against soul with the living principle of incarnate evil, he wrestled the truth from the secret archives of the Almighty. Despised and rejected by the men he loved, hungry and unfed and unvisited, he taught the truth by word and deed. Nailed to the cross, he proved it by his death.

At this season of the year, the Christian world reverently turns to the little town of Bethlehem and lovingly recalls the story of the Saviour's birth as set forth in the simple yet beautiful language of the gospel narrative. In spirit let us go over to Bethlehem and view the place where Christ the Lord was born.

Bethlehem is situated about six miles south of Jerusalem. Starting from Jerusalem by the Jaffa gate, the journey is over a rough and hilly country road amid scenes that awaken in the mind reverent memories and fill the soul with loving emotions. On the west is the Gihon valley, where Solomon was crowned and on the south-east is the valley of Hinnom, where nearby, in the field of Pophai, King David defeated the Philistines.

But a short distance from King David's well Bethlehem greets the eye. There on a high hill it stands, with its closely clustered houses of white stone, its massive walls and towers looming forth in the brightness of the morning sun.

SKIN TROUBLES GROW WORSE

Eczema, Psoriasis, and other skin troubles are caused by myriads of germs at work in the skin. Unless these germs are promptly destroyed they rapidly multiply, gnawing their way deep into the sensitive tissue. That is what causes that awful itch, and what seemed a mere rash may grow worse and develop into a loathsome and torturing skin disease with its years and years of misery.

Don't take any chances! Destroy the germs at the beginning of the trouble with that soothing and cleansing wash, the D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema.

We have had experience with many remedies for skin trouble, but have never—never seen such remarkable cures as those from D.D.D. Prescription. Instant relief from the very first application.

If you have skin trouble of any kind, we certainly advise you to drop in and investigate the merits of D.D.D. or why not drop a line to the D.D.D Laboratories, Dept. P. E., 49 Colborne St., Toronto.

Dying Will Not Name Assailant

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, DEC. 8.—With two bullet wounds in his breast close to his heart a man who said he was Julius Morell, a carpenter, of No. 351 East Sixty-seventh street, was removed to Bellevue Hospital early yesterday morning from Ninth street and Second avenue. He would tell the police nothing but that he was shot from behind and does not know his assailant. The location of the wounds conflicts with the man's statement. The police learned there was a ball at the Stuyvesant Casino, at No. 140 Second avenue, and that the shooting occurred during an attempt to break up the festivities. The ball was given by "The Boys of the Avenue." This affair is an annual one, and there is always a certainty of much entertainment.

What happened in the ball before the "entertainment" began the police have been unable to learn. Policeman Smith was on a fixed post at Eighth street and Second avenue at half-past two o'clock yesterday morning, when he heard two pistol shots in the direction of the dance hall. In Ninth street, a few feet away from the front of the hall, he found Policeman Farrell supporting a wounded man. A taxicab was impressed to take Morell to Bellevue.

Detective Ransberg identified Morell as a man who was shot through the arm in front of No. 42 Second avenue on September 26 last. At that time, the detective says, he gave the name of Thomas Donello. He refused to identify his assailant.

Coroner Hellenstein went to Bellevue Hospital, but could get no statement from Morell, although he was told his death was but a matter of hours.

4 MYSTERIOUS DEATHS IN THE ONE FAMILY

Special Wire to The Examiner.

UBLY, MICH., DEC. 8.—The little village of Ubly, Mich., with scarcely five hundred population, has a poison case which bids fair to take its place among the sensational mysteries of recent times. Four members of the family—John Wesley Sparling, the father, and three sons—have within a period of two years died under peculiar circumstances, and it has been shown by a recent examination that the last two deaths were caused from arsenic poisoning. The family physician, Dr. Robert A. McGregor, has been arrested charged with murder, and with him the nurse, Miss Marguerite Gibbs. The physician is now in jail at the county seat at Bad Axe, while the nurse is out on bail.

The Sparling farm is five miles south of this village.

Dr. McGregor, who is now in the county jail awaiting examination, has been the village physician for nearly ten years, having had the average practice, principally among the farmers. He was reared in London, Ont., and lived in a house owned by the Sparlings, and up to within a year was able to keep an automobile.

Miss Marguerite Gibbs, the nurse, is a farmers' daughter, whose home is about five miles from Port Huron, on the Canadian side. She was employed in her professional capacity as nurse in a London hospital and still has the confidence of a large circle of friends and bears a first class reputation.

John Wesley Sparling, the husband of Mrs. Carrie Boddie Sparling, and the father of the three sons who died under mysterious circumstances, was sent to a London, Ontario, hospital by Dr. McGregor, and he died a few hours after reaching there. This was in July, 1908.

ALL PATIENTS OF DR. MCGREGOR

Peter, the eldest son, also died at the same hospital as did his father, and, like his father, was seriously ill when the physician ordered his removal from Ubly for hospital treatment. He, too, breathed his last soon after reaching the hospital. Peter's death occurred in July, 1910, just two years after that of his father.

Albert was the third to die, his death occurring last May. The youngest son, Cyril, died last August. He was twenty years old. One son remains, Roy, aged twenty-one; also a married daughter, Mrs. Bert Herford. With Miss Gibbs, the nurse, the surviving members of the family have, for the last two months, been living at the farm homestead.

All four of the Sparlings who died were attended during their last illness by Dr. McGregor, and it was he who signed the certificate that death was from natural causes. At the recent investigation arsenic was found in the body of Cyril Sparling, but the doctor explained this by the statement that members of the family had a hereditary affliction for which they took medicine containing that drug. The affliction, Dr. McGregor explained, was never treated by him, and he said he had never prescribed any medicine containing arsenic for any of the family.

The body of Cyril was finally exhumed and the vital organs were taken to the State analysts at Ann Arbor. A quick report came back to Ubly that unmistakable traces of arsenic were found and that the boy had died of poison.

SCIENTIST STUDIES CASE

Professor Warthin, head of the pathological department of the State university, with a national reputation in his specialty, positively denied the statement made by Dr. McGregor that Cyril had an affliction which necessitated his taking arsenical medicine. The professor immediately notified the authorities here that had the boy been the victim of such an affliction the liver certainly would have revealed it, and that organ had no traces of it whatever.

The Bad Axe undertaker who had embalmed three of the four bodies was asked to produce a jar of the fluid. This he did, and it was found to be the standard make, manufactured by a well known firm and used by undertakers throughout the country. No mineral poison or arsenic was found.

The Coroner's inquest, held soon after the university authorities had reported on the case, resulted in the verdict that death was caused by arsenic poisoning. The jury did not, however, indicate how or by whom the poison might have been administered. This led the villagers to believe that the body of Albert, who died last May, should be exhumed for an examination. This was done and the vital organs were sent to the university experts, and in a short time the same report was made as in the case of Cyril—arsenic poisoning.

At the Coroner's inquest in Cyril's case Dr. McGregor wished to be represented by a lawyer. The Coroner, Dr. Morden, of Bad Axe, refused this request, and the inquest was held behind closed doors with nobody present but the Coroner himself, the Prosecuting Attorney, a stenographer and the six jurymen. Only one witness was present at a time. The witnesses were Mrs. Sparling, Dr. McGregor, Dr. Conboy, Miss Gibbs, the nurse; Roy Sparling, the remaining son, and the daughter, Mrs. Herford. Dr. Conboy had never treated any of the Sparling family, but had been consulted.

Dr. McGregor was on the stand nearly all day, as was Mrs. Sparling. Both Dr. Conboy and Dr. McGregor testified, it is said, that when the elder Sparling was dying, Dr. Conboy had been summoned as consultant. They suspected poison and had advised an inquest. Mrs. Sparling, however, swore that nothing of the kind had been said to her, as far as she could remember.

All four of the Sparlings who died had life insurance policies amounting to $1,000 and $2,000 each. Many questions were asked in regard to the insurance. Mrs. Sparling admitted that she had received about $4,000 on the lives of her husband and sons, and that Dr. McGregor had received about $1,000 for professional services. She admitted the fees were large, but she considered that a physician's bill should be paid, regardless of other bills. She neglected to say, however, why she should allow the bill to reach nearly $1,000 before being paid.

Again she admitted that she had enemies in Ubly—so many, in fact, that she had about decided to sell the farm and move to Port Huron, sixty miles south.

That there was a box of arsenic in the Sparling house was told to the jury during a recess by Miss Gibbs. She also told where other kinds of poison could be found in the Sparling house. The Coroner made a hurried trip to the house and the poison was found, but not in the place designated by Miss Gibbs. It was found behind a false top of a high cupboard in a box the size of a starch box and contained enough to kill one hundred families. It consisted of rat poison, arsenic and a bottle labelled strychnine.

An attorney, who may be one to conduct the defence of Dr. McGregor and Miss Gibbs, admitted a few weeks ago that the community was looking for arrests any day, and that he understood the authorities were then working for the confession of a certain person.

Members of the medical profession of Port Huron, Mich., have drawn up a petition expressing their belief in the innocence of Miss Gibbs.

REAL FIRE IS HANDY FOR FILM CONCERN

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y., DEC. 7.—A moving picture manufacturing company used at $25,000 fire in the heart of the business section at noon to-day as the setting for an exciting melodrama, introducing three soul stirring rescues amid flame and smoke.

A can of gasolene exploded in the rear of the tailor shop of H. Schned, at No. 8 Rose street, adjoining the gasolene tanks of Riker's garage. Schned's face and hands were scorched as he and the flames reached the street door at the same time. The entire contents of the shop, including garments of wealthy customers, and $1,200 in bills in the safe, which was open, were destroyed in less than five minutes. The fire wrecked a butcher shop and a laundry next door. In the Leopold Magnus Building, on the corner of Main street, adjoining the tailor shop and containing apartments and stores, $18,000 damage was done to the building, stock and furniture.

Almost as soon as the firemen arrived the motion picture troupe was on the scene with three cameras. The hero staggered from the hallway into the street in a cloud of black smoke, carrying in his arms a terrified little girl. He dashed back after fighting and shaking off several firemen and carried out a mother and two doll babies. The play was interrupted by four men carrying out Mr. Magnus, who is ninety years old.

The fire threatened the entire business block in Main street between Rose and Lawton streets, which, with the exception of the National City Bank, is of frame construction and old.

THOUSANDS TO DANCE IN IMAGINARY SNOW STORM

LONDON, DEC. 5.—Four thousand dancers in an artificial snowstorm is the remarkable spectacle promised at the Royal Albert Hall on Wednesday, December 20. "It will be the gayest night yet seen in London," said Mr. G. Sherwood Foster, who is a leading spirit in the arranging of the Three Arts Club's Christmas carnival.

The Three Arts Club has been founded to form a social centre for students of music, the drama and the fine arts and crafts. It has already a striking list of patrons, while its "working" members include such prominent persons as the Duchess of Marlborough and Lady Lowndes. Among thers who are to take part in the carnival are the Countess of Rective, Lady Maud Warrender, Lady Alexander, Lady Tree, Lady Walter Crane, Lady Frampton, Lady Clarke-Jervoise, Mrs. Landon Ronald, Mrs. Hall Walker, and a host of others well known in art, dramatic and musical circles.

But the storm dance will be a single incident in this annual festival of bohemian London.

"The whole hall," said Mr. Foster, "will be decorated with green upon a white ground, and the great organ will be hidden with snow laden trees. The scheme is ambitious, and nothing approaching it will have been seen in London before.

"A procession of dancers will be held during the evening, and at a moment when these have taken up a definite position in the arena Father Christmas, impersonated by one of the most prominent actors of the day, will make a state entry upon a sleigh drawn by fairies. He will then distribute souvenirs of the occasion among the ladies. These souvenirs are being designed by leading artistes and will be greatly prized by the possessors. Corelli Windeatt's Band of 120 performers will provide the music. It may seem incredible that a band of 120 should be necessary for a dance, but it will be in this case."

Gift Tools Divert The Natural Tendency Of Children

NEW YORK, DEC. 8.—That children heretofore have been largely diverted from their natural tendency to the pursuit of the manual arts by the quality of the tools palmed off on them by their parents in gift work boxes and toy tool chests is the belief of the men and women who have charge of the instruction of children in construction work at the Horace Mann School and the department of kindergarten education of Teachers' College. To rescue growing boys and girls from hopeless struggles with these impossible toy tools and keep them interested in working with tools is the object of one of the minor exhibits in the Christmas display in the educational museum of Teachers' College.

The heads of this branch of work in the two institutions are beginning a crusade to instruct parents in the necessity of providing their children with the sort of tools that really will work. As an initial effort in this direction they have placed on exhibition a doll's house, the furniture for which was made by Horace Mann children between four and five years of age. The children designed and made all the furniture, and the teachers declare that they could not possibly have done so if they had been provided with the sort of tools that parents usually present to their children.

"Children of four and five should have good hammers given to them," declare those in charge of the exhibition, "instead of the light weight, impossible hammers that generally come in their toy tool chests. It is no harder for a child of four or five to handle a well balanced hammer that will really drive nails than to try to pound with a light weight hammer which wouldn't drive a nail into anything. Grown persons couldn't possibly use such hammers, and they expect children to use a tool which wouldn't be possible for an adult. The hammer should be of the best steel, and to go with it there should be good seven-eighth inch nails with flat heads. A child of this age scorns tacks. He wants good sized nails.

"Then a child should have plenty of wood to use, not just a few little sticks of wood, as most children have, but a large amount, so that he will not feel worried about exhausting the supply."

Children also have been labouring under great disadvantages in the matter of scissors, according to the same authority. Few scissors that will cut are ever given to children, and they lose all interest in the work.

Unless under direction and when he has a vice to hold his board, it is asserted, a child should not use a saw until he is seven. Until that age the hands are not strong enough to hold a board while the sawing is done. But when a saw is given to a child it should be one that will really saw.

WHEN AILING ASK YOUR NEIGHBOURS

THAT'S HOW MANGUS JOHNSON GOT RELIEF FROM KIDNEY TROUBLES.

They told thim to use Dodd's Kidney Pills.—He did and his Backache and other sickness speedily vanished.

Lac La Nonne, Alta., Dec. 8.—(Special).—If you have Kidney trouble of any kind, from Backache to Bright's Disease, and don't know how to cure it, ask your neighbours. They'll tell you to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Such is the experience of Mangus Johnson, a well known farmer residing near here. In an interview Mr. Johnson says:

"For the year 1907 I had a pain in my back, due to a strain and hard work. I kept getting worse. In the fall of 1908 I was unable to do any hard work, and began to suffer a great deal. I did not know what to do, and told one of my neighbours. He handed me a Dodd's Almanac. After reading it I concluded to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after using five boxes I feel fine and able to do any kind of hard work. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured my Kidneys, and I cannot praise them too much."

You don't experiment when you use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They have cured the Kidney ills of thousands of people all over Canada. If you have Kidney Disease in any form they will cure you.

DIED IN A GIRL'S ARMS

Boy Crushed by Automobile and is Fatally Injured

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, DEC. 9.—Crushed beneath the wheels of an automobile in the presence of a hundred spectators in the East Drive, in Central Park, near 102nd street, Jacob Friedman, ten years old, of No. 117 East 103rd street, was killed at four o'clock yesterday afternoon. The automobile is owned by Willard P. Brown, Mayor and Police Commissioner of Pelham Manor, and at the time of the accident there were in the car beside Mayor Brown his son, Willard P. Brown, jr.; his daughter, Miss Mae, seventeen years old; a second son, James, and Robert Glober, a chauffeur.

Miss Brown was among the first to reach the dying boy's side, and she urged that the lad be taken to a hospital. She entered the car and cradled the injured boy's head upon her lap, the limp form being held by her brother James. Although Red Cross Hospital, at West 100th street and Central Park West, was reached in record time, the boy died as he was lifted out of the machine.

A few minutes earlier Policeman Schroff, of the Park station, had passed the place of the accident on his bicycle. He observed a crowd of boys playing in the field and now and then one of them would dash across the roadway, which was unusually crowded with vehicles. Then the Willard car appeared in the driveway bound for Pelham Manor. Willard P. Brown, jr., twenty years old, was at the wheel, the chauffeur having relinquished that post to the young man.

The car was going slowly four or five feet in the rear of another car, when several boys dashed into the line. One of these was young Friedman, who evidently believed he could break through the line safely. He darted in front of the Willard car before young Brown could divine his purpose or bring his car to a halt. The lad was caught by a front wheel, knocked down and the car, weighing more than a ton, passed across his body, crushing his legs and breaking his back.

Miss Brown screamed, and when the machine was halted, sprang to the ground and sobbingly clasped the unconscious lad in her arms. Mayor Brown picked up the boy, and with the aid of his daughter, deposited him in the car, his head and shoulders supported on a pillow in Miss Brown's lap. The hospital scarcely had been reached when the lad's life was spent.

Mayor Brown drove to the Park station, where his son surrendered himself into custody. Coroner Winterbottom was summoned, and on hearing Mayor Brown's story, paroled young Brown in the custody of his father.

The body of the boy later was identified at the Red Cross Morgue by the father, Jacob Friedman.

A Des Moines man had an attack of muscular rheumatism in his shoulder. A friend advised him to go to Hot Springs. That meant an expense of $150.00 or more. He sought for a quicker and cheaper way to cure it and found it in Chamberlain's Liniment. Three days after the first application of this liniment he was well For sale by all dealers.

THE SEPARATION

A Short Story

"Let me in, dear. I'll explain."

"I shall not let you in,' she cried. "You have deceived me"—her voice rose to an hysterical pitch—"you've insulted mamma. Go away, and don't come back till you have money of your own to fling away in drunken orgies."

The words struck Harry like the lash of a whip.

"Do you mean what you say?" he asked angrily.

"Certainly I do."

He paused a moment, then he said quite calmly, "Well, good-bye, then." But his wife made no reply.

Harry Linyard left the house. He did not return that day nor the next. Dolly became very uneasy. She was already sorry for the words she had uttered. A week passed and she became seriously alarmed. She and her mother went to Harry's chambers in Chancery Lane. His room was to Let. Inquiry at his banker's elicited the fact that he had drawn out every penny—his account did not exceed £50. Major Linyard, his father, had not seen or heard of him.

A month passed without tidings of the runaway. Mrs. Linyard became seriously ill. Three months' stay in the Riviera improved her health, but made her still more anxious for the return of her good-humoured, though thoughtless, husband.

Heartrending advertisements in the principal newspapers, investigation by Captain Lynx, the detective, carried on over a period of months, were of no avail.

It was quite 18 months after Dolly's cruel words had driven her husband from his home when the great bazaar of the season was held at Albert Hall. It was one of those usual smart affairs, when folks allow themselves to be robbed right and left in "charity's sweet name." The great hall was superbly decorated with flowers and the stalls for the sale of certain blooms were presided over by pretty women, who dressed to represent the flowers they sold.

Mrs. Linyard disposed of bluebells, and was herself dressed to represent this pretty flower. Her fair, perfectly chiseled features looked out from a bonnet shaped like a bluebell; her rich silk gown was similarly shaped. Indeed she was pronounced to be the most prettily dressed among dozens of fashionable women attired to represent favourite flowers.

The grass-widow sold her buttonholes at 10 shillings apiece; her bouquets fetched from two to five guineas. She was in the act of pinning one of these admiring buttonholes in the coat of an admiring purchaser on the third evening of the bazaar, when her eye was caught by the unkempt, unwashed figure of a man.

She wondered for a moment why they had ever allowed such a ragamuffin into the hall. At a matter of fact the authorities had resisted the man's invasion; but he had put down his half-crown and had declined to leave.

He was a regular scarecrow. His bowler hat was battered and greasy; his coat was torn and threadbre; his trousers were frayed at the bottoms; his boots worn at the heel. He had not been shaved for a week, and his face and hands were grimy.

He sauntered slowly along, heedless of the shuddering of fashionable dames or the pointed remarks of well-dressed men.

At the pretty grass widow's stall he stopped.

"How much for this?" he said, taking the bluebells into his grimy fingers.

"Ten shillings," said the living Bluebell. The pink had left her cheeks.

"I'll take it. Please fasten it in my coat."

Dolly's senses were reeling; but she noticed that, despite the scarecrow's clothes, he had the voice of a gentleman.

Mrs. Linyard fastened the buttonhole in the man's greasy coat. She tried to avoid looking into his face, but the impulse was too strong for her. A moment later a woman's shriek rang through the building. Dolly had fainted.

Immediately the flower stall was surrounded by eager questioners.

The disreputable looking man had been seen by the stall. A search was made for him. He had vanished.

Mrs. Dallas was at her daughter's side when she recovered.

"What is it, darling?" she anxiously inquired.

"Home, mamma; home at once," was her reply.

In her own home the grass-widow broke into a fit of passionate sobbing. Her mother let her have her cry out.

"Tell me, dear," asked Mrs. Dallas, "what was it that alarmed you? was it that scarecrow who——"

"That scarecrow was — was Harry!"

The following day advertisements again appeared in the agony columns of the newspapers. Yet though many callers and letters were received, no news was gained of the missing husband. Mrs. Linyard kept to her room. Her health gave way. She cried repeatedly for her husband and lover. At last Mrs. Dallas insisted that Dolly should go to the theatre. Dolly was too weak to resist. She dressed mechanically and walked to her carriage as if in a dream.

It was a few minutes to 8 o'clock and the Strand was thronged with vehicles. Mrs. Linyard's carriage was compelled to proceed at a walking pace; now and again it stopped. On one of these occasions it passed where the lamps of a publichouse threw a strong glare on the pavement. Suddenly, before her mother had the least idea of what she was going to do, she flung the door open and was out on the pavement.

And then the public was treated gratis to as dramatic a scene as ever was witnessed in the house of melodrama close at hand. A woman, in light attire with bare arms and neck, and diamonds in her hair, had flung herself into the arms of a dirty man on the pavement, and was sobbing as though her heart would break.

The dirty man lifted her up tenderly, half carried her to the carriage, shouted "Home!" to the coachman, and took his place beside her.

Mrs. Linyard was the first to speak when the carriage was well on its way.

"Oh, Harry," she cried, "forgive me those harsh words. I never meant them, really. I love you sincerely. And you, poor boy, have been living all these months in London poverty."

"Don't reproach yourself, my darling," answered Harry Linyard, for he it was. "It is the best thing that could have happened to me. It has made a new man of me. And I'm not poor now, Dolly. I've been mining in Western Australia. I could write a cheque for thousands.—Modern Society.

Nehemiah and His Enemies. Neh. vi.

Golden Text—The Lord is the strength of my life: of whom shall I be afraid? Ps. xxvii: 1.

(1) Verses 1-2—When God is blessing us with great success in our work how does that generally affect those who are doing the same kind of work?

(2) Which are the worst enemies and why, those who outwardly declare their hostility, or those who pretend to be friends and are secretly working for our injury?

(3) Why instead of being annoyed, did not Sanballat and his company admire and praise Nehemiah for his wonderful success?

(4) In a race it is fair for each to try to win; but what is the character of the one who puts out his foot and trips up his chief competitor?

(5) What would you say were the real motives of Sanballat, and his friends, in wanting to prevent the building of the wall of Jerusalem?

(6) When men have fallen into sin, or failed to do a needed work, how do they generally feel when others do that work?

(7) Verse 3—How would you characterize the answer of Nehemiah to the invitation to a conference with Sanballat?

(8) What may be expected of business or professional men who neglect their calling, and spend much time in playing ball or other pastimes?

(9) Verses 4-8—Why were they so anxious to have this outside conference with Nehemiah?

(10) If a false report gets circulated about a man who is doing a good work, how much if any notice should he take of it?

(11) What probably would have been the result if Nehemiah had gone to this conference in order to protect his good name?

(12) Why do people so often impugn the motives of those who are succeeding in doing a good work?

(13) How should we treat those who oppose us, or speak evil of us?

(14) What arguments did or could Sanballat use to justify the accusation which he said people were making against Nehemiah?

(15) Is slander of good people generally pure fabrication, or is it a perversion of actual facts, as in this case?

(16) Verse 9—There is a natural tendency for us to be more or less afraid of such devilish and persistent enemies as these; what therefore is our best method to keep up our courage and success?

(17) Verses 10-14—What would have happened if Nehemiah had been tempted to fear, and had shut himself up in the temple, as he was advised?

(18) In what class would you place the sin of moral cowardice?

(19) Which are the more vile and and-out sinners? (This is one of the questions that may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(20) How did Nehemiah discern why, bad men in a pious garb, or outthe hypocrisy of Shemaiah?

(21) Verses 15-18—How long did it take them to complete the wall?

(22) What qualities did Nehemiah display that are still essential for success?

$25,000 Necklace Has Disappeared

Special Wire to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, DEC. 8.—Mrs. H. B. Vaughan, wife of a wealthy New York leather merchant, residing at No. 45 Reynolds Terrace, Orange, yesterday lost a $25,000 pearl necklace on a Delaware, Lackawanna and Western passenger train between Orange and Hoboken. The necklace, which consisted of seventy-seven pearls, was given to Mrs. Vaughan by her husband eleven years ago. Failing to find the necklace on the train, the loss was reported to the Hoboken police.

"Two things are certain," Mr. Vaughan said to a Herald reporter last night. "Mrs. Vaughan was wearing the necklace when she went into the car in which she rode to Hoboken, and the string of pearls was lost before she reached Hoboken."

When she discovered that the necklace was missing Mrs. Vaughan reported the loss to the conductor of the train and a thorough search of the car was made. No trace could be found of the pearls, however, and when Mrs. Vaughan reached Hoboken she reported the matter to the police and detectives who were assigned to investigate the strange disappearance of the necklace again made a search of the car.

Mrs. Vaughan said that she left her home in Orange at twenty minutes to twelve o'clock, and it was eight minutes to twelve when the train left Orange. She said she was sure that she did not lose the necklace between her home and the Lackawanna Railroad station in Orange.

Pawnbrokers in New York, Hoboken and Newark have been notified to be on the lookout for the string of pearls. Mr. Vaughan last night announced that he had offered a reward of $200 for the return of the necklace. The police of Hoboken believe that the string of pearls was taken by someone who was aware of the fact that Mrs. Vaughan often wore the valuable necklace when coming to New York to the opera or to visit friends.

Mr. Vaughan owns one of the handsomest residences in Orange, and the family is prominent in society. Mr. Vaughan has offices at No. 45 Broadway, and Mrs. Vaughan had started from her home to come to New York to meet her husband, having planned to attend a theatre performance in the afternoon and the opera in the evening.

DROWNS IN OIL

Special Wire to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, DEC. 8.—Presumably overcome by naphtha fumes, Clarence A. Fuller, thirty-two years old, who lived at No. 5 Scott street, Richmond Hill, Queens, was found drowned yesterday in a large oil tank in the plant of the Kings County Oil Works, at Kingsland and Norman avenues, Greenpoint. The works are part of the system of the Standard Oil Company, that employed Fuller as an oil tester.

To make his tests Fuller had to climb a ladder to the top of the tank. Over each tank is a plank about a foot wide, protected on the sides with ropes. The supposition is that Fuller while on this plank was overcome and dropped into the tank, which contained thousands of barrels of oil, and was drowned.

Fuller was last seen at seven o'clock Friday night, and when he was missed it was thought he had gone home, and no search was made until noon, when his wife appeared and asked about him. An examination was made, and finally the body of Fuller was found floating in the tank.

SKELETON DISCOVERED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

YONKERS, N. Y., DEC. 8.—The headless skeleton of a man was found to-day about two hundred yards north of the Crestwood station on the Harlem division by Edward Sullivan, a New York Central section foreman. It was lying in a patch of weeds below the railroad right of way and the Bronx River. The head was ten feet distant, having apparently rolled down a slope toward the river. Patches of light coloured hair clung to the skull.

Near the frame was found a suit of clothes of good quality, bearing the label "Wilkie and Platt, Amsterdam, N. Y." In a coat pocket was a scrap of paper with a memorandum, part of which was deciphered as "Piano contest, Ideal Theatre, Amsterdam." The legs were encased in light underwear and the socks are silk. A pair of low cut tan shoes of good quality were found beside the body. A badly discoloured straw hat laid in the man's coat, which was neatly folded. Near the body was a half empty vial, bearing a Hegeman Company label and containing carbolic acid.

TOBACCO HABIT

Dr. McTaggart's tobacco remedy removes all desire for the weed in a few days. A vegetable medicine, and only requires touching the tongue with it occasionally. Price $2.00.

LIQUOR HABIT

Marvellous results from taking his remedy for the liquor habit. Safe and inexpensive home treatment; no hypodermic injections, no publicity; no loss of time from business, and a cure guaranteed.

Address or consult Dr. McTaggart, 7½ Yonge street, Toronto, Canada.

LIBRARY NOTES

The Librarian would like to draw the attention of the users of the Library to the following facts::

1. That if they wish to obtain the full benefit to be derived from the books it is absolutely essential that they should do as much as in them lies to prevent the volumes being mixed in a conglomerate mass on the shelves. The amount of labour that is expended in cataloguing the books is going to be rendered entirely nugatory in value if people persist in carrying books from one shelf to another or laying them down in a haphazard manner wherever the spirit prompts them to do so. It is earnestly hoped that this state of affairs will not continue. Patrons of the library have it in their power to remedy it, and until they do so they cannot expect to find the library in a state of proper efficiency.

2. Several users of the reading room seem to be ignorant of the fact that the newspapers and periodicals which are placed in the files are placed there for the purpose of preserving them and not as some seem to imagine, to provide them with an innocent form of diversion in striving to discover which is the best method of freeing them from their claspings. Anyone discovered, after this notice, attempting to tear the papers away from their fastenings will be severely dealt with.

The following new books have been just received, and will be placed on the shelves on Monday next:

GRANDMOTHERS USED SAGE TEA

To Darken the Hair and Restore Gray and Faded Hair to Its Natural Colour

It is easier to preserve the colour of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair and are fast following suit.

The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready-to-use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. As a scalp tonic and colour restorer this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers.

This remedy is sold under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

If your hair is losing colour or coming out, start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-day, and see what a change it will make in a few days' time.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

PROGRESS MADE IN RECENT YEARS IN COMBATTING TUBERCULOSIS

Some Exacts From an Address Before the Canadian Association for the Prevention of the Disease on "Municipal Sanatoria"--What Peterborough Citizens Can Do Locally.

In connection with the local campaign that has been inaugurated against tuberculosis, through the Peterborough Health Association, and for which an endeavour is being made to raise funds by the sale of Christmas calendars and stamps the following extracts from an address by Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, Chief Provincial Health Officer of Ontario, before the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, on "Municipal Sanatoria," will be read with interest:

SOME COMPARISONS

The number of cases is not so great as formerly and increased knowledge in respect to this disease—as to its cause, the methods of prevention and the care of advanced cases—has in the last three generations materially lessened its ravages.

In England in the year 1851 the death rate from the ravages of consumption was 247 per 100,000 of population. This has so far been reduced that fifty years later it was 136 per 100,000. In Germany during the period from 1877 to 1881 the death-rate was 357.7 per 100,000. From 1897 to 1901 it was 218.7, and in 1902 it had dropped to 190 per 100,000.

In the adjacent State of New York the rate for the year 1890 was 205 per 100,000, and for a period of twenty-five years previous to 1909 the percentage of all deaths was 11 per cent., in 1909 10 per cent., and last year 9.5 per cent.

Tuberculosis is still, however, a most formidable scourge. More people die from it than from any other disease. Each year sees it destroy 1,995,000 of the world's population.

In the United States the yearly deaths amount to 100,000. This means 3,000 a day, or two persons in every minute. In Canada it is estimated that 13,560 persons die from consumption each year. In this province 2,511 persons died from the disease in the year 1909, and 1 in every 13 deaths is chargeable thereto.

These are but a few of the ascertained facts in relation to the ravages of this disease. The former opinion respecting the heredity of the disease is now disproven. It is the unanimous opinion of physicians that the disease is communicable from the sick to the well, largely by means of the expectoration of the careless consumptive. Just as we are able to prevent the spread of other communicable diseases by isolation or segregation of the ones affected, so can the spread of this disease be controlled.

Professor Wilcox of Cornell University says: "A decreasing amount of tuberculosis appears in connection with an increase in the proportion of advanced cases segregated in hospitals or other institutions, and this almost regardless of any and all other factors. A stationary or increasing amount of tuberculosis appears in connection with a failure thus to segregate advanced cases in hospitals or other institutions, and this almost regardless of any and all other factors."

Dr. Arthur Newsholme, one of England's greatest statisticians, says:

"No influence except that of institutional segregation has appeared in actual experience in a constant relation to the amount of tuberculosis, and it must therefore be accepted as having been the predominant influence."

Countries like England, Germany, and the United States where the greatest advance has been made in sanatorium treatment show the greatest decline in the death-rate. Ireland on the other hand without, until very lately, facilities for the care of its large proportion of tuberculous cases has an increasing death-rate.

This leads us at once to the consideration of what is nowadays regarded as one of the least of the most important plans of treatment of this disease, viz., by means of the consumption sanatorium."

MOVEMENT GROWING

From statistics just published in the new Tuberculosis Directory of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, it is ascertained that over 600 cities and towns of the United States, besides about 100 in Canada, are engaged in the war against consumption, and that on April 1st there were nearly 1,500 different agencies at work in the crusade, an increase of nearly 700 per cent. in the last seven years. "The new directory lists 421 tuberculosis sanatoria, hospitals and day camps; 511 associations and committees for the prevention of tuberculosis; 342 special dispensaries; 68 open-air schools; 98 hospitals for the insane and penal institutions making an account of the anti-tuberculosis legislation in every State and in about 250 cities.

"The new directory, which is the third of its kind that has ever been published in this country, gives the most complete survey of the anti-tuberculosis movement that can be secured, and shows the remarkable growth of this campaign in the last seven years.

"The first directory in 1904 showed only 183 organizations and institutions in the entire United States. The second directory in 1908 reported 549 different agencies, as compared with 1,440 in the new book.

"Taking these figures as a basis, the anti tuberculosis movement has increased in force since 1904 nearly 700 per cent., and since 1908, over 105 per cent."

In Britain ten years ago there was but one consumption sanatorium. Now there are over sixty, and the cry is for more. What does this mean? It means that medical men, sanitary students, and the general public have learned the practical value of such institutions, and that, in addition, they have realized the truth of Von Leyden's words: "There is no specificity in the part of any particular climate in the cure of consumption, but I think it very essential that the majority of tuberculous patients be treated and cured in the climate in which they have afterwards to live and work."

To come home, I wish to repeat that in the province of Ontario there died of tuberculous disease in the year 1909 2,511 persons. The average age at which death occurred was, roughly speaking, 30 years. According to the period of expectancy of life worked out by insurance companies, there was in each instance a loss of life period about 33 years. The Labour Bureau of the Province tell me that the sum of $400 per annum is a low average earning power of adult individuals. At this low estimate, we are losing in earning power each year the sum of $100,000. Multiply this by 33 and we have the total of earning power of one year's deaths from this disease—the sum of $3,300,000. This surely is bad enough. We are justified in considering in addition the additional expense of, in many instances, years of incapacity, of medical care, of nursing all or nearly all of which may by proper care and treatment of such cases be prevented.

The Government of the Province of Ontario has provided for the establishment of Municipal Consumptive Sanatoria to the extent of $4,000 in each case. In addition, $3 per week per patient is allowed for maintenance, and municipalities are empowered to add $3.50 per week.

Under this plan four municipalities have already availed themselves of the provisions of the Act respecting consumption sanatoria. There are at the present time twelve sanatoria in the Province and five dispensaries.

While it is not the intention of the local organization, at the present time, to urge the establishment of a sanatorium, a campaign will be waged along educative lines, disseminating literature relative to a greater knowledge of this disease, its care and treatment, its prevention, and setting forth what can be done towards its cure and the arresting of its progress. When sufficient funds have been acquired, a district nurse will be engaged, and the people of Peterborough are asked to give their earnest co-operation in this worthy movement. You can help by buying the Christmas calendars and stamps during the holiday season.

DON'T HUG A DELUSION

Something "Just As Good" an Impossibility—If Not the Original Have Nothing At All

For a woman to adorn her head with false braids, puffs and rats, or a man to wear a toupee, is like buying an off-brand hair preparation instead of Newbro's Herpicide. The "false hair" and the "off brand" are both substitutes for the real thing. The original is always conceded to be better than any imitation or substitute. "Something just as good" is a heresy of the rankest kind.

Newbro's Herpicide is the original remedy and does as promised. Years of success and thousands of satisfied users have made it standard. Herpicide kills the dandruff germ, keeps the scalp clean and stops falling hair. Its proper use before baldness appears makes false hair and wigs unnecessary.

There is no uncertainty. The purchaser gets positive results or money is refunded. It is sold and guaranteed by all druggists.

Applications may be obtained at good barber shops and hair dressing parlours.

FIFTEEN TURKEYS

Special to The Examiner.

BURTON, KAN., DEC. 8.—This is what it will take for the Christmas dinner at the home of John Rodenbaugh:

Fifteen turkeys.
Sixty pounds of oyster dressing.
Sixty pounds of cranberries.
Thirty-two pecks of sweet potatoes.
Forty bunches of celery.
Eight bushels of Irish potatoes.
Fifty quarts of gravy.
Forty pounds of salad.
Thirty mince pies.
Thirty pumpkin pies.

For there are 119 members of this family, when they are all together. Mr. Rodenbaugh, who is now seventy-five years old and far from being a patriarch, has nine living children, five sons and four daughters; fifty-six grandchildren and twenty-eight great-grandchildren, making ninety-three in all, and as many of these are married, counting the sons-in-law and daughters-in-law, there are 119 of them to sit around the family dinner table.

GREETING CARDS

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS:

In memory of the child divine,
To thee I send this thought,
So may the season's joys be thine,
Thy days with blessings fraught.

RECORD CHRISTMAS RUSH EXPECTED BY RAILWAYS

Special to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, Dec. 8. — With Christmas Day falling on a Monday this year, giving a straight three-day holiday, the passenger heads of the big railroad companies, with headquarters here, are perfecting plans to handle a larger volume of holiday passenger traffic than they have ever taken care of before.

While, however, the local passenger business for the two days preceding Christmas and New Year's Day is generally well below the 50,000 mark, railroad officials declare that they are having the busiest time of their lives handling the enormous crowds of settlers who, having helped garner the golden harvest, are crossing the Atlantic to spend Christmas in their homes in Europe.

"Bigger crops, shortage of labour, bigger pay, consequently a bigger number of people going home this year," was the way in which Mr. Miller, special agent of the C.P.R. put matters, adding that last week the company had taken 3,000 Canadians to Halifax, that there were 3,500 going this week, and that another 4,000 or 4,500 would not be far short of the number sent east through Montreal next week up to Friday, when the last Christmas Empress sailed from Halifax

Many Going to United States

Besides this, Mr. Miller pointed out that the C.P.R. would take care of some 7,000 or 8,000 Canadians who would spend the holiday in New York and other American cities, while the exodus from Montreal to local points during the three days ending the week before Christmas would easily approximate from 10,000 to 20,000 people.

Mr. Gardner, assistant general passenger agent of the Grand Trunk said that his company was preparing to handle from 6,000 to 7,000 people a day for local points on Wednesday, 21st, Thursday, 22nd, and Friday, 23rd, while the numbers being brought from the west and sent east from here over the Intercolonial would in all probability touch the 15,000 mark. Ten thousand Canadians, Mr. Gardner estimated, would travel into the United States for Christmas via the Grand Trunk.

The Canadian Northern Railway Company will also have its fair share of the holiday traffic, and while, as in the past, there may not be any extraordinary number of special trains put on local services, every regular train leaving either the Windsor Street or the Bonaventure stations will be sent out, loaded to capacity, and in two or three sections.

BOY SLAYER HAS NO SORROW FOR DEED

LAWRENCE, KAN., DEC. 9.—Albert Merk, fifteen-year-old slayer of Night Marshal Guinard, of Maplewood, St. Louis County, told in the county jail here, in cynical, indifferent fashion, his story of life as a member of a St. Louis neighbourhood "gang," of how he killed the officer and of his zigzag flight, via Texas, and Chicago, to this place.

He says he did not know, until he was told by the man who arrested him, that Guinard had died November 8, from the wound he inflicted 9 days before. But when he was asked if he regretted his act, his reply was: "Sorry? Me? What's the use? It's done.

"I'm sorry to being blamed for things," the boy went on. "Everything that went wrong around the neighbourhood people used to say: 'It's that Albert Merk again.' They had me arrested, too, for playing hookey, and making trouble for the neighbours, but every time I got away all right.

"My father's dead. My two sisters work in a laundry, my brother works in a brickyard, and I stayed at home with my mother when I wasn't in school.

"But I had some fun, if I did have to work. There are a hundred gangs in St. Louis, I guess. The Tower Grove gang was the one I was in. We used to steal things, just for the fun of stealing them and getting away. Not big things, but candy, fruit, and things in front of stores.

"If I was rich, like Rockefeller, I could get out of this all right. But no chance now."

Well Equipped Office Of The Peterboro' Typewriting Agency

Possibly one of the most unique, up-to-date, and well-appointed stores in Peterborough is the one conducted by Mr. W. F. Nelson, and known as the Peterborough Typewriter Agency. Here you can purchase at a price consistent with quality, all the necessary requisites for the office. A showcase, specially adopted for the display of typewriters alone, is one of the features of this well-equipped establishment. Mr. Nelson is making a special display of typewriters of all makes, and also gramaphones, the latter bearing Columbia and Victor trademarks. A gramaphone show room is situated at the rear of the main store, and is a marvel of completeness.

A stenographer's office and telephone cabinet is also an innovation which has received due attention, together with the necessary facilities for doing high-class work.

Mr. Nelson is also making a Christmas specialty of fine lace work embodying all the latest designs of doilies and centrepieces, which are a dream of loveliness.

This establishment is open every evening, and a cordial invitation is extended to all to come and inspect this splendid array of high-class goods.

THE ANNUAL POULTRY SHOW WILL BE A RECORD BREAKER

Judging from the enthusiasm at Thursday night's meeting the annual Poultry Show to be held on January 9, 10, and 11, will be the largest and best ever held, since the association was organized. Chief Howard of the Fire Department, was present, and offered his assistance in any way that he might help the show. The Secretary is receiving enquiries from all over Ontario for the prize list, which is just ready for distribution. All members are requested to renew their membership for the coming year. — Joseph Kelly, Sec.-Treasurer 264 King street.

JASPER PARK

Pleasure seekers and tourists are impatient for the opening of travel to Jasper Park, B.C. During the past summer a number of parties travelled to the end of steel and then trailed away into this newly discovered wonderland of the West. They all spoke in enthusiastic terms of the grandeur of the scenery along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Mr. Frank B. Kirkbride, of 55 Wall Street, New York, has just written to the Grand Trunk, telling of a trip he had taken in the Athabasca country last fall. Mr. Kirkbride says in part:

"The party met the outfit at mile 62 (Hinton), and from there rode to mile 110, stopping two nights on the way. The horses swam the Athabasca at mile 110, and the journey across Shovel Pass to Lake Maligne was made over the excellent trail, which had been built by the Otto Brothers for the Park authorities in the Spring.

"From the time of leaving Hinton, the scenery grew steadily more interesting and beautiful. Maligne Lake was the climax of the trip. It is unique in the succession of constantly changing views—snow peaks, glaciers, and wooded foreground — which opens up as one rounds one promontory after another through the length of its eighteen miles. The party spent ten days camping at three different points on the lake, exploring valleys and climbing mountain ridges, each of which disclosed new beauties.

"On our return we took the train at the end of steel, then mile 99. We are glad of this opportunity to express our appreciation of the thoughtfulness and courtesy of all the Grand Trunk Pacific officials on the construction trains.

"The trip was undertaken on the recommendation of the Otto Brothers who had previously guided some members of the party in the region near Field, B.C. Their enthusiastic reports of the new country to which they had moved were more than justified. The party consisted of Miss E. B. Kirkbride and Miss M. B. Kirkbride, of Philadelphia, Miss Marion R. Taber, Miss Josephine Taber, Miss Elsie Powell, Mr. Alfred Killmer, Mr. Edward Ingraham, and myself, all of New York.

"This was the first 'tourist party' to visit Maligne Lake, the Pearl of the West".

CANADIAN RAILWAYS

Although Canadian Railways operate through a new country and for the most part thinly settled territory they have been able to improve their lines and the service to such an extent that they are now attracting the attention of travelers all over the Continent. A gentleman, who recently travelled through Canada using both the Grand Trunk and the Grand Trunk Pacific, has written to one of the Railway Officials, as follows:

"It occurred to me that the exceptionally good and efficient service that I had, was worth calling your attention to, especially in the splendid dining and sleeping cars that you run. I have had occasion to travel on many of the largest and important Trunk lines in America, and can say without equivocation, that I have never seen better run, or more excellent dining cars."

CONGRATULATIONS

On receipt of the news of the completion of the laying of steel on the Grand Trunk Pacific Ry. across the "Great Divide" between Alberta and British Columbia last week, the Hon. Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, sent the following telegram to Mr. E. J. Chamberlain, Vice-President and General Manager of the road at Winnipeg:

"I received your telegram of 20th, on my return yesterday. My best congratulations on accomplishment of laying main line steel across Great Divide, uniting Provinces of British Columbia and Alberta with the band that will soon span the Continent and give another great artery of transportation that will add volume to Canada's carrying trade, assist wonderfully in developing the richest northern country of this Province and unite us still closer to our sister Provinces of Dominion."

A PROFITABLE AGENCY FOR PETERBOROUGH

Someone Will Make Money with the Tudhope Cars in 1912.

That the sale of motor cars is on the increase and that this increase is only to be measured by the amount of energy put into the business and the worthiness of the line represented, is readily conceded by those who have made a close study of the industry.

The announcement that the agency of the well known Tudhope-of-Orillia line of motor cars is open for Peterborough is the subject of much interest in local motor circles. These cars have made an enviable record for staunchness of construction, and for their unique and effective motor plant. Not only this, but the Tudhopes being a Canadian firm making their cars in Canada and selling them to Canadians, feel a special responsibility to every purchaser, that means unstinted protection for that owner.

The Tudhope agency is not likely to be long open and it is certain that a prosperous local business can be built up with this well advertised and favourably known line.

APPOINTMENT ANNOUNCED

A circular has just been issued by the General Freight Department announcing the appointment of Mr. Jas. Edward to the position of Commercial Agent at Moncton, N.B. Mr. Edward has been associated with the Grand Trunk as far back as September 1st, 1883, when he joined the Company as telegraph operator at Omemee Junction, Ont., served in that capacity at this and other points on the system until 1895, when he was appointed agent at Lakefield, Ont. He occupied the position of agent at a number of other stations until 1892, when he was appointed Agen of the Great Eastern Freight Line, and contracting Freight Agent for the Grand Trunk Railway System with headquarters at Montreal. In 1903, he was appointed Travelling Freight Agent at Montreal, and was transferred to Moncton in 1904.

SPECIAL TR'

Arrangements have been made by the Grand Trunk Railway System to operate a special train from Edmonton, Saskatoon and Winnipeg, via St. Paul and Chicago to Portland, Me., in connection with the White Star Dominion Line S. S. "Teutonic" sailing from Portland, Me., December 14th. The train will consist of high grade up-to-date electric lighted fourteen section tourist sleeping cars —coaches of largest capacity and latest standard dining cars, etc.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway has been recognized for some time past as setting a new standard for railway operation in the West, and this latest movement in providing passengers with electric-lighted tourist sleeping cars will undoubtedly be highly appreciated by the large number who are returning from Western Canada to spend the approaching holidays with their friends in the British Isles, etc.

R. R. HALL made Good at OTTAWA
Now See Him MAKE GOOD at Toronto.

The Muddled School System

The way the Whitney Government splits the educational appropriation between Toronto University and the Public Schools makes education a 150 to 1 shot against the poor man's son or daughter.

If the public schools had an evener break we could afford Medical Inspection, Night Schools and other modern advantages and get the full value out of our costly educational plant.

Abolishing Model Schools has made a teacher's education an expensive luxury. It has unmanned our country schools and has drained off our best teachers to the cities and to the Canadian Northwest. Ontario is educating teachers for export.

Three hundred Bilingual Schools, as they are now conducted in this Province, are depriving French children of that thorough elementary education and practical working knowledge of the English language which is every Ontario child's birthright.

Vote for R. R. Hall and ab intelligent educational policy.

The Workingman's Friend.

A Workman's Compensation Act with the expenses cut out and a Factory Inspection Act that inspects and enforces, make together a complete system of Workingman's rights.

The Workman's Compensation Act should pay cash on the nail, without discounts, holdbacks or rake-offs.

It should involve no law suits or court costs in which the poor man's wrongs are matched against the rich man's purse.

It should be as good as a sight draft on the insurance company.

The Factory Inspection Act should live up to its name Employers must be taught to be as careful of human life as they are of buildings and machinery.

R. R. Hall stands for these reforms. A vote for him is a vote to give Allan Studholme and the cause of labour an enterprising lawyer-friend in the Legislature.

A Dangerous Majority.

Sir James Whitney's brute force majority of 70 in a House of 104 is too much for any human being.

It has led to tyranny in the Cabinet, the Legislature and the Country.

It has led to extravagance. Expenditure has increased ten times as fast as population in Ontario and on top of that a debt, direct and indirect, of $13,000,000 has been piled up.

It has led to mismanagement, waste, perhaps graft and in the case of the Hamilton Asylum fire to criminal carelessness which cost several patients their lives.

It has led to slack or partial justice in the Kinrade case, the Orangeville case, the Beattie Nesbitt case and many others.

The Whitney weight of numbers has thwarted all efforts to check these things up.

A vote for R. R. Hall is a vote toward putting a brisk cross-examiner on the job.

That "Checkerboard" Argument.

Sir James Whitney says that tax reform is "too absurd for comment." That is the ageing man's attitude towards beneficial changes. He would rather be undisturbed than be right.

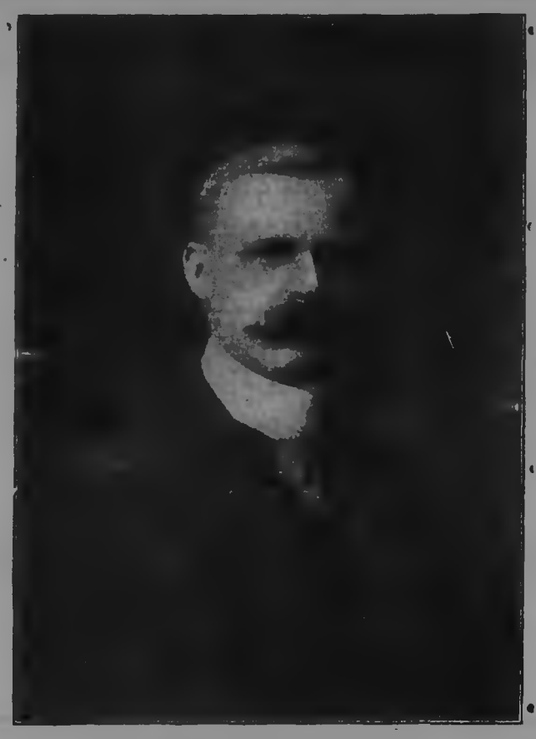
Many people, including Sir James Whitney's own friends, and newspapers, hold that the Ontario Assessment Act is an antiquated and elaborate scheme of injustice which gives the land monopolizer all the best of it.

Sir James himself admits that it is "quite unfair," but refuses to alter it because it would lead to a "checkerboard" system of taxation.

Meanwhile, every farmer who puts up a new cowshed or every workingman who puts a new coat of paint on his house suffers for his enterprise by a raise in taxes.

R. R. Hall believes in local option in taxes. He believes that a municipality should, if it likes, be allowed to exempt improvements from taxation.

Vote for R. R. Hall and some quick moves on Sir James' checkerboard.



R. R. HALL. The Man of Ideas.

The Farmer Has Rights

A Demonstration farm, with an expert demonstrator, located in West Peterboro, would bring the best methods of the agricultural colleges and the approved results of the Government experimental farms to farmer's very door. Farm products would double and the cost of living would be cut down in the towns.

Provincial aid to Radial railways would bring country and town closer together, cheapen the farmer's haul to market, save time and render farm life more attractive and profitable.

Instead of giving away one-seventh of the 15,000,000 acre New Ontario clay belt to a railway corporation, a vigorous immigration policy would fill it with settlers from Old Ontario and prevent the drift of Ontario's sons to other provinces and countries.

Vote for H. H. Hall whose policy solves the two problems---how to keep the Ontario boy on the Ontario farm and how to provide a farm to keep him on.

When the Workingman Votes for R. R. HALL he votes for himself. He votes to get his own rights and to save the Law-costs of redressing his Wrongs.

SPLENDID SERVICE

A prominent member of one of the large wholesale dry goods houses of Montreal, who has just returned from a trip to the Pacific Coast, including Vancouver, and San Francisco, writes the Grand Trunk as follows:

"On our trip to the Pacific Coast and return we travelled over ten different railways, making use of the dining car service on each, and would like you to know that we did not find in any case that the service on the dining cars of other lines was superior to the Grand Trunk Railway, and in many cases it was very much inferior. I take this opportunity of informing you as to what we think of the service you are giving on our great Canadian Railway".

Big Hall Rally in Committee Rooms To-night. Important Questions Discussed

SPLENDID PERFORMANCE OF "THE GEISHA" IS RECALLED

Hon. Secretary of Earl Grey Competition Refers to Different Contests Held.

AN INTERESTING BOOK

The Hon. Secretary of the Permanent committee of the Earl Grey Musical and Dramatic Trophy Competition, F. C. T. O'Hara, Esq., of Ottawa, has issued a charming book of nearly two hundred pages, giving particulars of the whole of the five competitions held since 1907, commencing with Ottawa and concluding with last spring's contest at Winnipeg. As only a few copies have been issued and those only to companies who competed, a few particulars gathered from its pages may be of interest to very many lovers of music and the drama, as well as to the thousands of amateurs who took part in the actual competitions, for it is surprising to learn that over sixty-three organizations actually competed. Of the judges, it may be said that seven were from New York and Boston, and six were Canadians, all eminently qualified to undertake the difficult duty asked of them. Of the first year's judges, Langdon Mitchell, Esq., Mrs. Kate Douglas, (New York) Dramatic Section, and G. W. Chadwick, Esq., (Boston) Musical section, it must be said that they set a very high standard, which has formed the basis of judging in the other contests. Part of their first report, in part, says, "The competition should have an excellent effect on the professional stage, as the professional stage is necessarily recruited from amateur ranks. In still another way the competition should have an excellent effect, and that is in regard to spoken English. In England to-day, there is one standard of spoken English, but in North America, Canada as well as the States, one can hardly say that there is a standard of any sort. This is a source of continual trouble in the States, trouble that is, to the stage manager, if he has correct English at heart. No two men have the same sort of pronunciation, or enunciation. The result is lamentable. It would certainly seem that the present competition renewed year after year, should tend to correct this deficiency of a standard English, especially so, if the future judges shall be severe upon every sort of vulgarity, and upon everything that is slipshod." Their detailed reports, which follow on the plays they judged, show that the competition was a very real one, and only well trained companies should compete with any hope of success. The musical judge found that to judge the performances of choral and orchestral societies was a task of no little difficulty, an opinion that all the musical judges have felt. That the orchestral work has had the verdict in its favour, is shown by the fact that in four out of five contests, an orchestra has won the musical trophy, the Ottawa orchestra, no less than three out of the four. Last year, for the first time, an operatic company from Peterborough entered the contest, still further complicating matters, so much so, that in last year's report, the musical judge, Howard Brockway, Esq., of Auburn, N.Y., reports as follows: "We would suggest for the consideration of future committees, the question of whether comic opera, like the first act of the "Geisha" in the present competition should not be jointly considered by the musical and dramatical judges. Involving, as such entries do, both acting and singing, it might be well if the dramatic judges were at least permitted to take into consideration any operatic event in making awards of the special prizes for acting."

In the competition held at Winnipeg, the above suggestion was carried out, and for the first time in the history of the competition the orchestral work took second place, the Winnipeg Amateur Operatic Company winning the musical trophy by a fine performance, of the "Chimes of Normandy." What might have happened, had the new system of accepting an opera as a theatrical offering been in force last year is a matter of conjecture, but the judge who suggested the change, reported of the Peterborough Operatic Company as follows; (page 144): "The performance of an act of 'The Geisha' by this organization on Tuesday evening, April 5th, calls for an enthusiastic commendation. To organize from amateur ranks in a town of the size of Peterborough, a company which could give so creditable a performance, is an achievement which arouses admiration and sincere praise. The performance brought forward one singer of most remarkable quality, possessed of an exquisite voice, most admirably trained; a fine musical sense ,and true historic ability I refer to Miss Lavina Hallihan who sang the part of "O Mimosa San." The general spirit of the performance and the singing of the chorus in particular, impressed me as remarkable, and in the highest degree praiseworthy.

"I am moved to suggest to His Excellency that, if it is practicable, the organization should in some public way receive honourable mention.

It is a matter of history how His Excellency honoured the "Geisha" company by attending their gala performance given in his honour three

THOUSAND ELECTORS

Said to Have Been Deliberately Disfranchised by the Government to Ensure Election of Conservative Candidate

A SERIOUS CHARGE

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, DEC. 8.—The legality of the election which is to be held in East Algoma on Monday may be questioned in the courts if the Conservative candidate should be elected—and the Government has made every possible arrangement to ensure his election. If the legality of the election is attacked in the courts it will be on the ground that over a thousand electors in East Algoma have been disfranchised.

It is charged that the bold and honest Whitney government has been much more bold than honest in the matter of handling bush polls in East Algoma. When a deputation from Cobalt interviewed the Premier about the disfranchisement of five thousand electors in the mining country, Sir James replied that these were disfranchised because of the neglect of local municipal authorities who, he said, should have prepared the necessary lists. But the same disfranchisement exists in the unorganized districts of East Algoma, where the duty of preparing lists is a direct responsibility of Government. It is charged that bush polls have been provided on the most arbitrary method at such points only as affects the party inoffice. The camps north of Blind River, which formerly gave strong Liberal majorities, are said to be ignored and entirely disfranchised in this election, while similar camps elsewhere under the political guardianship of Tory workers are organized into bush polls.

The whole matter may be made the subject of a searching inquiry in the courts.

When Mr. Alexander McIntyre declined the Liberal nomination for Sault Ste. Marie he gave as one of his reasons the fact that the Government had caused its workers to prepare the voters' lists for the unorganized districts without affording the Liberals any opportunity whatever to look after their interests. The Sault Express charged that the work had been done secretly by Tory agents, who were supposed to be away moose hunting, when they were, in fact, quietly preparing the lists.

These bold measures to force a verdict favourable to the Government from ridings in New Ontario are causing much indignation throughout that part of the Province.

SWEET ORANGES

This year it is difficult to obtain sweet oranges, as a great many growers rush them on the market in the green state. Shipment after shipment was inspected before a good colour and sweet fruit was obtained by E .F. Mason, grocer, which is selling at 30c., 35c., 40c. and 50c. per doz. 2d-134.

TALKING OF INVESTIGATIONS

An investigation that would show Mr. R. R. Hall how he could get back the $35,000.00 he sunk in the Canadian Cordage Company would please him as much as it would any other good loser.

Mr. Hall's belief in this industry was such that he put $20,000 in it from time to time and $15,000 more after all the other shareholders had theirs in.

The Cordage Company gave employment for ten years to two hundred working men and a living to their families. The City of Peterborough is ahead the buildings and property and also a new industry in the shape of the International Harvester Company.

That every honest business enterprise is not a success is a misfortune of which the Canadian Cordage Company has no monopoly. The investigation into the affairs of the Standard Rope and Twine Company shows that one million dollars followed an original investment of ten million dollars during the time the company has been in operation.

Apropos of investigations, it will be on Monday next that the Temperance people of West Peterborough will investigate with their votes the fact that Mr. Peck is solicitor, shareholder, and director of a brewery in Ashburnham.

The Cordage Company, whatever its misfortunes, brought bread to the working man and his family. But where is the brewery that doesn't help to take that bread away?

Who Is to Hang for Killing Johnny Cronin And Daddy Taylor?

The Examiner has received the following letter for publication:

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I have been requested to state that Mr. Peck has had nothing to do, in any way, directly, or indirectly, with the recent dismissals and appointments, this being the case.

Yours truly,

J. H.BURNHAM.

Peterborough, Dec. 8, 1911.

While, in the ordinary course of journalism, the above remarkable letter is inserted, it is worth while to inquire why it was written; why it was called for. Who has requested the inditing and sending of this letter? Why should Mr. Peck be singled out and specifically indicated as having "nothing to do, directly or indirectly with recent dismissals and appointments."

If any blame or praise has been given Mr. Peck on the head of these "recent dismissals and appointments," he necessarily shares the praise or blame. He is thereby simply paying the penalty of the company he keeps. He occupies the same plaform as Mr. Burnham, and the party of Mr. Burnham. The same nominating convention of the Conservative party brought out Mr. Peck as their candidate and exponent of their principles at the same time Mr. Burnham was nominated. Mr. Peck accepted Mr. Burnham and his policy at the time of the Dominion election, and stumped the country for him and, necessarily, the policy Mr. Burnham pursues after the election. The Whitney Government and the Borden Government are so "interlocked," to use a favourite word of Mr. Borden ,that they cannot be separated in fact any more than in responsibility. Sir James Whitney took the stump, and worked as hard as Mr. Bourassa and Arthur Hawke to bring about the triumph of the Borden Government. Sir James Whitney also rudely—as he generally does things—woke up Hon. Frank Cochrane, his Minister of Mines, and lent him to the Dominion Conservative machine, and to his credit, it must be said, that Mr. Cochrane did far better service for the Conservative party in six weeks than he did in six years for the province as a Minister in Sir James Whitney's Cabinet.

Now, Mr. Peck has been identified with the cause of the Dominion from the day of his nomination, through the Dominion election, and to-day, as the candidate of the Whitney Government, he must take the responsibility that comes from the company he keeps.

The Borden Government and the Whitney Government, and their supporters, are so "interlocked," that they amount to one and the same thing; and if disappointed office seekers feel aggrieved over having their personal merits, the merits of their party services, and the principles they voted for, overlooked, they must be content to put the blame on the combination, and any and every member of it.

It is interesting to note why it is necessary to take so prominent a means of excusing or apoligizing for "the recent dismissals and appointments. If they are right, proper and justifiable, why should they be apologized for—why seek to deprive Mr. Peck of the credit of having any responsibility in respect to a worthy action. If the dismissal of John Cronin at the beginning of a hard winter is a justifiable and worthy action, why grudge Mr. Peck the credit of it? If the dismissal of "Daddy" Taylor, (whose only crime seems to be that he has been the friend and helper of English new-comers to Peterborough for the past ten years) 's a noble and worthy thing, why seek to deprive Mr. Peck of credit for it. He is the candidate of a party that—Dominion and Provincial—is in the same boat in this matter.

Is it possible that any members of the Protestant Federation are unreasonable enough not to regard the sacrifice to their demands and principles of a poor old man, without powerful friends and political influence, as a compensation for an outrage of their principles in the case of another appointment? They should not be unreasonable. They should have become so accustomed to being "turned down" by the influences hostile to them and their principles, that are all-powerful in the Borden Government, that they should humbly acquiesce, without a murmur, in the self-sufficient and party-stultifying action of the man they have placed in a position to play the Shakesperean role:

Dressed in a little brief authority,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven,
As makes the angels weep.

Terrific Explosion of Coal Dust Results in Hundreds Being Imprisoned

RELATIVES FRANTIC

Special to The Examiner:

KNOXVILLE, TENN., DEC. 9. — With a terrific rumble that was heard all over the town of Briceville, thirty four miles north of here, there was an explosion of coal dust i nthe Knoxville Iron Companies' mine there, which imprisoned two hundred men. The explosion took place two miles from the main shaft in the interior of the mine and rescue crews had not been able to penetrate the mine to get at their comrades by eleven o'clock. It is feared that the loss of life must be heavy. Hundreds of relatives are thronging the mouth of the mine. Experienced crews are on their way here from Pennsylvania. The police had hard work to prevent the women and relatives from flinging themselves into the pit of the mine in their desperation.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., DEC. 9.—At noon there was little hope for the lives of any of the men in the Briceville mine. Rescue parties were driven back by the terrible flames which issue from the interior of the mine where the men are imprisoned.

Mr. Robert Robertson of the Scotch line, Veralum, has returned home after spending a couple of days with his cousin, Mr. Thomas Robertson, Bethune street, city.

THE GREATEST ASSET NATION CAN HAVE IS ITS PEOPLE

Scholarly Lecture on "Nation Building" by Mr. R. S. Neville, K.C., at the Normal School.

CANADA'S MISSION

A highly edifying lecture was rendered by Mr. R. S. Neville, K.C., of Toronto, entitled Nation Building, in the Normal school last evening.

Those who braved the elements were rewarded, as the address of Mr. Neville contained excellent information and was delivered in a masterly manner. The lesson he left in the minds of his hearers was one of co-operation. In opening his lecture, the speaker dealt upon the resources of Canada.

"It is an astonishing fact," he said, "that a handful of Canadian people are in possession of one of the most desirable of countries. We did not conquer it, we did not buy it, it was made a present to us by the Mother country, and she has given us all its revenues for all time to come. It was given us to develop as part of our share of the British Empire."

Referring to water power, the lecturer said :"In this province, I am told, there is water power which will produce as much power as six million tons of coal an hour, which at $3 a ton delivered, represents eighteen million dollars. This is practically equal to the farm products of the province. But the greatest asset that a nation can have is its people."

"There are two nationalities in Canada, the French and the English. The former are Norman French. Over 1000 years ago the Norsemen came to France and gave it the name, Normandy. The same Norsemen came to England and flourished there, therefore, we are practically one people. England was the meeting place of the most energetic people of the world, and composition has made that country "The Power House of the World."

"One of the things we have in Canada which we should prise very much is the institutions—the British institutions. It is fundamental that a nation should be built on the principles of religion. Science, philanthropy and religion are hand maidens."

The speaker then gave a short resume of the growth of the world. "The

The draw for the gold watch, for which tickets have been sold for the past few weeks by members of the local Journeymen Barbers' Union, to assist a member of the Union, who is ill, was made last night in the Examiner Office, by the City Editor of the Examiner, with the result that 1007 is the number of the winning ticket. The identity of the lucky holder is not yet known, but the possessor of ticket No. 1007 is requested to call upon Mr. Geo. Brousseau, at the Windsor Barber Shop, Brock St.

PIRATES RAVAGING COUNTRY

Special to The Examiner.

PEKIN, DEC. 9.—The whole Chinees Empire is pestered with bandits and irregulars who hold themselves responsible to neither Imperial or Revolutionist party, but make raids on public and personal property, caring for neither law nor life in the accomplishment of their ends. Word comes this morning from Canton and Hong Kong that river pirates and land looters are ravaging the country in that direction, killing both natives and foreigners indiscriminately and fiendishly assaulting women and confiscating all movable property. Native newspapers are out this morning pleading the patriot Chinese to accept limited monarchial government, with a constitutional parliament and give authorities an opportunity to quell the veritable reign of terror existing in some districts, with continued murder of foreigners. They give warning that it must result in partitioning of empire among the foreign powers. The situation is very critical for missionaries in some districts.

VOTERS, BEWARE OF RESURRECTED ROORBACHS

Let the electors beware of false and unfounded stories regarding the Liberal candidate the day before polling.

When Mr. R. R. Hall was candidate for the Liberal party seven years ago he was misrepresented by the Review newspaper in connection with a law suit that he had for Mrs. King against the Polson Iron Works, of Toronto, arising out of the death of the late Mr. King.

On account of the fact that Mrs. King's son was engaged as a clerk in Mr. Hall's office, he sympathised with the family in their bereavement and affliction and engaged the late Mr. E. B. Stone as a lawyer to fight the case against the insurance company who had insured the Polson Iron Works.

The insurance company fought the case most bitterly and put Mrs. King to all the costs they possibly could. They fought the case through the trial courts, dragged her before the Divisional Court of Toronto, and dragged her through the Court of Appeal, and then dragged her on through the Supreme Court of Canada.

Had Mrs. King engaged a lawyer in the ordinary course of business she would never have received one single cent out of the law suit, although she ultimately won out in the Supreme Court of Canada. The legal expenses actually ate up the whole of the verdict that she was entitled to receive. Mr. Hall did not charge Mrs. King one single cent for all the trouble and risk that he incurred and finally he was able to get for Mrs. King $600.00.

Mrs. King's son came all the way from the City of Chicago to contradict the Review's misrepresentations and publicly thanked Mr. Hall for his kindness to his mother, and at the same time, expressed his indignation against the leaders of the Conservative party, because they were unjustly making his mother's law suit a political foot ball.

Mr. Hall in one of his speeches said: "There is no "lawyer in Peterborough knows better than I do from "actual experience the wrong and injustice of the "present Workman's Compensation Act. It matches "the poor widow's wrongs against the insurance "company's wealthy purse. It makes a successful "judgment for the widow a travesty upon justice, be-"cause the costs that are incurred eat up the entire "verdict."

Mr. Hall stands for a Workman's Compensation Act that will abolish this injustice and that will give the workman or his family full and ample damages for any injury sustained and without the expense of a law suit.

THE BANK OF MONTREAL.

The 94th annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal, held at the bank's headquarters, in Montreal, on Monday, reveals another step in its steady progress of the past nearly a century to the position of the strongest financial institution on the continent, and one of the strongest in the world. More than one million of the $1,600,000 necessary to bring up the capital of the bank to the sixteen million mark, as authorized last September, has been subscribed; the rest account has been strengthened so as to place it on a party with the paid-up capital, and the entire statement shows much additional reason for the strong confidence the public has reposed in the stability of the bank, which is equalled by the enterprise and soundness of its management. An important announcement was the retirement of Sir Edward Clouston, Bart, vice-president, from the posit ion of general manager. He has spent 47 years of service in the bank, twenty of which have been passed in the chief executive office. He will be succeeded by Mr. H. V. Meredith, well qualified for the position. This old, reliable bank, to use a common expression approaches the centenary of its existence with every evidence of continuously increased vitality. A summary of the annual report will be found in another place in this issue.

BOLDNESS AND CROOKEDNESS.

The friends of the Whitney Government claim for its head great courage and for the government itself, a record of singular honesty and purity. Sir James Whitney showed little courage, though he had, and has, a majority of 70, in springing the elections a year before their time, and on short notice, in order to get a snap verdict.

He showed equal lack of courage in facing public issues. He has refused to declare himself openly on the bilingual school question, and took shelter behind a commission, whose report he dared not bring before the electors before the elections, so that he may get the benefit of a suppression of the truth.

One would think that with such a big majority, with such an "irreproachable record" Sir James Whitney could afford to appeal to the electors boldly and not have to resort to a crookedness and unfairness that takes away his reputation for boldness as well as honesty. His maladministration and neglect of Northern Ontario have created so strong a sentiment against him that he must crush the voice of condemnation by wholesale disfranchisement of the electors.

Recently a deputation waited on Sir James Whitney from the North, to protest against a manipulation of the voters' lists, that has robbed thousands of electors of their votes, especially in sections strongly Liberal.

So much for the boasted courage and honesty of this exceedingly pure Government. A Government with such a large majority needs to be read a lesson; and fair-minded men, who have more interest in their Province than their party, will vote to reduce a majority used for tyrannical purposes.

WHITNEY KILLS STUDHOLME.

The Conservatives of East Hamilton have been making a dead set on Mr. Allan Studholme, the only representative of labour in the Provincial Legislature, and so determined has been the onslaught on Mr. Studholme, that Sir James Whitney was brought to Hamilton last night to crush the one little labour representative, for Mr. Studholme is as frail in body as he is strong in courage and in the honesty of his labour convictions. But Sir James dont' want to be disturbed by the importunities of a man who represents a cause with which he has no sympathy. So he went to Hamilton last night to smash him. According to Sir James, Mr. Studholme is no use in the House, and the working men had better trust to him, Sir James, who, to use his own words, takes this stand-still stand—

"I look forward"—Sir James is always "looking forward" and never moving forward—"to the time when all the British communities on this continent will make provision for compensation to workmen."

How beautifully indefinite and safe that is, and how comforting to working men, to have such an assurance from the man that went to Hamilton last night on purpose to kill the only representative of labour in the Provincial Legislature.

Sir James has no claim on the support of working men, and if he keeps his big slavish majority, and keeps Allan Studholme out of the House, he will be able to continue to insult labour deputations and deny the working man his right to a fair, workable Compensation Act such as "Bob Hall" advocates.

BROKEN FAITH.

It appears that both political parties in South Renfrew agreed to the election of T. W. McGarry, Conservative, to the Ontario Legislature by acclamation on condition that Hon. G. P. Graham should be elected to the Dominion Parliament without Conservative opposition. Mr. Low, the Liberal member, in accordance with this agreement, sent his resignation to the Speaker, which should not be accepted if, as is reported, the parliamentary machine at Ottawa propose to divide the agreement and put up opposition to Mr. Graham, though the morality of such an agreement may be questioned. There should be "honour among thieves." If the Ottawa machine proposes to repudiate the agreement, it should not accept Mr. Low's resignation. But as to this, Dr. Sproule will, no doubt, consult the master of the Administration, Mr. Bourassa, and be guided by what he advises. If the seat is opened by accepting Mr. Low's resignation, the Ottawa machine may find its work cut out for it in defeating Mr. Graham. They will have against them the strongest personality in public life, a Liberal majority on September 21st of 619, and the sentiment of decent local Conservatives, there are in Renfrew hundreds of decent Conservatives, who will not, without resentment, allow themselves to be made guilty of a breach of faith at the behest of the machine element of the Nationalist-Conservative Government. They have been fooled and disappointed in the Government too much already in almost every respect to again submit to a demand that they stultify themselves and be required to acquiesce in the breach of an agreement entered into in good faith. In the atmosphere of ill-assisted office associates, Mr. Borden's fine sense of honour seems to be losing its edge.

SHORTAGE OF TEACHERS.

(London Advertiser.)

Sir James Whitney's latest notion on the teacher-famine is as amateurish as might have been expected. With Pyne to the right of him, Seath to the left of him, he thunders "No teacher's certificate for Normal graduates till after a year's teaching in Ontario.' Thus these three wise men of the east would stop the pedagogues' march to the prairie!

Why not nail and board up some of our Normal schools, and be done with it, if, as the Premier thinks, the westward trek is entirely responsible for the shortage of teachers in Ontario, and such a regulation as that proposed is the only way to stop it? Of course the westward trek is not the main cause of the evil, but if it were the new regulation is calculated only to aggravate it.

Who that purposes teaching in the west will put in a year at an Ontario Normal school and then first teach a year in Ontario, when he or she can go at once from the High school to the Provincial Normal school at Calgary or at Regina, and in a five months' term secure a certificate good for any of the western provinces? A few of our High school graduates are going there already, though some even of those intending to "go west" still prefer the probably superior training in an Ontario Normal school. But the regulation which Sir James proposes will decide many to leave Ontario at once.

Such primitiveness of understanding in educational matters, such simple-minded, rash autocracy reminds one of ancient despots of the Orient — Belshazzer, for instance. Certainly a hand-writing should appear on the wall of the Ontario Educational Department: "Weighed in the balance and found wanting."

It is precisely when the Whitney Government is viewed on the educational side that it appears in its worst light. As far as railway work and other economic matters are concerned it can masquerade in plumes borrowed from its predecessor, as regards many things it can plaster up the more unthinking electorate with buncomb and inconsistent pretences, but face to face with the educated opinion of the province it cannot conceal by bravado and twaddle the pitiful botchwork of its model school policy, its university policy which huddles students to Toronto, its general neglect of primary school needs, its absurd and rejected primer for the A. B. C. class, its reactionary spelling decrees, its shuffling on bilingual schools and this latest edict on teaching certificates.

The edict will not hinder but will stimulate the western migration such as there is. But the west is not the chief cause of our trouble. Mr. Rowell goes to the root of the teacher question in his policy of restoring the model schools, or as many as are needed to remedy a deplorable state of affairs.

Pre-Election Day Roorbacks In Interests Of The Bold Whitney

Taken in conjunction with previous announcements of a like sort timed just before polling day, it is impossible to regard the statement of Chairman Englehart of the T. & N. O. Commission that a thirty-mile branch line will be built into Silk Lake next spring as anything other than a wholesale bribe dangled before the electors. There could have been no other object in making the announcement four days before polling, for it is admitted that there is no possibility of doing anything until next spring. Chairman Englehart has protested that the T. & N. O. Commission was engaged in railroading, not in party politics. He can no longer say so. He is himself on this occasion the bearer of a bribe to a whole community, which only a few months ago was told that conditions did not warrant the construction of the branch line now promised, with the object of saving Mr. Shillington from defeat.

It is not the first time that the T. & N. O. Railway has been used as an instrument of bribery. In The Temiskaming Mining Herald of June 4, 1908, just prior to the last Provincial election, appeared a large front-page advertisement reproducing a copy of a letter from J. H. Black, Superintendent of the railway, stating that the railway would make a start at once on a spur line into New Liskeard. On the strength of this promise the advertisement called on the electors to vote for Shillington because of "what the Government is doing for New Liskeard." The spur is about a mile in length. The promise was made in June, 1908, and the work was not finished for three years thereafter.

An even more despicable example of bribery on a large scale was given in the recent Federal contest. The Sudbury Mining News, Mr. Cochrane's organ, on September 15 said: "The people of Sudbury may not be generally aware that the Ontario Government, of which Hon. Frank Cochrane is representative for this district, has a party of surveyors working between Sudbury and Porcupine, looking over the route, with a view to building a railway line between that mining field and Sudbury. We are assured on indisputable authority that if the Conservatives win the election next Thursday, September 21, and Mr. R. L. Borden becomes Premier, operations will be commenced on the railway between these points as soon as surveys can be completed."

The Sudbury Mining News adds: "This would mean terminals in Sudbury, shops in Sudbury, every piece of property in Sudbury enhanced in value, every business in Sudbury expanded enormously. A vote for Gordon means that you want the Sudbury-Porcupine Railway."

The brutal frankness of this bribe of a railway 125 miles long is better understood from the sequel. Mr. George Gordon, the Conservative candidate, chiefly benefited by the offer of the bribe, was merely a warming-pan for the Hon. Frank Cochrane, who now occupies the seat in the House of Commons for which Gordon was elected. So that the Hon. Frank Cochrane was dangling the bribe before the people of Sudbury not on Gordon's behalf, but on his own.

In the face of what has gone before, Mr. Englehart's announcement at this moment is nothing more or less than an election trick as little creditable to him as to the politicians who through him are once more seeking to use a promise of the expenditure of public money to bribe an entire community.

DISMISSAL OF MR. CRONIN

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 8.

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Allow me to say that I am at one with "Conservative," as to the Christmas box presented to John Cronin, and his lucky associates. But as we are at a disadvantage with an enemy who strikes in the dark, we are likewise at a disadvantage with a friend we don't know.

And as to voting for Mr. Hall, why certainty, by all means. It's with the Ontario government like the man with his wife that said if she changed at all, it would have to be for the better, for she could not get any worse.

Yours truly,
BERNARD WELSH.

CHRISTMAS DRY FRUITS

When you require the best ingredients for your cakes and puddings, why not use them when we offer the choicest raisins and currants, thoroughly cleaned, at same price paid for common fruit. E. F. Mason, Grocer. 3d-134.

A SUGGESTION FOR XMAS SHOPPERS

We have anticipated the wants of the public of Peterborough for this Christmas season and we believe we can show them the most appropriate gifts at the best prices and on easiest terms of payment, to be found in the city. We have reduced the price of all the stock in our store, as you will notice by reading the large advertisement in this paper on page 11.

Call and see our stock; you are welcome, whether you buy or not. The Home Furnishing Co., 208 Charlotte street.

Open Night At Y.M.C.A.

"Are you going to the Y.M.C.A. next Tuesday evening?"

"No, eYs. What's up anyway?"

"Oh, it's an open night. Everybody invited to go and enjoy themselves. The whole building is open to us."

"Well now, that sounds interesting. I've often thought about visiting the "Y" and I guess I'll go."

"Good for you; I'll go along with you. We can go anywhere, play basketball ,wrestle, swim, read or watch other fellows enjoy themselves. Meet you at eight oclock. So long."

men in the prehistoric age," he said, "lived amongst countless wild and savage animals and had no weapons with which to defend themselves. Their first protection was caves, at the mouth of which they rolled stones to keep out the animals. In the matter of art we owe the men of the prehistoric ages much. Their next step in progress was organization for defence. With the discovery of seed by which flowers and foodstuffs grew, government developed and ultimately, the strongest of them became kings, and thus humanity developed its present state.

Canada has enjoyed 125 years of peace, and this through the protection of the British. Therefore, it would be a crime against humanity, against you and me, to let the British Empire fall.

PAINFUL INJURY

Harold Walsh Has Leg Terribly Gashed by Axe and Has to Endure a Long and Unpleasant Journey

HURT AT ROCKCROFT

Harold Walsh, twenty-one years of age, whose home is at 19 Conger St., East City, was brought to his home yesterday, suffering from the results of a very painful accident, sustained on Thursday, when his leg was terribly gashed by an axe. The unfortunate young man was working in a lumber camp at Rockcroft, and, with another man, was employed in trimming branches off a tree. In some manner his companion's axe slipped, and struck Walsh in the fleshy part of his leg, inflicting a very deep gash. First Aid methods were employed and then Walsh was placed in a waggon and driven to Peterborough, a painful and necessarily slow journey of many miles. He arrived at his home yesterday, and is being attended by Drs. Frederick and Carmichael.

HEADS THAT MIGHT BE CHOPPED OFF

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I noticed with great satisfaction your account of "The Spoilsman's Axe". Well, I, as a Conservative, do not agree with any such work as has been going on lately, putting men out of their offices, simply to gratify party spite, or as the Purity Party say, to purify the service. Well, purifying the service is a noble and good thing, but be honest and fair about it. There is at the present time great discontent in the Conservative element in this city, and I, myself, must say that I feel annoyed also. The idea of replacing the Trent Valley Accountant with a man with such limited education and knowledge and a bigotted partizan, both religiously and politically. He may be seen daily preaching his way of seeing things to the much-heard-of Joseph Stewart on the street corners, blocking the crossings, brandishing their hands, and practically speaking, owning the space they so often occupy. In these two men the Conservative party, from which I must sever my connection, have two coveted ornaments, of which they ought to be proud. I feel sorry for Mr. Peck for he will have to bear many unearned kicks, if there was one atom of fairness in my old party, now that they have chopped off a few harmless heads from men, who, at the most, may have done a little chattering, let them commence at home, and purify the atmosphere by doing a little hacking at the most offensive Political Humbug, who pretends to be such a fair, square, broad-minded Inspector, who, when spoken to, cannot even give a citizen a civil answer. One would think, to hear him talk to hotel keepers, and their customers, that he was still on the farm, and speaking to pigs, and not an official who should be above reproach, and try to set an example to the very ones he has supervision over. But it's the old story: "Put a beggar on horseback and he'll ride to the Devil." So, on Monday next, myself, and many of my friends, who also have heard and been insulted by this very empty-headed Stewart, will cast our votes for R. R. Hall, and I also hope that many others may do the same, so, by electing the latter we may bring some pressure to bear on the Government which will hold this tyrannical official in check.

Yours in earnest.
EXPERIENCE.

PRINCESS PATRICIA AT OTTAWA

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, DEC. 9.—Princess Patricia, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, arrived in Ottawa at 11.55 to-day and was met at the station by one of the aides de camp and two motor cars, as well as the 'bus, to which her baggage was transferred. The arrival was of the most democratic character. Very few people outside of the usual habitues of the station were on hand, and neither the Duke nor Duchess was present. As the motor drove off two of the men working on the new station essayed a cheer, but there was no response and so the Royal Beauty got a very cold welcome to Ottawa.

PRESENTATION MADE BY THE PRUDENTIAL STAFF

An interesting event took place at the local offices of the Prudential Insurance Company, at noon today, when Mr. R. E. Sherry, who is severing his connection with the Company, to return to New York City, was presented with a handsome travelling bag by the staff, as a mark of the esteem in which he is held. The presentation was made by Mr. C. H. Patterson, while the following address was read by Mr. R. F Sedgwick:

Mr. R. E. Sherry, Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Ralph,—It was with feelings of deepest regret that we your fellow employees of the Prudential Insurance Company learned your intention of severing your connection with this office.

During your stay in Peterborough, you have not only made friends with those closely connected with you in business, but from all your acquaintance come expressions of regret at your intention of again taking up your abode in the great city of New York.

We who have been closely in touch with you in your work, feel more keenly your departure, as it always seemed a pleasure to you to help by your advice all who were new to the business, and you not only had the confidence of your Superintendent, but endeared yourself to every one you came in contact with.

As a slight token of remembrance we ask you to accept this club bag, and with it you carry the best wishes of your friends. We trust that whatever business you may engage in, that your efforts will be crowned with success.

Signed on behalf of Peterborough staff J. I. Allen, Superintendent; J. Leadbetter, Asst.-Supt.; R. F. Sedgwick, Asst.-Supt.; Agents, Howard Holmes, A. H. Wells, C. R. Banks, I. Malone, C. H. Patterson, H. C. Dudley, Collin B. Robinson; Leila Haskell, stenographer.

"The Gospel of The Hereafter" by Rev Paterson-Smyth, on sale by Treblecock Bros, price $1.00.

WRITTEN BY M. DOBBIN

The interesting article on another page of this issue of the Examiner, on "How Christmas is Spent by a Great Railway" was, local people will be interested in learning, written by a former Peterborough boy, Mr. Max Dobbin, son of Mr. F. H. Dobbin, who is connected with the Advertising Department of the C. P. R. This most cleverly written story will have added interest because its author is so well known here.

A "LEADER" WHO DOESN'T KNOW HOW TO VOTE

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I must apologise for having kept "Johnny Canuck" so long waiting for an answer to his enquiry, as to where I am, but I did not see his letter for a day or two, after it came out. However, "Johnny", I will do my best to satisfy you You must be unfortunate in your inference that my principles are shallsilent in this election. It is the shallow water that babbles "Johnny," low waters that babbles "Johnny," and still waters do not reveal every pebble that lies beneath the surface.

Again you are wrong in thinking that I subserve my principles to party exigencies. Had it been so I should not have taken the stand I did at the Dominion election. I have no objection, however, of letting you know "where I am" on the issues in the present election

1. I certainly am in favour of tax reform, and the taxation of land rather than improvements.

2. I am in favour of a radical improvement in the Workman's Compensation Act. I go further in this respect and would favour a factory act in addition, modelled on lines that would prevent a large proportion of the accidents that happen.

3. I am in favour of temperance reform, but while thinking that the three-fifths clause is too great a handicap, believe on the other hand, that a simple majority is too narrow for stability, and I would favour a ten per cent. majority.

4. I am in favour of public ownership of public utilities, not only of telephones, as advocated by the Hon. Mackenzie King, at the Opera House, but also of light and power, as denounced by Mr. R. D. Hall, on the same platform, and at the same meeting. Where was the consistency—if to take over the power was a violation of the rights of vested interests, how was it different in the case of the Bell Telephone?

5. I am opposed to Bilingualism in the schools, believing that the only way to build up a united Canada is to have the children taught one language, and that the English

Now Johnny, do you ask which way I intend to vote? I answer, if one of our candidates stood for these measures, whether Grit or Tory, he would get my vote; as at present, in common with many of my fellow electors I am in the same position that Haley was when following Eliza, the escaped slave, and, turning to the candidates, as he did to Andy, and his chum, I say "If you were not both such confounded lawyers" I should know which way to vote.

Yours truly,

GEORGE LEADER.

Mr. Leader is in the same boat with many others. He got such a sickening, like many others, over the outcome of the Dominion elections, that politics of the Conservative-Nationalist brand, have left a bad taste in the mouth.

Mr. Leader endorses, in its main essentials, the principles of the Liberal party, and Liberal candidate, in this election, and he is quite consistent in occupying his present position of neutrality. His principles, as stated in the letter above, will not, it appears, allow him to vote for Mr. Peck, and to that extent, he refuses to "subserve his principles to party exigencies." The claims of the party candidate cannot appeal very strongly to Mr. Leader, or he would know "which way to vote." And, in this respect, he is no more in the dark than thousands of others.

Social Evening

As an appropriate conclusion to a most successful membership campaign, a reception to the new members of the Women's Mission Circle, of the George St. Methodist Church was held in the Sunday School room of the church last evening, when a most delightful time was spent.

Miss Hardill, the President, presided in a capable manner, and gave an address of welcome to the new members, after which the following much appreciated numbers were rendered:

Violin solo—Miss Hazel I. Pentland.

Mrs. Moore, District Organizer, of the W.M.S., gave a talk on the work.

The next number was a musical contest, won by Miss Staples and Miss McKee.

Recitation by Miss Vincent.

Alphabetical contest, won by Miss Myrtle Merrill.

Recitation by Miss McKeegan.

At the close of this splendid programme, dainty refreshments were served, and the proceedings took the form of a social evening.

Miss Myrtle Wylie was the accompanist of the evening and performed the duty in a very capable and acceptable manner.

WHAT TO GIVE

The "Cressman Store"—the Christmas Shopping Store

THE Christmas Spirit is in the air. The world's unselfish time is upon us. We need not remind you that the greatest happiness comes to ourselves when we make others happy with our gifts. But we will remind you that our store is the "Christmas Store"—the store where you can buy Quality merchandise at reasonable prices. We invite you to make 'this store your store for Holiday Shopping.'

Every section of every department throughout this bright, well-lighted store teems wite beautiful gifts for every member of the family. This season we prepared Early and we prepared Big with the result we are now in readiness with the Finest Assemblage of Wonderfully Attractive, Useful and Sensible Xmas Gifts it has ever been our pleasure to offer for your selection.

Every possible consideration has been employed to make the matter of selecting Xmas Gifts a work of Real Enjoyment instead of a tedious, tiresome task of worry and trouble.

Extra salespeople have been engaged and carefully instructed. Everything is plainly ticketed and displayed for easy seeing. On the counters and tables, on the ledges and on the arches that decorate the store, in the show cases and show windows, in fact everywhere one sees a splendid array of gifts of Real Merit and Usefulness.

We cannot attempt to describe the inumerable gifts that we have here assembled that will gladden many happy receivers on Xmas morn. But we extend a cordial invitation to come and inspect our displays—go through the Men's Wear Department, through the dozens of attractively decorated departments that dot the Main Floor, through the spacious Second Floor departments and through the Housefurnishing Department on the Third Floor—each and every department will offer valuable suggestions in What to Give—Shop Now: Shop when you can, but whenever possible, shop in the morning. : : :

How Christmas Will Be Spent in Different Local Public Institutions

"Christmas comes but once a year, and when it comes it brings good cheer.' There is a considerable element of truth in this hoary old rhyme. The Christmas season brings with it a tide of universal philanthrophy. That the inmates of the charitable institutions of this city will not be neglected when the twenty-fifth day of December slips around, is indicated by the following replies which were received in answer to the Examiner's query of "How will you spend Christmas?".

The replies go to show that ample provisions have been made to ensure the inmates of these institutions a merry Christmas. In all cases, the holiday will be spent along similar lines to that of last year. The Christmas tree and a gift to each inmate will prevail, as also will the old-time Christmas dinner. Special services suitable for the occasion will be held throughout the institutions in the city, and in many cases the wards will be treated to a sleigh drive.

Every effort is being put forth by the various managements to make their numerous charges happy; to make them realize the same joys that were theirs, probably, on some past Christmas days, when they were in more fortunate circumstances.

Protestant Home.

At the above named institution, the old folks will each receive a gift. A Christmas tree will also be a feature on Christmas eve, at which a number of the poor children of the city will be invited. There are about twenty inmates in the Home at present. They are all well advanced in years, but nevertheless they will be able to enjoy their Christmas dinner.

Children's Shelter.

Santa Claus has announced his intention of making his regular annual visit to this institution and furthermore will see that every child receives due consideration. There are seven children in the Shelter at present and probbaly to some of them, Christmas will obtain as being a day of joy and surprises. While a definite plan of action has not yet been defined, it is a safe guess that the day will be observed in the usual vigorous manner, and for one day in their lives at least these children's happiness will be complete.

Mr. Cochrane has announced the abolition of the usual custom of distributing baskets among the poor of the city.

House of Providence.

The management of the above named institutions has made ample provisions to give the sixty-two inmates a right royal time. The usual Christmas tree and a gift to each inmate will be the order of the day. A sumptuous dinner will be served and church service suitable for the occasion will also be held. The institution will be prettily decorated with holly, mistletoe and other appropriate decorations.

St. Vincent's Orphanage.

This is another place whose walls will ring with the merry laughter of boys and girls on the twenty-fifth day of December. The chief attraction of the day will be a Christmas tree, followed by a sleigh drive. An entertainment will also be provided. There are twenty-seven children confined in the institution at present.

DANGER IN CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS

Chief Howard has received the following letter from Mr. John A. Robertson, secretary of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association, which he recommends to the attention of all concerned:

Re Christmas Decorations and Displays.

Dear Sir,—Following our usual custom at this season of the year, I beg to call your attention to the danger to life and property from Christmas decorations, displays, etc., which are frequently made at this time of the year. The use of Christmas greens, harvest specimens and other inflammable materials such as draperies, scenery, cotton to represent snow and the like (especially in connection with energie and other lighting systems), is decidedly an increase of hazard, it being impossible to make displays of that nature perfectly safe.

The third statutory condition of your Insurance Policy reads in part as follows:

"Any change material to the risk, but within the control or knowledge of the assured, shall avoid the policy, as to the part affected thereby, unless the change is promptly notified in writing to the Company or its local agent."

In addition to the danger to property from the displays referred to, the danger to life in crowded stores or places of meeting, by reason of a panic occasioned by a fire, even though it be small and easily controlled, is so great that the Underwriters, who have made a study of such hazards, would fail in their duty should they not give this warning.

By order,
JOHN A. ROBERTSON,
Secretary.

Only Two More Xmas Mails

Shopping activity is commencing to prevail throughout the city. During the after portion of the last few days the business section has been filled with people who are out to purchase their Christmas wares. The clerks in the stores are having a busy time, especially those in stores where Canadian souvenirs and like trinkets may be obtained. These articles are in great demand this year and are beginning to thin out in some of the prominent stores.

The postal officials and letter carriers are also "hustled" to cope with the increasing business. Those who wish to send mails or parcels to the home country should prepare and send them immediately. There are only two more British mails, which will reach their destination before Christmas Day. The first leaves on Tuesday, and to catch this mail, articles must be posted to-morrow (Sunday.) The second will leave on Wednesday, articles to be sent in by Monday morning. British mails close at Halifax on Tuesday night.

Fd. R. B. McGill was presented with the P. C. C. badge, in recognition of his past services, he being the oldest member of the Council. Fd. Mrs. C. Savin, C.C., was also presented with the P. C. C. badge for the services rendered by her as C. C. during the past year.

Fds. Mr. and Mrs. McGill served fruit and a very pleasant evening was spent.

"AT HOME"

The Peterborough Lodge No. 111, I.O.O.F., held a very successful at home in the Oddfellows' Hall last evening. All the available space in the rooms was filled with members and visitors, who spent a thoroughly enjoyable time. At 8.30, the Chairman opened with a short and neat address, dealing on the progress of the Lodge and part of the assembly engaged in cards, etc., while in another room dancing was indulged in. Messrs. Lewis and Hackett supplied the music.

After lunch had been served, the following splendid programme was rendered:

Instrumental duet—Messrs. S. Palmer and M. Flowers.
Song—Mr. George Chandler.
Humorous song—Mr. C. Barrett.
Dramatic recital—Mrs. R. Allen.
Quartette—Æolian Quartette party.
Instrumental duet—Miss S. Palmer and M. Flowers.
Song—Mr. Geo. Chandler.

O. C. H. C. ELECTS OFFICERS

At the regular meeting of Peterborough Circle No. 193, O. C. H. C., the following were elected officers for 1912:

Past Leader—Mr. J. W. Carey.
Leader—Mr. Geo. W. Bartley.
Vice-Leader—Mr. H. Dicks.
Secretary—Mrs. R. Wright.
Treasurer—Mr. Geo. A. Goheen.
Fin.-Sec.—Mr. O. S. Matchett.
Chaplain—F. Degan.
Marshall—Mrs. A. M. Bradshaw.
Warden—Mrs. O. S. Matchett.
Guard—Mr. W. A. Robertson.
Trustees—Messrs. Kemp, Goheen, and Bartley.
Medical Examiners—Drs. Morgan, Young and Marshall.
Organist—Mrs. Sam Thomas.

The above officers will be duly installed at the next meeting, on Jan. 12th, 1912, when it is expected that Mr. A. E. Walker of Port Hope, Organizer, will be present.

Peterborough Circle is in a flourishing condition, a large number of candidates having been initiated lately.

At the close of the next meeting, refreshments will be served by the incoming officers, and it is hoped there will be a large attendance.

COPIES IN TUBES FOR MAILING

Copies of this special Christmas edition of the Examiner may be secured in tubes for mailing purposes for 5c. each, or without tubes for the usual price of the Daily Examiner, 2 cents. As the supply is limited, you had better call No. 57 and have the papers you want put aside for you. The edition is an ideal Christmas remembrance to send to your friends outside of the city. As an evidence of the interest taken in the edition, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, formerly of Peterborough, has sent in an order for a dozen copies.

REV. DR. JAMES BARCLAY, OF MONTREAL,
The Distinguished Preacher, Who Will Occupy the Pulpit of Knox Church To-morrow, Morning and Evening.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT KNOX PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The musical part of theservices at Knox church to-morrow, in connection with their anniversary, will consist of the following:

Ye gates lift up your heads on high.

Solo—A Song of Peace, by Mr. R. Dickson.

O God, Our Help in Ages Past.

Anthem—King of Kings, by Simper.

Anniversary Hymn, 'When I Survey Life's Varied Scene.

Anthem—The King I Love, My Shepherd Is, by Rev. Sir Henry Baker.

Solo by Mrs. Dickson Hall.

Anthem—What Are These, by Stainer.

Hymn—Forward Be Our Watchword.

In addition to Mrs. Dickson Hall, the choir will be assisted by Mrs. Huges; Miss C. Chiles organist, Mr. H. Lewis, choir leader.

Knox church people are expecting large congregations to-morrow, and these are assured, not only on account of the occasion, which is the first anniversary of the opening of the church, but also by the fact that Rev. Dr. Barclay, of Montreal, is to be their preacher. Dr. Barclay made a former visit to Peterborough we are told, when he came down from Toronto to play against local curlers. But this is the first occasion in which this noted preacher has preached in a local pulpit. Many who have known of his great reputation as a preacher, will therefore be glad of the opportunity of hearing him. The people of Knox church are making an effort to reduce their debt and hope for good results from to-morrow's offerings.

SPLENDID PERFORMANCE OF THE GEISHA

weeks later in the Grand Opera House, and presenting lovely bouquets to the principal ladies, a shower of pearls to Miss Hallihan, and personally congratulating Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Devey on the splendid performances both in Toronto and Peterborough.

On page 167 Mr. Donald Heins, of Ottawa, finds himself, while judging the musical work in the last contest in some difficulty, (as did his predecessors) in deciding between opera chorus and orchestra. He reports as follows: "It is difficult to draw comparisons between companies playing respectively 20 minutes and 90 minutes. The chorus of an opera company, keeping up a high pitch of excellence under the trying conditions of constantly changing positions, interruption from dialogue and solos, the necessity for action, risk of orchestral shortcomings, etc., can find no parallel in a chorus in fixed position for concert purposes. Neither can it be compared with orchestral performance."

The names of the winners of the pianoforte, violin and vocal solo prizes are not included in this report, but it will be remembered that Miss Choate of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music won a handsome medal in 1910.

Earl Grey will long be remembered by all who took part in these useful contests, not only for their educationcontestat, for his many acts of personal kindness to the aspirants to the honour of winning the handsome trophies.

BARTENDER FINED $25

A local man was arrested last night on a charge of being drunk, and kicking at the door of a south end residence. He was fined $5.75.

John O'Brien and Joe Stabler were fined $2.00 each for a similar offense.

Two Toronto boys were discharged on a charge of being drunk. The bar tender who supplied the liquor was fined $25.00, the charge being that of supplying liquc to a minor. Much evidence was taken in the case.

TURNBULL'S
THE HOUSE THAT VALUE BUILT

THE BOY SCOUTS
By the Provincial Secretary

In most parts of the country Boy Scouts have now become a familiar sight, but comparatively few people seem to know that there is a meaning underlying their games and organization. Although the movement is yet in its infancy, results are even now beginning to show themselves. Parents, school masters, business men and clergymen write us of the change for good wrought in the boys. A number of splendid cases of life-saving, for which the Scouts have received their rewards, have taken place throughout the province. During the year 1912 we expect to see the movement throughout the Province of Ontario doubled. This can only be accomplished by every Scout putting his shoulder to the wheel, working and aiming to take an interest in the other fellow by bringing him into the organisation ,but to continue our work and to place it upon a permanent basis for good, we need two things: Firstly, we want men to act as scout masters, that is, to take the training of the boys or organizing locally the movement. There must be a large number of men to whom it has never occurred that by devoting ll to such service some of the time now spent at recreation, they have it in their power to do valuable work for our country. Secondly, we want all those who are prejudiced against our movement, to give a few minutes each day to a study of the Boy Scout movement.

What is the worst thing that a man has to face in this life? The worst is when the close of life is in sight and you look back on an empty wasted time—when you reflect too late, what you might have done. The great thing that I see in this scouting for boys is that not one of our Scoutmasters will have to face that—the worst ordeal that can fall to a man.

The Boy Scouts of the Province of Ontario have resolved to try and endow three cots at the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives for the year 1912 by selling Christmas stamps. Let every Scout do his best. Let every friend of the Scouts support this worthy object by purchasing the stamps and showing your sympathy with the boys in this their undertaking.

To those who desire information in connection with the movement, if they will please write the secretary, Mr. H. G. Hammond, Room 501 Lumsden Bldg., Toronto, such information will be forwarded with pleasure.

PRICES STILL SOARING

This morning's market was well attended. A large supply of geese, turkeys, ducks and chickens adorned the tables ,but the usual scarcity of butter and eggs was noticeable. The price of this commodity still remains at the top notch, and there is very little prospect of a drop. There are all indications of a further rise in the price of eggs, as the demand appears to be increasing. Geese and turkeys are also a little higher, but this will likely only last during the Christmas trade. The prices quoted to-day are as follows:

Lamb—10c. and 12c.
Pork—10c. and 12c.
Beef—7 1-2c. to 9c.
Potatoes—$1.50.
Apples—(Spies $4.50 to $5.00 per bbl.) other apples 25c. and 30c. per pk.
Geese—$1.25 and $1.50.
Butter—30c.
Eggs—35c. and 40c.
Chickens—60c. and 75c.
Turkeys, $2 to $2.50.
Ducks, 75.
Baled hay, 85 cts cwt.
Loose hay, $15.00.
Tamarack, per cord—$4.25.
Farmers' hides, $9.
Butchers' hides, 10c.
Live hogs, $6.25.
Dressed hogs, $8.50.

WAS A SURPRISE

Miss Minnie Lightfoot Presented With a Handsome Umbrella

Miss Minnie Lightfoot was surprised by a few of her friends, who met Thursday evening at the home of Miss Rubie Adamson, where they presented Miss Lightfoot with a beautiful gold and pearl mounted umbrella.

Miss Lightfoot, who has been connected with the office staff of the Peterborough Lock Co. for the past five years, has secured the appointment of confidential secretary to Mr. A. W. Clark, general manager of the Yale & Towne Co., St. Catharines. She leaves Peterborough to take up her new duties after the first of the year.

Accompanying the presentation was the following address:

Dear Minnie,—It is with feelings of deepest regret that we, your friends, gather here this evening to bid farewell to one who has always been a participant in our joys and sorrows:

Your courteous manner and convenial companionship have endeared you to each and every one of us, and we feel sure that you will win the confidence and esteem of those with whom you intermingle in your new home.

We beg you to accept this umbrella as a slight token of the high regard in which you have always been held, and we trust that on each rainy day the sunshine of memory may dispel the gloomy weather by recalling many happy hours spent in Peterborough. (Signed)

VISITORS' NIGHT.

Tuesday night next, Dec. 12, will be open night at Y.M.C.A. Every man in the city is invited to spend the evening at the building and make use of the gymnasium, baths, bowling alleys, billiard table and all the other privileges of the Associatio.s.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

BASEBALL PLAYERS NOT ALL SHREWD IN BUSINESS

CHICAGO, DEC. 9.—Are major league ball players good business men outside of the stereotyped "holding out for more salary?" Although for a long time the layman fell for the stories about investments, and in working during winter months, with all respect to these players the above question is answered by saying "Show us".

Several instances have come to light recently that have shaken all faith in the far-sightedness of ball players as investors. For years the baseball public has been regaled with the news about Pat Dougherty, of the White Sox, owning oil wells. Every winter came the tale that Pat might not ever play again because his "oil interests" might take up his entire time.

Long columns have been written by baseball reporters how Pat Dougherty and Fielder Jones, of the Chicago White Sox, were making a vast fortune in Pennsylvania gasoline fields. Then imagine, please, the shock that followed the recent announcement that Dougherty had sold his wells for $2,000. A 6 per cent interest on this would amount to $120 per annum. That doesn't look as if it would take up a man's entire attention to look after that interest—not if you regard it in a perfectly rational manner. So much for the oil wells.

Overall Not Getting Rich.

Then the gold mine of Pitcher Orvie Overall out in California! That is the mine that the big Club twirler had to give up baseball for because it occupied his entire time to attend to the running of it. So great was the enthusiasm in this gold mine that Pitcher Mordecai Brown and Outfielder James Sheckard, of the Cubs, sank a part of their hard-earned cash in the stock.

Before Brown left for the coast to look over the proposition further he was asked what he thought of it. Brown "refused to be interviewed," but he did say that the mine was at Angel's Gap and that the oil wells the trio were interested in were at Devil's Gorge. It's a long way between these extremes.

One thing is certain, however — Sheckard and Brown are not getting amazingly large dividends, because one of the Cub employes told that both kept getting assessment notices continually. That doesn't look as if business ventures, as regards the mine at least, were panning out much pay dirt.

Then, too, Overall is reported—or is in fact—as playing semi-pro. ball out in California. He needs the money, in other words. It wouldn't be at all surprising if another year saw him in one of three places pitching for so much per week. The places in question are the Cubs, the San Francisco club, of the Pacific coast League, or the Stockton club, of the California outlaw league. So much for the gold mines.

Chance a Good Business Man.

To only two persons in the ball business will we take off our hats as making a success in business. There may be more, but these two are sure, Frank Chance, manager of the Cubs, has made a success in raising oranges out in Arcadia, Cal. He had enough money to buy the right kind of land and all he had to do was to sit back and let the perfectly good trees do the rest. The other is Roy Thomas, who has played centre field in the past for Philadelphia. Thomas was a salesman for an undertaking house. He is said to have carried his samples around with him while making trips with the team. He did nicely in that line of business.

This brings up the question, is baseball a good training ground for business life? There are many good reasons against such a thing. First, all responsibility is taken from the men during the seven or more months of the season. Their fares, meals, in fact, most everything is paid for. They don't have any responsibility in that direction, Then they are very apt to loaf around hotels and pool rooms when not at the park practising or playing in games. That does not tend toward a business training.

Then, too, they are not apt to make the right kind of acquaintances while playing ball. Not that their friends are not all right, but they are for the most part, fans who like to hang around and talk baseball with them.

WHO WILL BE JACK JOHNSON'S SUCCESSOR IF HE RETIRES

(By W. W. Naughton)

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., DEC. 9.—When Jack Johnson first talked of retiring many thought it was merely one of the champion's whims and that he would be back in the game with both feet the first time "proper inducements" were made to him.

Now, corroborative testimony is forthcoming that Jack is through with the frivolties of the ring and that he is plagued with ennui to the extent that he does not care a continental who succeeds to the title. He waives all right to a voice in the bestowal of the laurels and says he has no suggestions to make as to the heavyweights best fitted to wear them.

This is bad. It means there will be a cloud on the heavyweight championship for years—that the man who assumes the prerogative without licking Johnson will be regarded as a pretender, a jackal masquerading in a lion's skin.

There must be continuity in a thing of this kind. Each succeeding champion is merely a link in a chain of destruction. The newest man—or the latest model, one might say—licked a champion who licked another champion, and so, link by link, we trace our latest prize ring hero back to some dim and distant "champ," just as a race horse traces to the Byerley Turk, or the Darley Arabian.

When a broken link appears, there is a blot on the escutcheon of the man whose reputational pedigree we are investigating, and so it will be if Johnson escapes from the game unlicked, and someone grabs his title.

Just think of the mental suffering of the sporting editors of the future while trying to explain to Old Subscriber and Constant Reader that the old line of champions ended with Jack Johnson and that the new breed is only a kid of a Manchu dynasty.

Must Have Johnson Licked.

Something must be done to stall off the confusion that threatens the fistic historians of the coming years. We must drag Johnson back at any price—and this "goes both ways," as the slangsters say—and have him trounced to the queen's taste.

It should be done to keep the record straight, and, come to think of it, 'twill be merely what some call "poetic retribution."

The Jeffries that Johnson licked was merely the husk of the Jeffries that used to be, and Johnson has as much right to hearken to the "comeback" cry as Jeffries had, especially if the prize is right.

There's another angle to the question which is bound to engender bitterness of spirit. I refer to the racial angle. If Johnson is allowed to rest in peace there will come a time—and then succeeding time—in which the men with the dark pigment beneath the cuticle will say:

"The first negro that was given a chance became the champion of the world. They couldn't defeat him, and so as not to block the wheels of progress he stepped aside and allowed them to arrange a fresh deal. The chain of destruction which began with Figg, and Mendoza, ended with Jack Johnson."

Joe Jeanette, through his manager, Dan McKittrick, is the first to lay claim to the crown left on the bureau of Jack Johnson. McKittrick says that his man has shown himself superior to Sam Langford on various occasions, and that it wasn't so much Australian gold as a desire to evade Jeanette that sent Langford scurrying to the land of the kangaroo.

This is the first shot in the new campaign and Jeanette probably has as much right to fire it as any other man.

But how are things to be brought to a focus? With Johnson on the retiring list, astute Hugh McIntosh is sure to bill the impending Sam Langford-Sam McVea fight as a world's championship struggle, and who is to gainsay him?

Begin Weeding Out Here.

Maybe the best thing for Jeanette to do is begin weeding out at this end. Let him hook up with Jim Flynn, who seems to be regarded as the best of the white heavies, and let the winner of that affair journey to Australia, or coax the winner of the McVea-Langford bout back to this city. Then he will begin to get a line on the situation.

Tom O'Rourke, or some one back in New York, has expressed the opinion that a white man would be champion of the world again before long. It is not easy to see how the conclusion is arrived at. If there is a white man in the lists at present who is capable of defeating Jeanette, Langford and McVea, he is being kept under cover.

No, sir! So far as the palefaces are concerned, there is little hope in the outlook right now. And the shadow of Johnson is liable to fall athwart the prospect any time during the next few years. Jeffries, on the occasion of his first retirement, said he would hop back into the game if a foreigner ever won the championship from America, and Jack Johnson will make up his mind to don his war paint again, if the supremacy of the black race is threatened.

CANADIAN RUGBY AND THE YANKEE GAME

H. C. Griffith saw Cornell-Pennsylvania game last week and makes the following comparison of the Canadian and American games in the Toronto Star:

So much has been written and so well written during the past few days about the American football game that it is almost impossible to add anything to the criticisms. Still the writer in a moment of weakness promised to give a few of his views in the way of comparison between the game as it is played in Canada and in the United States.

The great outstanding difference is in the matter of offside interference. To the average Canadian offside interference is something to be avoided as destructive of most that is highly cherished in his game; to the American it is the essential, the pivot around which the whole game swings. Take it out of American football and you have at once eliminated practically every means of attack and defence known to American coaches. In fact, it is a very difficult matter to convince American footballers that gains can be made, kicks pulled off, or anything else effective done unless the runner or the kicker be protected by his interference. It itself, interference is not so awful as it sounds, particularly in the open field; as a matter of fact it often is one of the prettiest and cleverest parts of the game, and the team with this department highly developed is always the most feared by others.

The famous "Forward Pass"

Another great difference is the now famous "forward pass," a combination of basketball and lacrosse. This pass must be made from behind the line of scrimmage, and must be caught, or the ball is taken back and one down is counted against the side which was unsuccessful in "completing the pass." This play was introduced to open the game, but after a trial of several years it has proved to be rather a failure, productive of more harm than good, and the consensus of opinion seems to be that it will have to be restricted or else disappear entirely. The latter course seems the better.

In point of tackling the greatest difference lies in the fact that for the most part the Canadian college teams are superior to the American. In the game between Pennsylvania and Cornell, Mercer, of Penn., made run after run, which should have been stopped had Cornell tackled well. True enough here is a rule that the tackler must not leave his feet, but this rule is winked at by coaches and officials alike, and the dive tackle is still considered the proper one.

The Kicking and Catching

In kicking, the Americans have developed to a high degree the spiral punt, the drop kick, and the field goal, but, speaking generally, there is little if any superiority over our game in this department, when one considers the wonderful protection the American back gets to prepare for and carry out his kick. As far as catching is concerned, there seems to be no difference. There are good and bad "hands" in American teams, just as there are in the Canadian. Howe, the Yale captain, fumbled wretchedly in the game against Princeton; both the Penn and Cornell backs fumbled at times, and the record of the big American games this year in the matter of catching shows that no man is so sure that he will not fumble at times.

The absence of any attempt to pass the ball once the play has commenced, strikes the Canadian as a great weakness in the American game. Possession of the ball is so important that no man dare pass in a running play, no matter what chance might present itself. It is absolutely imperative that the man who is carrying the ball when the run commences shall still be the possessor when the play is stopped. This robs the game of one of its most effective and charming features, and there seems to be no logical reason why it could not be used to some extent, at least, in the American game.

Weakness of Attack

The point that has been causing great trouble to the American coaches is the weakness of attack under the present rules. The defence has been strengthened to such a degree that very few of the big colleges have had their line crossed this year in attack plays. The result has been that scoring is now largely confined to drop kicks and field goals (there is no rouge in the American game). How to remedy this is the great question for the rule-makers to decide. One solution would be for the teams to take more chances, and to give up the slavish adherence to possession of the ball, but bold indeed will be the man who suggests—bolder still the coach who introduces any such mode of attack. But the writer has already exceeded his limit.

Just a word as to the possibility and wisdom of a game between a Canadian and American college. This matter has been broached several times, and there is no doubt that the Canadian football public would welcome an international contest, and such a contest would doubtless be of benefit to both games. The greatest difficulty would be to decide on the rules of the contest. One half American and one half Canadian seems a fair solution, but it is not, for the Americans would be practically lost without interference, whereas the Canadians would rapidly fall into the interference game. The advantage would be all with the Canadian college. It would seem as if the game would have to be played under American rules, and even then there are many in Canada who feel that the Canadian players would soon solve the American attack and puzzle the Americans with their open play.

In any event, we on this side of the line have made strong advances towards bringing about this contest, and time alone will tell whether our efforts will be successful or not. We are satisfied with our game, and they with theirs, but it would be a splendid move in the right direction if our season could close every year with the much-talked-of and eagerly-desired international game

Finished Contract.—Mr. R. J. G. Sutherland of Water street, has completed the last job of hot-water heating for Dr. Coutts at Agincourt. Mr. Sutherland spent the week-end with Dr. Zimmerman and is expected home to-night.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BANK HOCKEY LEAGUE

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Bankers' Hockey League was held at the Bank of Montreal on Tuesday, Dec. 5, at 4.30, with Mr. Horace Walkey acting as chairman. The attendance was good and plenty of enthusiasm was shown. This is the second year of the League, and its strength has been increased by the addition of the Toronto Savings and Loan Co. and the Union Bank of Canada, making a total of nine banking institutions represented.

The League, last year, provided some excellent sport, with lively contests. The champions were the Dominion-Ottawa combination.

This season the grouping will not be exactly the same as last year, but an attempt has been made to judge the prospective strength of the various staff, and to make an arrangement that will give the teams an equal chance for the high honours.

The Brock Street Rink has been secured for Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, from five to six o'clock.

It was decided to play teams of six men. The election of officers resulted as follows:

Hon.-President—Mr. P. Campbell, Mr. G. C. Wainwright, Mr. G. W. Morrow, Mr. C. E. McLeod, Mr. C. H. Pinnefather, Mr. J. Crane, Mr. R. W. Travers, Mr. W. H. Dunsford, Mr. V. Eastwood.

President—Mr. H. W. Harper, (Royal).

Vice.-Pres.—Mr. W. H. Walkey, (Montreal).

Sec.-Treas.—Mr. E. E. Brumwell, (Royal).

Executive Committee—One representative from each team, vis.:

Mr. W. Eastwood (Commerce) for Royal-Commerce-Tor. S. & L.

Mr. A. Grant (Dominion) for Montreal-Dominion.

Mr. H. W. Brown (Toronto) for Toronto-N. S.

Mr. V. Corkery (Ottawa) for Ottawa-Union.

The appointment of referees, the selection of colours, and the drawing up of a schedule will be arranged at a meeting to be held just before the playing season opens.

THE GREATEST HEAVYWEIGHT

Who was the most remarkable heavyweight fighter that ever put up his gloves under Marquis of Queensberry rules? Answer—Bob Fitzsimmons. The freckled-faced Cornishman, maker of horseshoes, and built like a reversed pyramid, was the most extraordinary fighter.

Fitz was thirty-five years old when he won the championship of the world from Jim Corbett at Carson City. He was thirty-seven when he lost his title to Jeffries and thirty-nine when beaten by the Californian the second time.

Age is a big factor in this story. It serves to show that the ruddy product of the Antipodes was more extraordinary than Jeffries, who up to the recent disaster at Reno was generally accorded the distinction. Likewise it proves that care of body can combat the advance of years to a certain extent.

Jeffries was twenty-four years old when he beat Fitzsimmons at Coney Island. He was thirty-five years two months and nineteen days old when Johnson whipped him in the "battle of the century," July 4. At thirty-five he is an old man. At this same age Fitz was in the zenith of his great power.

After the two knockouts which Jeffries imposed on him, the Cornishman went out and beat all candidates except Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, with whom he drew, until the total period of his existence totalled forty-three years. What other fighter in the history of pugilism can claim such a record? None.

Fitzsimmons is to be considered all the more extraordinary because of the weight handicap which he suffered after he defeated all the middleweights. Never scaling more than 170 pounds, he had all the punching force of men of fifty pounds more heft.

At twenty-nine Jeffries retired from the ring and rested on his reputation He did much hunting and fishing, but idleness was his principal occupation for six years. And when he was induced to train and knock the packing out of Johnson, his paunch bulged like a submarine boat. He reduced his old weight after much effort. In training he looked as good as he had been when he made mincemeat of Jack Munro, as his farewell fight. But Ed. Dunkhorst could have put up a better battle at Reno than the "Mighty" Jeff.

Jeffries was a great fighter. He was possessed of more abysmal brutishness, as Jack London calls it, than Fitzsimmons, and had he taken care of himself he might have used it on the present champion with credit to himself and the Caucasian race. However, it is a question, and a big one, if he could ever be as remarkable as the slugger from Cornwall.

Many Teams Are Already In Line In The O. H. A.

The first meeting of the new executive committee of the O. H. A. will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 13, at the Telegram office, Toronto, when the teams will be grouped and the various districts arranged.

Tuesday, Dec. 12, will be the last day for receiving entries for teams in the O. H. A., and all must have their fees paid and all outstanding obligations settled in order to be considered in the grouping. The entrance fee for a new club is $5, with $6 additional for each team entered; for clubs already members of the association the fee is $6 per team annual subscription.

Suggestions for grouping should be sent at once to the secretary, W. A. Hewitt, Daily Star Office, Toronto.

The Roster Now.

So far sixty-six teams have paid their fee, as follows:

Two at Stratford.

The Stratford Club notified the O. H. A. yesterday that they intended to place teams in the junior and senior series.

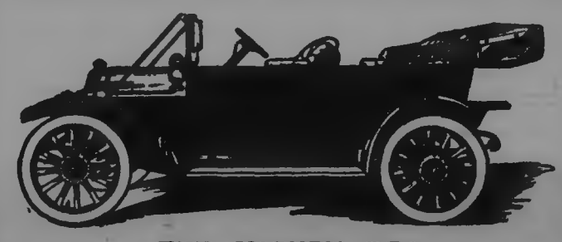
The Kingston Frontenacs will play junior and senior. They wish to thank the delegates who were at the annual convention for electing Jas. T. Sutherland to the executive.

At Waterloo the O. H. A. team expects to have a successful season, with the pros. out of the way, and some excellent material to work with.

Kingston Collegiate Institute intends to enter a team in the junior series.

Niagara Falls wants two intermediate O.H.A. teams. The Maple Leafs are already in, and the West Ends want to enter. The matter will be decided at the first executive meeting. St. Catharines will also have an intermediate team, and will play their games in Welland.

The Markdale and Baden clubs want to be reinstated. They were suspended last year.



THE MIGHTY REO!

Mr. Joseph Duffus Adds This Popular Car to His District Agency

Mr. Jos. Duffus, the enterprising automobile agent of this district, No. 309 George street, who sells the Ford, which is sold at the nominal price of $850 for the touring car and $775 for the roadster, and the celebrated Russel at from $2350.00 and upwards has been for the past year contemplating taking the agency for a good car at a price between these two.

Notwithstanding the fact that during the last two months Mr. Duffus has been offered the agency for nearly every car which is sold at prices ranging from $1000.00 to $2000.00 he, after spending weeks going into the different propositions by visiting the factories and agency, both on the American and Canadian sides of the line, carefully considering the construction, material, workmanship, design and actual value, has finally decided to take up the REO, which is manufactured in St. Catharines, Ont.

To those who are not intimately familiar with the detail construction of motor cars, the lines, neatness, size, equipment and general appearance will appeal, and to those who are the owners of cars or are otherwise, through experience, familiar with the working parts and construction of automobiles will very greatly appreciate the accessibility, the convenience, the very full equipment and finish of the REO in the following description.

The REO is thirty horse power, has 112 inches, wheel base, 34x4in. tires, demountable rims, with one spare rim and tire irons, foot excellerator, cut out, exhaust horn, clutch and service break on one foot pedal and emergency on the other, both breaks on the rear wheels, one internal, the other external.

The body is built absolutely plain with fore doors and on a straight line with the top of the engine, no projections whatever or levers outside, not even the horn.

The equipment includes foot rail, robe rail, speedometer, three oil lamps, pres-to-lite gas tank and head lights and glass wind shield, all enameled and nickle plated, silk mohair top and envelope.

The transmission, differential, propeller shaft and both axles are running in Timken bearings. The motor is so constructed as to enable one to take up the main bearings and connecting rods without even taking off the crank case. The carburetor is supplied with a hot air tube as well as a hot water tube, thus increasing its efficiency. The magneto is a National and is noted for its accessibility, and can be opened and adjusted while in motion. It has a selective gear transmission, multiple disc clutch, three speeds, forward and reverse.

That the REO car is most conveniently and beautifully equipped is beyond doubt. It has a standing record for efficiency, reliability and hardy service as well as a graceful appearance.

The REO two passenger torpedo roadster has the same thirty horse power motor and equipment. The prices with all the above equipment are: Five passenger $1500.00, roadster $1400.00.

Mr. Duffus is looking forward to supplying the people of this district, who wish a car at about the above price and catalogues will be ready for distribution at an early date, at which time he will be pleased to supply all those desirous of obtaining them.

ARE YOUR EYES BAD?

A. A. Fowler's Sensible Suggestion For a Christmas Gift

The spirit of Christmas is already beginning to manifest itself in the general business and social life of the city. In the majority of homes, extensive preparations are being made for a season of rejoicing and thanksgiving There are those in our midst however, who will not be able to enter into the spirit of Christmas, as the season demands, namely, the blind. Take an example, and act accordingly. There are people going blind. There are people going blind every day with the sight-saving instruments at their very hands.

Now that all your Christmas presents are purchased, why not buy yourself a Christmas gift? Make your eyes the present of a pair of spectacles or eye-glasses. You will realise later that it was the most profitable and the most valuable of any of your gifts. There is another thing to consider. Where are you going to get those glasses? Where you can procure the most up-to-date style, and most suitable quality, is, naturally, your reply. Then let us give you a tip on this.

Mr. A. A. Fowler, eyesight specialist, (Honor Graduate of the Empire College of Ophthalmology, Toronto; Fellow and Doctor of Optics of the Northern Illinois College of Ophthalmology and Otology, Chicago), with the Nugent Drug Co., 386 George street, can supply you with the glasses you need.

A very large and complete stock of glasses and frames of the best makes only are kept on hand, comprising nearly every style of frame that is made. A workshop, where all kinds of repairs are made, is immediately adjoining the Optical Parlours, and fitted with all conveniences. These beautifully fitted parlours are modelled after the best of those in use in the largest American cities, and are a credit to the proprietor and to Peterborough. Extensive improvements have lately been inaugurated, necessitated by the rapidly increasing business of Mr. Fowler, which, during the time he has been in business here, has grown to large proportions. The extent of the business done is shown by the large cabinet full of records, where full particulars of every case treated are kept by the improved card system.

Among the many up-to-date instruments Mr. Fowler has installed is a phoroptometer, a muscular testing instrument for testing the power of the eyes, and investigating any muscular deficiency. He also has the opthalmoscope and retinoscope, which is used for looking into the eye and correcting astigmatism.

In addition to his already splendid grinding machine, Mr. Fowler expects to have installed by January 1st another automatic Lens Grinding Machine, which will grind 12 lenses at a time, and from 180 to 200 per day. This will mean a saving of time, and, as a result, repairs can be made much more rapidly. There is nothing so precious as good vision, nothing so provocative of misery as headaches or bad eyesight, and good eyesight is the exception rather than the rule. Mr. Fowler is an expert specialist of the eyesight and understands thoroughly the correct treatment for the eyes, and you will profit by giving him a call.

How to Get in Good Humour for the Festal Season

See WM. HAWTREY and His Company of Distinguished London Players THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14

Story of The Play

Mr. William Hawtrey and his notable company of London players will be seen in the three act farce "Dear Old Billy", which is being classified as the laughing hit of two continents. This piece comes almost direct from Chicago where it recently closed a run of nearly four months. The critics of that city have been unanimous in praise of the comedy, and the presenting company is spoken of as being one of the best organizations seen in Chicago in many years. The action of the piece centres around a kindly, lovable old gentleman (William Smith), portrayed by Mr. Hawtrey, who for twenty years has been the slave of a domineering woman. He at last rebels and has articles of separation drawn, that, on penalty of forfeiting her annual allowance, prevents her annoying, speaking to him, or making known, in any way, her relationship to him. There is no clause in the articles, however, preventing her being wherever he is, which fact furnishes the playwright with opportunities for situations that are extremely laughable. THE AWAKENING OF CHINA

Fourteen years ago a number of young Chinese, with their Emperor at their head, dreamed a great dream. They were going to make a new China. All the old ideas about the reactionary Celestial were to be swept away in a month. They would have Parliaments, a free press, western schools, railways, telegraphs, and the like. They would build factories, they would dress in European clothes, cut off their pigtails—in short, they would become altogether modern men.

The young Emperor, as absolute ruler of his land, started to make his dreams into realities. Day after day edict succeeded edict, each one more sweeping than the others. As these orders went forth for the prevention of corruption, the changes of dress, the opening of new schools, and the like, the old officials set in their ancient ways, grew exceedingly nervous and one old lady, the Dowager Empress of the Empire, began to act.

The Rise of Yuan.

The young Emperor felt secure because, in addition to ordering reforms he had taken some plans to defend himself against attack. There was one soldier, General Yuan by name, whom he had encouraged to create a new army, an army equipped with modern rifles and guns. The men around the court knew that these soldiers could easily overcome the old type of braves with double-handled swords, with jingles and matchlocks.

Then an amazing thing happened. One night Yuan moved up his troops, but not to defend the young Emperor. The palace was surrounded, the Emperor was made a prisoner, the old Dowager Empress stepped into power, and the dream of a new era was shattered. Two or three of the chief reformers, Kang Yuwei and others escaped; others were executed. It was General Yuan, the trusted right-hand man of the Emperor, who had done this thing.

Here was the start of the revolutionary movement that is arousing China to-day. The reformers who escaped went abroad and rallied other men around them. They formed organizations of Chinese from Vancouver to Limehouse; they raised funds; they bought arms; they penetrated in disguise their own country again and again, ever preaching revolt. For thirteen years they agitated, plotted and prepared. They seized hold of every idea that could inflame the hatred of the people against the government. For instance, the imperial clan, from which the Emperor comes, is not Chinese, but Manchu, descendants from a northern tribe of Chinese three hundred years ago. The Manchus have many privileges. They receive pensions from the state, they occupy a large proportion of the high offices, their women are more independent than Chinese women, they are a hated, dominant clan. The revolutionists were quick to see that if they could obtain their purpose in no other way they could inflame national hatred against the Manchu government.

Meanwhile a wonderful thing had been happening. General Yuan, although he had overthrown the young Emperor's reform party, was himself, at heart, a more sincere reformer than any of them. He, too, hated corruption, and, too, believed that the only way in which China could be saved, was by adopting western customs and western habits.

Why, then, it may be asked, feeling this, had he betrayed the Emperor? There are several reasons, and they are not to Yuan's discredit. In the first place the Emperor's party intended to kill Yuan's patron, who had helped him to power, the patron appealed to Yuan for aid, and every feeling of gratitude urged Yuan to help him. In the second place Yuan felt, as many others did, that the reformers of 1898 were too crude, too hasty, and too ill-advised. They wished to change China in a day—China which had stood for thousands of years. Such hasty moves could only in the end defeat themselves.

Yuan, in more cautious fashion, set about his reforms. He started to win the good will of Europeans. He improved his army, making it a remarkably efficient body.

The Dowager Empress rewarded Yuan with the office of Governor of Shantung. When the Boxer trouble broke out Yuan proved that his professed love of Europeans was genuine. While every other part of China was seething with hatred of white men, and while massacres were of almost daily occurrence, European life and property were safe where Yuan governed. The Boxers tried to kill him.

But Yuan triumphed. The Boxer movement was suppressed. The men who advocated it were sent in to disgrace, and General Yuan became the greatest Viceroy in Peking. Then he started doing the very things that the reformers of 1898 had dreamed about. He made Peking and Tientsin into modern cities, with wide streets, with electric light, with modern police forces. He swept away the old prisons and put in place of these reform establishments that might well set an example to some European nations. He started schools, run on western lines. He opened technical training establishments for working men's sons. In nine years he produced a change such as men had never thought possible. Railways were extended and newspapers sprung up throughout the land. China had thrown off her mediaeval habits.

A Great Campaign.

He was hated by two sets of people; by the old reformers on the one hand, whom he had driven into exile, and by the old officials whose routine he had disturbed. The old officials plotted, and on the death of the Dowager Empress overthrew him. Yuan was driven forth into exile and almost slain. But the reforms that he had begun went on.

Meanwhile, the revolutionary party was conducting an immense campaign. Among its followers was one young western-educated Southern Chinaman, Dr. Sun Yatsen, who by his power and his capacity for intrigue quickly became a leader. The revolutionist received considerable encouragement from Japan, and at the close of the Russo-Japanese war, they quietly bought up numbers of arms there and smuggled them over into China. They had organizations everywhere, but particularly in the south.

On two or three occasions the revolutionists tried to start uprisings. In every instance they were suppressed.

Then early this year things began to wear a more ominous aspect. Thousands of Chinamen were profoundly dissatisfied with the conduct of the Government. They feared that Japan was going to take Manchuria. Young Chinese educated in England and America, came back home disgusted at the corruption and inefficiency of many government officials. Provincial Parliaments had been called together, and then a National Assembly had been formed—formed practically against the will of dominant Manchus. The Chinese read in their papers what was going on in the world; their provincial Assemblies discussed matters with the utmost freedom; the day came when the power of officials who rested their claims on mediaeval superstitions and the like could no longer endure.

Mat of the Future.

Many observers think that it was the great heat of the present summer which led to the labour war in England. It was undoubtedly the extraordinary summer which immediately led to the revolution in China. There were floods, famines and other disorders. The revolutionists, with their spies everywhere knew of this. In one province the people disliked the coming of new railways. The revolutionists fanned their dislike. In another they were angry because reform was so slow. The revolutionists echoed their anger. Then came mysteries outbreaks—local riotings it was at first thought. The rioting grew more serious. From being local, it became general and almost before the Peking authorities knew what had happened, a revolutionary army was formed, a Viceroy and a general had thrown off their allegiance and a Chinese Republic was proclaimed.

The events since then, the recall of Yuan and the battle of Hankow, are history that need not be repeated again.

English readers may as well understand once for all that whether the revolution succeeds or fails China is bound to become an enormously strong modern power. Her instincts are not military. She does not desire conquest. The vision of vast hordes of Mongol soldiers swarming over Europe will probably never be realized. But what we will see is a spread of Chinese manufactures. The Yellow Peril will be industrial, not military. Already Chinese ironis competing with American on the coast of the Pacific. Soon Chinese cotton, Chinese manufactures of a hundred kinds, will be found in the European markets underselling our own. Whether the revolutions succeeds or fails, New China, wake, alert, with all our Western knowledge and all her Oriental training, will face us and will constitute one of the greatest problems of the twentieth century.

FINED $1,000

UTICA, N.Y., DEC. 9.—When Edwin H. Risley, an aged lawyer of this city, wrote too little words with a typewriter on an affidavit which he had abstracted from the county court house at Herkimer, N. Y., he never thought his work would be detected, let alone that he would be convicted and fined $1,000.

After he had replaced the affidavit he felt that he was absolutely secure. He had only added the two words "the same" on a typewritten page. Handwriting he calculated, might be identified, but typewriting, never.

The affidavit was that of Edward R. Gilman in the case of Lewis Bennett vs. the Iron Clad Manufacturing Company. Briefly Bennett claimed certain royalties on patents of pieced metal baskets which had been manufactured by the Iron Clad Company.

Last February before the fourth trial began, an idea came to Edwin H. Risley, who had represented Bennet in the previous trials. He would add the words "the same" to the affidavit of Edward R. Gilman dated December 1, 1904, which would make it appear that the Iron Clad Company admitted that the pieced metal baskets it manufactured were the same as Bennet's.

The fourth trial came up early in February at Herkimer. Attorneys for the Iron Clad Company asked that the suit be thrown out of court by the reason that the plaintiff did not show that the baskets made by the company were the same.

Risley jumped to his feet.

"Your Honour," he said, "the defendant admits that the baskets are the same. Read the affidavit."

Was Tampered With.

But one of the lawyers examined the affidavit more closely. He discovered that the page was a carbon copy and not a ribbon copy, as were all the other pages. Some one had been tampering with the affidavit.

Further investigation was made. The clerks at the Court House declared Risley had asked to see the papers a few days before, and on the succeeding day. This proved that he had had the opportunity to abstract the affidavit.

Risley, when arrested, vigorously protested his innocence. He was seventy and had practised law for nearly fifty years. He was a civil war veteran and a citizen of the highest standing in the community.

Meanwhile the prosecuting attorney of Herkimer County, called in William I. Kinsley, of New York, an examiner of questioned documents.

Different Type.

He found that the main part of the affidavit was written in Remington pica type, while the words "the same," were written in Underwood medium Roman.

A search of Risley's law office at Utica, revealed the fact that he had an Underwood machine with medium Roman type, but there were thousands of Underwood machines.

Specimens of the writing of Risley's machine compared with the writing of the words "the same" on the affidavit, however, showed exactly the same slant and the same peculiarities. The same letters were defective in exactly the same places.

Even this did not prove that Risley wrote the two words on the document. It was necessary to show that no other machine could write the words "the same" exactly as they appeared.

Examining each letter carefully, Kinsley discovered that there were fourteen distinctive marks that differentiated the letters. Parts of letters were missing, serifs were gone—fourteen distinguishing marks in just six letters.

Early in October, when Risley was placed on trial, Prof. Virgil Snyder, of Cornell University, was called to testify what probability there was of the existence of another machine that would write the words "the same" with fourteen hall marks exactly in the same places as they appeared in the words of the document.

Prof. Synder testified that there was only one other machine in 3,000,000,000 that could write the words 'the same' exactly as they were written on the document, the law of probability determining that.

Stoutly Denied Charge.

Risley stoutly denied that he wrote the two words or even knew that they were written. He had numerous character witnesses. A former lawyer of the Iron Clad Company testified that it was quite likely that he himself had ordered the words 'the same' added to the affidavit, but when the jury heard William J. Kinsley's evidence, and Prof. Snyder's testimony, that only one machine in 3,000,000,000 could have written the two words, they brought in a verdict of guilty, and Edwin J. Risley was fined $1,000 and ordered committed to the county jail until his fine was paid.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

All Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo. — "For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl." —Mrs. Dema Bethune, Sikeston, Mo.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It is more widely and successfully used than any other remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed. Why don't you try it?

"THE AVENGER"

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Wrayson, from his seat in the opposite corner of the cab, watched her with growing sympathy. In her very conformity to type, she represented so naturally a real and living unit of humanity. Her poor commonplace prettiness was already on the wane, stamped out by the fear and trouble of the last few months. Yet inane though her features, lacking altogether strength or distinction, there was stamped into them something of that dumb, dog-like fidelity to some object which redeemed them from utter insignificance. Wrayson, as he watched her, found himself thinking more kindly of the dead man himself. In his vulgar, selfish way, he had probably been kind to her—he must have done something to have kindled this flame of dogged, persevering affection. Already he scarcely doubted that Morris Barnes and Augustus Howard had been the same person. Within a very few minutes of her entering the flats, there remained no doubt at all. With a low moan, like a dumb animal mortally hurt, she sank down upon the nearest chair, clasping the photograph which Sydney Barnes had passed her in her hands.

For a few moments there was silence. Then she looked up—at Wrayson. Her lips moved but no words came. She began again. This time he was able to catch the indistinct whisper.

"Where is he?"

Wrayson took a seat by her side upon the sofa.

"You do not read the newspaper?" he asked.

She shook her head.

"Not much. My eyes are not very good, and it tires me to read."

"I am afraid," he said gently, "that it will be bad news."

A little sob caught in her throat.

"Go on," she faltered.

"He is dead." Wrayson said simply.

She fainted away.

Wrayson hurried downstairs to his own flat for some brandy. When he returned the girl was still unconscious. Her pocket was turned inside out and the front of her dress was disordered. Sydney Barnes was bending close over her. Wrayson pushed him roughly away.

"You can wait, at least, until she is well," he said contemptuously.

Sydney Barnes was wholly unabashed. He watched Wrayson pour brandy between the girl' slips, bathe her temples, and chafe her hands. All the time he stood doggedly waiting close by. No considerations of decency or humanity would weigh with him for one single second. The fever of his great desire still ran like fire through his veins. He did not think of the girl as a human creature at all. Simply there was a pair of lips there which might point out to him the way to Paradise.

She opened her eyes at last. Sydney Barnes came a step nearer, but Wrayson pushed him once more roughly away.

"You are feeling better?" he asked kindly.

She nodded, and struggled up into a sitting posture.

"Tell me," she said, "how did he die? It must have been quite sudden. Was it an accident?—or—or—"

He saw the terror in her eyes, and he spoke quickly. All the time, he found himself wondering how it was that she was guessing at the truth. "We are afraid," he said, "that he was murdered. It is surprising that you did not read about it in the papers."

She shook her head.

"I do not read much," she said, "and the name was different. Who was it—that killed him?"

"No one knows," he answered.

"When was it?" she asked.

He told her the date. She repeated it tearfully.

"He was down with me the day before," she said. "He was terribly excited all the time, and I know that he was a little afraid of something happening to him. He had been threatened!"

"Do you know by whom?" Wrayson asked

She shook her head.

"He never told me," she answered. "He didn't tell me much. But he was very, very good to me. I was at the refreshment room at London Bridge when I first met him. He used to come in and see me every day. Then he began to take me out, and at last he found me a little house down at Putney, and I was so happy. I had been so tired all my life," she added, with a little sigh, "and down there I did nothing but rest and rest and wait for him to come. It was too good to last, of course, but I didn't think it would end like this!"

Quietly but very persistently Sydney Barnes insisted on being heard.

"It's my turn now," he said, standing by Wrayson's side. "Look here, Miss, I'm his brother. You can see that, can't you?"

"You are something like him," she admitted, "only he was much, much nicer to look at than you."

"Never mind that,' he continued eagerly. "I'm his brother, his nearest relative. Everything he left behind belongs to me!"

"Not—quite everything," she protested.

"What do you mean?" he asked sharply.

"You may be his brother," she answered, "but I," holding out her left hand a little nervously, "I was his wife-"

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Both men had been totally unprepared for the girl's timid avowal. To Wrayson, however, after the first mild shock of surprise, it was of no special import. To Sydney Barnes, although he made a speedy effort to grapple with the situation, it came very much as a thunderclap.

"You have your certificate?" he asked sharply. "You were married properly in a church?"

She nodded.

"We were married at Dulwich Parish Church," she answered. "It was nearly a year ago."

"Very well," Sydney Barnes said. "It is lucky that I am here to look after your interests. We divide everything, you know."

She seemed about to cry.

"I want Augustus," she murmured. "He was very good to me."

"Look here," he said, "Augustus always seemed to have plenty of oof. didn't he?"

She nodded.

"He was very generous with it. too," she declared. "He gave me lots of beautiful things."

His eyes travelled over her hands and neck, destitute of ornaments.

"Where are they?" he asked sharply.

"I've had to sell them," she answered, "to get along at all. I hated to, but I couldn't starve."

The young man's face darkened.

"Come," he said. "We'd better have no secrets from one another. You know how to get at his money, I suppose?"

"Indeed I don't know anything about it," she declared.

She shook her head.

"You must know where it came from," he persisted.

"I don't," she repeated. "Indeed I don't. He never told me and I never asked him. I understood that he had made it in South Africa."

Sydney Barnes wiped the perspiration from his forehead.

"Look here," he said in a voice which, notwithstanding his efforts to control it, trembled a little, "this is a very serious matter for us. You don't want to go back to the refreshment bar again, do you?"

"I don' care what I do," she answered dully.

swered dully. "I hated that, but I shall hate everything now that he is gone."

"It's only for a day or two you'll feel like that," he declared. "We've got a right, you and I, to whatever Morry left behind, and whatever happens I mean to have my share. Look around you!"

It was not an inspiring spectacle. The room was dirty, and almost devoid of furniture.

"All that I've had out of it so far," he declared, "is free quarters here. The rent's paid up to the end of the year. I've had to sell the furniture bit by bit to keep alive. It was a cheap lot, cheap and showy, and it fetched jolly little. Morry always did like to have things that looked worth more than he gave for them. Even his jewellery was sham—every bally bit of it. There wasn't a real pearl or a real diamond amongst the lot. But there's no doubt about the money. I've had the bank book. He was worth a cool two thousand a year was Morry—that's five hundred each quarter day, you understand, and somewhere or other there must be the bonds or securities from which this money came. He never kept them here. I'll swear to that. Therefore, they must be somewhere that you ought to know about."

"Very likely," she said. "I have a parcel he gave me to take care of."

The effect of her simple words on Barnes was almost magical. The dull colour streamed into his sallow cheeks, he shook all over with excitement. His voice, when he spoke, was almost hysterical. He had been so near to despair. This indeed had been almost his last hope.

"A parcel!" he gasped. "A parcel! What sort of a parcel? Did he say that it was important?"

"It's just a long envelope tied up with red tape and sealed," she answered. "Yes! he made a great fuss about leaving it with me."

"Tell us all about it,' he demanded greedily. "Oh Lord! Oh Lord! Be quick!"

"It must have been almost the very day it happened," she said, with a little shudder. "He came down in the afternoon and he seemed a bit queer, as though he had something on his mind. He took out the envelope once or twice and looked at it. Once he said to me, 'Agnes,' he said, 'there are men in London who, if they knew that I carried this with me, would kill me for it.' I was frightened, and I begged him to leave it somewhere. I think he said that he had to have it always with him because he couldn't think of a safe hiding-place for it. Just as he was going, though, he came back and took it out of his pocket once more.."

"He left it with you?" Barnes exclaimed. "You have it safe"

She nodded.

"I was going to tell you. 'Look here, Agnes,' he said, 'I'm nervous to-night. I don't want to carry this about with me. I shall want it to-morrow and I'll come down for it. To-night's a dangerous night for me to be carrying it about.' Those were just about his last words. He gave me the packet and I begged him to be careful. Then he kissed me and off he went, smoking a cigar, and as cheerful as though he were going to a wedding."

She began to cry again, but Barnes broke in upon her grief.

"Didn't he tell you anything more about it?" he demanded.

"He told me—if anything happened to him," she sobbed, "to open it."

"We must do so," he declared. "We must do so at once. There must be a quarter's dividends overdue. We can get the money to-morrow, and then—oh! my God!" he exclaimed, as though the very anticipation made him faint. "Where is the packet?"

"At the bottom of my tin trunk in my rooms," she answered. "I had to leave the house. I couldn't pay the rent any longer."

"Where are the rooms?" he demanded. "We'll go there now."

"In Labrador Street," she answered. "It's a poor part, but I've only a few shillings in the world."

"We'll have a cab," he declared, rising. "Mr. Wrayson will lend us the money, perhaps?"

"I will come with you," Wrayson said quietly.

"We needn't bother you to do that," Sydney Barnes declared, with a suspicious glance.

The young woman looked towards him appealingly. He nodded reassuringly.

"I think," he said, "that it will be better for me to come. I am concerned in this business after all, you know"

"I don't see how," Barnes declared sullenly. "If this young lady is my sister-in-law, surely she and I can settle up our own affairs."

Wrayson stood with his back to the door, facing them.

"I hope," he said, "that you will not, either of you, be disappointed in what you find in that packet. But I think it is only right to warn you I have reason to believe that you will not find any securities or bonds there at all! I believe that you will find that packet to consist of merely a bundle of old letters and a photograph!"

Barnes spat upon the floor. He was shaking with fright and anger

"I don't believe it," he declared "What can you know about it?"

Wrayson shrugged his shoulders.

"Look here," he said, "the matter is easily settled. We will put this young lady in a cab and she shall bring the packet to my flat below. You and she shall open it, and if you find securities there I have no more to say, except to wish you both luck. If, on the other hand, you find the letters, it will be a different matter"

The girl had risen to her rfeet.

"I would rather go alone," she said. "If you will pay my cab, I will bring the packet straight back."

* * * * * *

Wrayson and Barnes waited in the former's flat. Barnes drank two brandies and soda and walked restlessly up and down the room. Wrayson was busy at the telephone and carried on a conversation for some moments in French. Directly he had finished, Barnes turned to him.

"Whom were you talking to?" he demanded.

"A friend of yours," he answered. "I have asked her to come around for a few minutes."

"A friend of mine?"

"The Baroness!"

The colour burned once more in his cheeks. He looked down at his attire with dissatisfaction.

"I didn't want to see her again just yet," he muttured.

Wrayson smiled.

"She won't look at your clothes," he remarked, "and I rather want her here."

Barnes was suddenly suspicious.

"What for?" he demanded. "What has she got to do with the affair? I don't have strangers present."

"My young friend," Wrayson said, "I may just as well warn you that I think you are going to be disappointed. I am almost certain that I know the contents of that packet. You will find that it consists, as I told you before, not of securities at all, but simply a few old letters."

Barnes' eyes narrowed.

"Whatever they are," he said, "they meant a couple of thousand a year to Morry, and they were worth his life to somebody! How do you account for that, eh?"

"You want the truth?" Wrayson asked.

"Yes!"

"Your brother was a blackmailer!"

The breath came through Barnes' teeth with a little hiss. He realized his position almost at once. He was trapped.

He walked up to Wrayson's side. His voice shook, but he was in deadly earnest.

Look here," he said, "the contents of that packet, whatever they may be, are mine—mine and hers! You have nothing to do with the matter at all. I will not have you in the room when they are opened."

Wrayson shrugged his shoulders.

"The packet will be opened here," he said, "and I shall certainly be present."

Barnes ground his teeth.

"If you touch one of those letters or papers or whatever they may be, you shall be prosecuted for theft," he declared. "I swear it!"

Wrayson smiled.

"I will run the risk," he declared. 'Ah! Baroness, this is kind of you," he added, throwing open the door and ushering her in. 'There is a young friend of yours here who is dying to renew his acquaintance with you."

She smiled delightfully at Sydney Barnes, and threw back her cloak. She had just come in from the opera, and diamonds were flashing from her neck and bosom. Her gown was exquisite, the touch of her fingers an enchantment. It was impossible for him to resist the spell of her presence.

"You have been very unkind," she declared. "You have not been to see me for a very long time. I do not think that I shall forgive you. What do you say Mr. Wrayson? Do you think that he deserves it?"

Wrayson smiled as he threw open the door once more. He felt that the next few minutes might prove interesting.

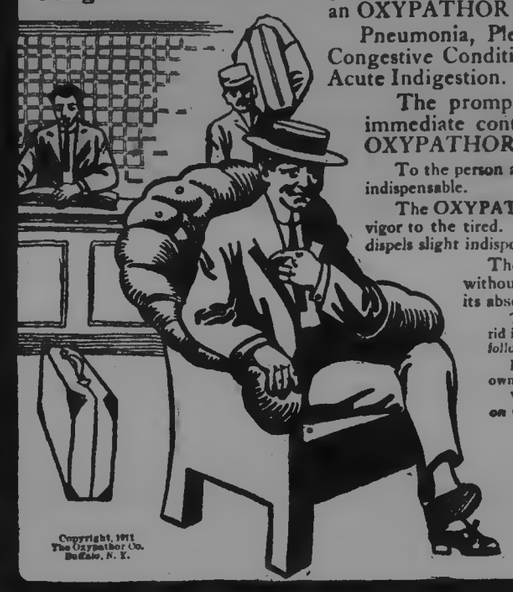
Sudden Illness Has No Terrors For The Owner Of An Oxypathor.

NO ANXIETY is so acute as that felt by the person obliged to be absent from those most near and dear. The lives of these loved ones are the most precious of all things—the guarding of their lives the most important of all things. You need not worry if there's an OXYPATHOR in your home. The owner of an OXYPATHOR is safe from sudden, dangerous diseases such as: Pneumonia, Pleurisy, Peritonitis, Croup, La Grippe, Quinsy, Congestive Conditions, Dysentery, Inflammation of all kinds and Acute Indigestion.



The prompt use of an OXYPATHOR gives the patient immediate control of the disease. Continuing the use of the OXYPATHOR for a short while cures the trouble.

To the person at home or the traveller abroad the OXYPATHOR is equally indispensable.

The OXYPATHOR is not only for invalids. It readily and naturally restores vigor to the tired. It brings sleep to the weary body and worn out nerves. It dispels slight indispositions of all sorts.

The OXYPATHOR applied to your body compels your blood, without further thought or effort on your part, to greatly increase its absorption of oxygen from the air.

The immediate effect of the OXYPATHOR is to oxygenate the blood and rid it of its impurities. As an inevitable result, complete restoration of health follows.

CARTER'S PERIL
(A Short Story)

(By George Hart)

Th big boulder had stealthily worked itself loose, altogether unsuspected by the dozen quarrymen clinking away three hundred feet beneath. But the dribble of small rocks that preceded its downward rush was their salvation. Shouting in wild alarm the workmen dropped drills and sledges, and scattered as the block crashed down on the very spot where three men had been working a quarter-minute before. The fragments bounded clear across the narrow gorge and spattered its sides; the air reeked with powdered limestone.

Carter, the foreman, drew a long breath as he glanced at the fallen mass and then at the pale, terrified faces of his men. His voice shook a trifle. "Knock off," he said. "No man shall strike another blow until those walls are as clean as a whistle."

That afternoon Carter dropped over the brink near the engine house in a boatswain's chair, bar in hand. The job was important, and he wanted to make sure that it was done right. A huge rock was overhanging that must be dislodged.

Down he sank past weathered drill marks made by his grandfather fifty years ago, when the quarry was shallow and young. Soon he reached the spot from which the block had fallen that morning. Nothing dangerous remained there, save a few fragments, which he easily dislodged.

Arriving at the dangerous projecting rock, Carter began pecking away at the point with his bar. Into the open seams he poked the sharp steel, pushing, prying, but his most determined efforts failed. Apparently the mass was immovable.

He gave the signal to lower.

Not forty feet below he came to rest before another bad spot. Attacking this vigorously, he was rewarded by feeling it loosen under his bar. But he still kept thinking of the rock above him. He almost felt sorry that he had passed it, but it was too late to go back now. The three men overhead were strong, but they could never hoist him to the top. His only road to safety lay straight down to the bottom, and every inch of it was right beneath that overhanging point.

All the time he was striking that second projection with his steel, his dread of the first increased. He could not shake it off. The rock drew his eyes upward. Two or three times he thought it was falling. Cold drops bedewed his face. He worked faster and harder than he had ever worked before.

The rock before him was now ready to fall. A final push on his bar dislodged it from its socket. For a second it hung tottering, then shot shrilling down, to thunder on the bottom far beneath. While watching it Carter almost forgot the boulder above.

Suddenly a small rock struck his shoulder a sharp blow. With a start he gave a quick glance upward. Was it the effect of his imagination? It certainly seemed as if the limestone point projected further, as if it hung insecurely on the face of the cliff.

There was a grinding noise. A cold shiver ran through the quarryman. As he stared upward, unable to take his fascinated eyes from the overhanging boulder he could think of nothing but a crushed, flattened dinner pail he had seen that morning on the quarry bottom.

Seconds passed as he hung there numb, waiting. Then his reason reasserted itself. He must do something, the only thing. Straight below lay his only safety.

He tried to speak, but at first his voice would not come. Finally he found uttrance.

"Jim," he gasped. "Lower away, quick! There's a rock over me ready to fall!"

Overhead there was an exclamation of horror. Jim had heard and understood. Presently the boatswain's chair began to drop.

Down he went. Jim was lowering away as fast as he dared. Lower, lower, lower; twenty, thirty, forty feet. He could not tear his eyes from the rock, beetling high above in the sunlight. With every second, every foot, his hold on life was strengthened; yet as the possibility of escape increased, his anxiety became more poignant, the suspense more terrible.

Until this time he had taken it for a fact that he could do nothing to help himself. Now he began to swing slightly to and fro, and it came to him like a flash why he was holding that bar. By bracing the point against the wall before him he could lengthen his movement from side to side.

Barely had the idea entered his brain when he gave a strong push that sent him several feet sidewise from beneath the rock. But although he could start himself swinging, he could do little to quicken or retard his motion, and the rock might fall when he was precisely under it. The deeper he sank the longer became his swing. If the boulder would only fall when he was at one extreme or the other!

At the end of the broad arc he was now describing across the face of the cliff an open seam suddenly caught the quarryman's eye. He stabbed his bar at it. The point caught, but the jerk of his backward swing twitched the steel from his hands. It hung a moment in the hole, then fell clanging.

Down, still down, his eyes on the dwindling terror above. Barely thirty of the three hundred and fifty feet were left. His courage rose as he swung out almost over the deep well-hole at the bottom.

All at once a thin spray of small rocks spurted from beneath the boulder. Horror paralyzed him. He held his breath. But the big rock still hung balanced above.

Out he swung to the further end of the arc. Now, let it fall, now, now! It could not hold much longer; it would catch him when he came back. He closed his eyes.

Like a ray of light an idea penetrated Carter's brain. He snatched his knife from his outside pocket. A moment later it was open. He waited breathless.

To risk another swing back would be folly, suicide. Cut he must, no matter where he fell, and that while he could take advantage of his momentum away from the centre, before the backward swing began that would hurl him under the rock.

The well-hole lay almost below. He would risk it. Twenty feet was a long fall, but better a broken arm or leg than death. He gave one strong, sudden slash at the rope above his head, and that instant his eyes saw the boulder part suddenly from the cliff. The thunder of its fall was the last sound he heard, as he plunged feet first into the pool.

There were fifteen feet of water in the hole, but he struck bottom and struck it hard. Still, no bones were broken, and soon he rose to the surface. Two or three strokes brought him to the edge, and he drew himself out, bruised and limping, but safe!

A voice reached Carter's ears. He looked up and saw Jim's white face peering over the brink three hundred and fifty feet above.

JACK AND ANNIE

It was the day after Christmas that the fun began for Jack and Annie. It is Christmas Day that the fun is for most children, but Jack and Annie, who were brother and sister, were taught the text, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Therefore, they had made up their minds to give half of their presents away to poor children.

So Jack's mother put on their coats and wrapped them up well to make sure that there was no danger of them catching cold, as the day was quite cold and the snow very deep, especially in the country where they lived.

Jack got his sleigh and Annie sat in it, as he was seven years old and his sister Annie was two years younger. Jack then got a robe and tucked it in around Annie, and putting the toys all around and over the robe, trying to make his little sister look as much like Santa as possible. When everything was ready Jack and Annie said good-bye to their mother, who was standing at the back door of the little cottage, which stood on the shore of Lake Erie. Then Jack, taking the rope in his hand, scampered off through the deep snow pulling his little sister in the sleigh.

But I have not told you yet where they were going. They were going across the fields to their playmates, whose names were Mary and Willie. Their mother had been sick with a cold, and their father was away with the wood-cutters. Therefore, Christmas had been quite lonesome for them and Santa Claus had forgot to visit them. At first Jack seemed to think it fun to pull the sleigh over the frozen snow, but soon when he came to an icy slope he did not think it was much fun. For he only got half way up when he fell, and as it was very slippery he and the sleigh came sliding down backwards. He tried again to pull his sister up, but he fell as before; so he had to lift Annie out while he would pull the sleigh up the hill. Then, as Annie was too small to be able to walk on he had to come down and help his sister up.

Then there was a hill to go down, so Jack sat on the sleigh, and, indeed, he found it quite a relief to have a little ride, although he had a hard time to keep it from running into the trees. He seemed to be quite near the house now to which he was going, since he had got over the hill which hid his view from it. It was level and easy running all the rest of the way. Annie got it into her head she should like to pull Jack for a while, so he willing agreed. But it did not last long, for Annie had only pulled a few yards when she turned round and told him that she was tired, and thought that she had pulled him a long way. Jack laughed, and told her that it was her turn to pull him home.

Annie said she would. Of course, she had no idea how hard it was to pull. Jack, feeling rested, got up and started off again, and it was not long till they found themselves at the house where Mary and Willie lived. Annie sat in the sleigh while Jack went up and knocked at the door. Mary came to the door, and Jack asked if Willie was in. Mary called him, and they three went out to the sleigh where Annie was sitting. Jack then handed Mary the presents, while Willie gazed anxiously at a lovely little sailboat which Annie held in her hand as she looked at Willie, as much as to say, "this is for you."

After the presents were given out, the children played for a little while. If Annie had had her way they would have played till dark, but Jack said that they had better go home, for their mother had warned them before they left home to be sure and leave early in order to get home before darkness set in. They had nearly a mile to go, but as they did not play on the way they soon reached home.

When they got home they found that their father was home and supper was ready. The two children sat down and ate a hearty supper. After it was over they all sat down around the fireplace. Jack and Annie declared that they had never had such a pleasant day in all their lives; and, indeed, their father and mother felt very happy to think that their little ones were so kind to their playmates.

The greatest kind of Christmas present the greatest Christmas present of its kind, the

Edison Phonograph

a gift for ALL the family, a gift for ALL the year, and for ALL the years to come

THINK of the money that is thrown away on trifles at Christmas time—the candy that is eaten, the toys that are broken, the Christmas cards that are merely glanced at and thrown away. What have you to show for last year's Christmas?

Now think of the Edison Phonograph—the gift of a lifetime, that brings to every member of your family all of the very kind of entertainment each prefers—not merely for a day or a year, but for always. That's what makes the Edison the greatest kind of gift.

The Edison brings you the four great advantages which you should look for in a sound-reproducing instrument, and which you will find only in the Edison—exactly the right volume of sound for your home; the sapphire reproducing point, which does not scratch or wear the records and lasts forever—no changing of needles; Amberol Records, which play twice as long as the ordinary records, rendering each composition completely, the ability to make and reproduce your own records, in your own home, just as true to life as the records made in our laboratory.

That's what makes the Edison Phonograph the greatest gift of its kind.

There are Edison dealers everywhere. Go to the nearest and hear the Edison Phonograph play both Edison Standard and Edison Amberol Records. Get complete catalogs from your dealer or from us. Edison Phonographs, $16.50 to $240.00. Edison Standard Records, 40c. Edison Amberol Records (play twice as long), 65c. Edison Grand Opera Records, 65c to $2.50.

KIT'S COLUMN

One who signs herself "A Practical Mother" has this to say:

"I do not hold at all with you in your remarks about Santa Claus. How can you reconcile it with your conscience to tell lies to children. There is not, never was, any such person as Santa Claus. If you can bring forward any historical data for his existence, or show that any such being—no matter how long ago—once lived on this earth, I will withdraw my contention. This is a practical age, my dear Kit. I try to be a sincere woman and to bring up my children in a serious and practical manner. They will have to make their own way in the world and the less they are hampered with fairy tales and superstition the better they will get on."

Everyone to his taste. But the gods be thanked we are not all quite so practical as my good correspondent.

And let me here make a statement.

There must be a Santa Claus. You can call him by any name you like; you can pass him coldly by; you can even flout him and sneer at him, but, as long as charity and love, and, greatest of all, sympathy, remain to sweeten the world we shall have our Santa Claus with us every Christmas time. He is the real Spirit of Christmas—the symbol of the children's faith. What matter if the older children tell the very little ones that there is no Santy; that father and mother buy the gifts and place them where they will be found; that the Santy who gives the gifts from the Christmas tree is "only a man dressed up"—that it is all a "make up?"

What if father and mother buy the gifts and place them. Who inspired them, I would like to know, if not Santa Claus? How could the man who officiates at the Christmas tree "dress up," if he had no Santa Claus to dress up to? How could there be any "make up" if there wasn't anything or body to make up like? You may be more or less disillusioned. For you Christmas may have lost its magic. (I am sorry for you if it has), but is that any reason why we should take its bit of Fairyland from childhood? What, may one ask, has a practical mother to offer to the children in place of Santa Claus? Children need a symbol. We teach them first by symbols. Very soon life and its struggle teaches practicality. And yet it is sentiment which makes the world go round. It affects the big things in life. Men appear to have shaken it off. They may laugh or scoff at it, but it is sentiment that comes to the top when great movements are afoot. It plays a part in most things, just as it did in reciprocity the other day; as it did when with cheers and band-braying we sent our boys to fight the Boers for the old dag a while ago; as it did when an empire grieved and far-flung draperies of black and purple framed the world when a great queen passed.

And what is Santa Claus but a sentiment—and Christmas itself but a sentiment—a remembrance tender and holy, of the day the Saviour Whom we crowned King of the world with a crown of thorns came to us a little helpless human atom, lying in the manger beside the lowly beasts we use, so often unfairly and cruelly, to our own purposes.

A city merchant tells me that people were never buying their Christmas goods so early as this year. "We have already sold out more than half our Christmas stock," he says. "People have had it drilled into them that it is a mistake to leave things till the last week. The goods have been picked over and the best taken. We expect a rush the last few hours, though. There will always be those who belong to the too late class. Such people would be late for heaven, I think."

This is as it should be, and will help to make Christmas good for the overworked employees and shop assistants. Let us repeat the advice, adding a rider.

Shop early. And—shop in your home town.

Since writing about opals the writer has received a letter from a friend who is wintering in Paris, and whose occasional interest in this column in the matter of a gossipy letter is promised. Among other things, she says: "Tell your readers, by the way, that black opals are the rage here, and promise to be the jewels of the season. An American millionaire set the fashion by ordering a rue de la Paix engagement ring made in a half hoop of these seductive gems. There was not a hint of diamond or pearl in the setting—just these flashing green opals—why called black no one can fathom—which are full of dull fire. The black opal is free from the ill-luck story. Just why, I don't know unless it is that it is of recent discovery.

"Sarah Bernhardt is wild over the announcement of her engagement to—anyone. As a matter of fact, the Divine One is looking her years. She is frankly old, but dislikes immensely to be reminded of it. Just like the rest of us, ma mie. As to matrimony. Not for me, she disclaims loudly, but you never can tell. It would be a novel advertisement for her and—Souvent femme varie.

"Mary Garden is getting fat. They say she takes tons of lemons and exercises tremendously. All the same, she is undeniably stout, and the Parisians detest stout women. The cry of the moment is to have furs to match every gown—or to suit each, rather. Imagine it—ermine for receptions—sables for motoring; broadtail for calling, and moleskin with ermine for every occasion. Fur combinations are very fashionable, and one of the reasons why ermine is so much worn this season is because it combines so beautifully with black fox. Black and white is still the top notch in style." And here the letter trails into more intimate matters of mere personal interest.

Are you looking for a charming book to give somebody? There are some wonderful books in the shop this Christmas month. Peter Pan has flown in from Fairyland and is here with Wendy. Mr. Barrie is not like our Practical Mother. He believes in fairies and that (on his authority we say it) every time a child denies the existence of fairies, a fairy dies. Perhaps it is because Mr. Barrie believes in delightful beings like fairies that he is here this Christmas with his book, Peter and Wendy. It is the story of the play Peter Pan, but it contains much more of the fantastic and delightful than could be possibly crowded into a play. It is a book to put on the fairy shelf of your bedroom library, for all you have to do on any dull, wakeful night is to open it, when you will fly away to Neverland, on whose "magic shores children at play are forever beaching their coracles. We, too, have been there; we can still hear the sound of the surf, though we shall land no more." Alas!

It is a sad life that has never had a Peter or a Wendy in it, and I refuse to believe that such lives are many. You were Peter's mother when you were a little girl, and as for me, I remember the night I sewed his shadow to his foot. And your little girl and mine were Peter's mother, too, and their little girls when they come will be the same. Like Wendy, you and I have grown up and forgotten how to fly, for we are no longer "gay and innocent and heartless." But if you want to become so, all you will have to do it to take Peter and Wendy off the fairy bookshelf in your bedroom library where it belongs, and before you can say Jack—let alone Robinson—you will be flying out the window again with Peter Pan and John and Michael away to wonderful Neverland.

Nor is the book one for children only. On the contrary, the people who ought to have it are the grown-ups, who, like you and me and Wendy, have forgotten how to fly. Mr. Barrie is here at his finest.

Among booklets you will find A Little Child Shall Lead Them, by our Canadian author, Adeline M. Teskey, a suitable one for the Christmas giving. It is a simple tale of what "little Janey out in Injy" did for a quiet country couple whose own little Janey was sleeping in the village graveyard. Out of common materials, the author gets large effects. You can see the ripening of a soul as the story unfolds and attains its completion in the quiet village church.

If you be by any chance of the same turn of mind as John Weightman, it might be well for you to accompany him on the little journey on which Henry Van Dyke has sent him in his latest book, The Mansion. This rich man sitting at his ease in his great house dreams a dream in which he finds himself led by the angel to the mansion which his Heavenly Father has prepared for him. Like all this author's work, the story is at once vivid, delicate, deeply spiritual and soul satisfying. It is told with the art which bears that hall-mark—Simplicity. Among all the book-gems of the season it shines like a little star.

A woman of thirty-two recently tried to suicide in New York because she saw no sign of marriage on her horizon. Another woman blames her for what she calls the "narrow outlook on life." But is matrimony a narrow groove for a woman to travel? Why should it be termed a narrow outlook? Where else can woman find activities more welcome and suitable to her nature than in marriage, with its consequent prospects of motherhood? Our friend of thirty-two was a school teacher, and it is argued that that soul-inspiring occupation should have guarded her from the eccentricity of suicide because her "field of usefulness" was such a broad one. Most of us would prefer to harrow and sow in the field matrimonial if solely for the joy—not always unalloyed—of teaching our own young human ideas the right way to shoot. I don't blame the poor girl for grieving at her lonely horizon upon which loomed not even the shadow of a man. "Sister Anne, Sister Anne, do you see anybody coming?" "Nary a one," says Sister Anne. So what can a poor girl do, especially if she is thirty-two. It is a lonely age for a maid, my masters.

"Linguistologie" is the latest fashionable "science" in Paris. It does not mean the study of languages, but that of tongues. Like languages, tongues differ. For instance, if you are buying a neat's tongue and do not know wherein it differs from that of the horse, your butcher may not tell you. He can sell you a horse's tongue and charge you the price of a neat's, which would be a neat way of selling you (ha! ha!)

About linguistologie, however, there is a Madame, a sort of high priestess of the cult who can tell your vices and virtues according to the size, shape and colour of your tongue—a tongue-palmist, she might be termed. But there is no need to consult her if you will use your common knowledge.

A sour-tongued woman, for instance, is a scandal-monger; if one has a smooth tongue he is a plausible person. If, on the other hand, you have a forked tongue you are a snake. If you have a tongue which points down your throat you are a toad, and if you give tongue you are either a hound or a waiter. I have met only one tongueless person and she was that rare avis—a silent woman.

A complaint of drunkenness on duty was recently formulated, in English professional football classes, against a referee, which reminds one of a similar complaint made against the judge at a certain race meeting in Ireland, when, after a closely-contested finish between a bay and a gray, in which each horse alternately showed a little in front, he gave the race to the "piebald."

A correspondent asks room for a joke so ancient that it has forgotten it ever was and bursts forth anew with all the pride and arroganey of the first spring chestnut.

"A man," he says, "coming out of church last Sunday said to his friend: 'They've got a fine organ in there. I'm a bit of a musician myself and noted with pleasure the skilful use the organist made of the nux vomica stop.'"

A chestnut like this deserves a dose of strychnine.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

cured Mrs. C. C. Gokey, of a stubborn case of heart disease, such as thousands are now suffering with. Read what she says:

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do thirty minutes work in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blade, I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. I began to sleep well, had a good appetite, and improved so rapidly that when I had taken six bottles I was completely cured.

MRS. C. C. GOKEY, Northfield, Vt.

If you have any of the symptoms Mrs. Gokey mentions, it is your duty to protect yourself.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy.

is what you need. If the first bottle fails to benefit, your money is returned. Ask your druggist.

TUDHOPE 1912

A Made in Canada Car. No Duty to Pay.

TUDHOPE "SIX" 48-H.P. 5-PASSENGER TOURING CAR, $2,150
Three styles of Body

ADVANCE orders and applications for dealer territory for 1912 indicate another record year for Tudhope cars. Canadian buyers want the Tudhope because it represents one hundred cents' worth of automobile value for every dollar invested. Your money all goes into the car. To illustrate this point:—

For every $135.00 invested in a Tudhope car you receive $135.00 actual value. For every $135.00 invested in a car not manufactured wholly in Canada you receive $100.00 car value, the difference ($35.00) covering the duty that must be paid in importing the car or its component parts.

The Tudhope is made in Canada in a factory which cannot be surpassed on the Continent for equipment—a factory with an output large enough to reduce the cost per car to the lowest possible figure.

The Tudhope factory has no out-of-date machines to be charged off at a heavy loss and added to the cost of 1912 cars. It is a modern factory designed to produce modern cars at a price which gives the Canadian buyer the same purchasing power as his neighbor on the "other side."

TUDHOPE "SIX" $2,150

A powerful, easy-riding, Tudhope, 48-horsepower motor car, operating with the steady flow of power possible only with a Six-Cylinder motor. The strain on the car and the wear on tires is greatly reduced—while abundant flexibility and wide variation in speed (2 to 75 miles per hour) is obtained. The Tudhope "Six" meets the demand for a high-power, high-quality machine at a moderate price. Our facilities for manufacturing this car in Canada enable us to place it on the market at a price much below that of imported high-power "Fours."

SPECIFICATIONS IN BRIEF:

Unit-cast, 6-cylinder, long-stroke motor, 127-inch wheel base, 37 x 4½ inch tires, sufficiently large for a car a full half ton heavier than the Tudhope Six—chrome nickel steel gears and working parts—Bosch Dual ignition system—nickel trimming throughout—special Tudhope equipment, including top windshield, extra tire and Continental demountable rim, speedometer, Truffault-Hartford shock absorbers, and tool box on running board.

Five-Passenger Touring Car	$2,150
Two-Passenger Torpedo Roadster	$2,150
Six-Passenger Torpedo Body	$2,215

(F.O.B. Orillia)

1912 Tudhope "30-36"

Three Styles of Body

The Car that achieved a sale five times the size of the first year's business of any Canadian car. Completely equipped with nickel trimmings and large, roomy body. The 1912 Tudhope "30-36" has a unit power plant—Bosch Dual ignition system—chrome nickel steel gears—35 x 4 inch tires and Continental demountable rims. Besides usual equipment price includes top and windshield, tool box on running board, shock absorbers, speedometer and an extra tire and Continental demountable rim.

Five-Passenger Touring Car	$1,625
Roadster Type	$1,560
Light Delivery Car	$1,450

Tudhope Service

All Tudhope cars are guaranteed for two years. Back of this guarantee is the ability and willingness on the part of the Tudhope organization to make it good. Each car is thoroughly tested at every stage of its construction and leaves the factory in perfect running order. Even so it may not be proof against the neglect or carelessness it is bound to suffer at the hands of an inexperienced driver. When this happens owners find our guarantee worth much. Any Tudhope owner will tell you how cheerfully we have always lived up to it.

NOW HERE IS THE OPPORTUNITY WORTH SEIZING

The question of a local dealer for this town has not yet been decided. Tudhope cars have won favor because we have always protected owners, and the man who will handle them here must either have, or provide, the necessary facilities to extend the Tudhope policy of "satisfaction after the sale" to every Tudhope owner in the district. In every locality there are clean-cut business men of good address who have thorough knowledge of the territory. Such men cannot find a more lucrative occupation than in handling the high-grade line of cars turned out by the Tudhope organization.
To the man who is ready to devote his energies to building up a good automobile business, we can make an interesting proposition. Are you the man?

We have issued a booklet illustrating our factory and facilities at Orillia for the manufacture of automobiles. We would be glad to mail copy on request.

The Old Shop Window

There's a holiday, Christmassy feel in the air,
A bubbling spirit that nothing can rid—
A whisper of secrets in hallway and stair,
And flitting of shadows where treasures are hid;
A Christmassy, holiday feeling that brings
A touch to the heart that you scarce understand,
As though it were memory caressing the strings
And charming us back to a happier land—
Wonderful land!—with its tinsel and show,
And back to old Christmas companions again—
To the best friend of all in the long, long ago,
The gingerbread man with the peppermint cane.

By some trick of memory the years haven't been,
Nor worries, nor woes, nor the things that distress—
The world is still peopled with rosy-cheeked men
And wee little women in quaintest of dress,
So small they must stand on their tiptoes to see!
The little shop windows are glowing with lights,
And children, piled deep as the children can be,
Are marvelling much at the wonderful sights!—
A row of bright faces all filled with surprise—
And there, under guard of the white-frosted pane,
With coat made of frosting, and apple-seed eyes,
Is the gingerbread man with a peppermint cane!

There's a holiday, Christmassy feeling to-night,
A bubbling spirit that nothing can rid—
A whisper of secrets and Christmas delights,
And flitting of shadows where treasures are hid;
A holiday feeling that parents must share
And be of their holiday pleasures, and yet
There's none of the old-fashioned parents but spare
A feeling of sorrow and sigh of regret
That Youth cannot know what To-day hasn't taught—
The spirit of pleasure and Christmas refrain
This envoy of Christmas of other days brought,
The gingerbread man with a peppermint cane.

—JOHN D. WELLS.

ANECDOTES

A Serious Blunder.—Watty Marshall was a simple, good-for-nothing body who got married to a terrible shrew of a wife. Finding out that she had made a bad bargain, she resolved to have the best of it, and accordingly abused and thrashed her luckless spouse to such an extent that he, in despair, went to the minister to get unmarried. The parson told him that he could do him no such service, as marriages were made in heaven. "Made in heaven, sir?" cried Watty; "it's a lee! I wis mairrit i' your ain kitchen, wi' your two servant hizzies lookin' on! I doot ye hae made an awfu' mistake wi' my mairrage, sir, for the muckle fire that was bleezin' at the time made it look far mair like the ither place! What a life I'll hae to lead, baith in this warld and the next, for that blunder o' yours, minister!"

Too Slow Rising.—Sammy's parents were trying to encourage him to form a taste for solid reading. With this end in view they induced him by the promise of a substantial reward to read a certain number of pages every day in Motley's "Rise of the Dutch Republic." He began it bravely, and for several weeks stuck to his task without murmuring. Then he began to lose interest in the book. For a boy of his age this immortal work was rather heavy reading, and he asked if he might not be permitted to skip it every other day. "What is the matter, Sammy?" asked his father. "Don't you find it interesting?" "It's kind o' monotonous," he answered. "Then suppose you read just one page a day." "No, I'm tired of reading about the rise of a republic. Let me try the 'Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire' for a while."

A Historic Tree.—The recent storm in Scotland has been responsible for the removal of an ancient landmark of more than ordinary historic interest. In Dr. Henderson's "Annals of Dunfermline" mention is made of the "hanging tree," which grew in the north wood of Pitreavie estate. On this tree some of Oliver Cromwell's officers were alleged to have caused the death by hanging of seventy survivors of the battle of Pitreavie. The tree was a beech, and stood on the top of a mound in the centre of the north wood. It was a magnificent specimen, being ten feet in diameter, and the upheaval of the earth round the roots reached 30 feet in height. Many natives of Dunfermline have at one time or other carved their names on this famous beech.

The Aberdeen Student's Bible.—Lord Rosebery tells with exquisite feeling the story of the Aberdeen student, afterwards the professor, who was long doubtful whether he should purchase a suit of clothes or a Hebrew Bible, and finally decided for the Bible. "As the keen winds of Aberdeen whistled through him that winter, they would bring a sense, not of chill, but of exultation, as he thought of the Hebrew Bible which he had obtained at the cost of suffering. There is no excuse nowadays for any man who does not possess his own private collection of books. If it merely fills a shelf, that shelf will be dearer to his heart than the whole collection of the British Museum."

Died Happy.—This is a touching story of a young and fair girl leaving the bright world while the dew of life was still lying on its morning glories. You can imagine the sadness of the scene; the growing certainty of the end; the passing beauty of the world, the bright vision of all the happiness and the joy, the heavy shadow hanging over all. "It is hopeless," exclaimed the doctor. "You cannot live." "And must I die?" she asked. "You cannot live." "Tell me one thing, doctor, before I go." "What is it?" "Does the hair change colour after death?" "No." "Then I die happy. I'll look as well as those Smith girls on the day of judgment, any way."

The Kirk Degenerating.—At a soiree got up many years ago by one of the churches in Glasgow, the band of a dragoon regiment was present to discourse sweet music. The idea of a regimental band in a sacred edifice proved too much for the sensitive mind of an old lady, and she exclaimed: "Eh, sirs, me, isn't the kirk awfu'." The Kirk o' Scotland has come to a waefu' pass. Just to think o' fowk haudin' a tea pairty in't; and e'en that they're no' content wi', but they mann e'en hae sodgers wi' brass trumpets an' skirlin' whistles to help them to tak' their tea! Hech me, it's a wunner the roof disna fa' on us!"

Got Its Name.—Two weary tramps met after a lengthy separation, and sat down to compare experiences. "Where yer bin?" asked one. "Ain't seen yer about lately." "Course yer ain't" replied the other. "I've been laid up with influenzy." "Influenzy? What's that?" "Well, I don't know that I can exactly explain it. It takes all the fight out of yer. You feel sort of tired like. Don't seem yer want ter do anything." "Why, I've had that disease for the last twenty years," exclaimed the first speaker, "but this is the first time I have ever heard its name!"

Highland Tenure.—It was only in modern times that the Highland chiefs deigned to accept charters for their lands; and they preferred the pride at holding them by the valour of their clans. Macdonald of Keppoch, after charters came in use, refused to comply with the custom, saying he did not choose to hold his land on a sheepskin. This proud independence proved unfortunate for his family, as it prevented their recovery of their lands, lost on account of their conduct in 1745, after the general pardon and amnesty had been granted. The estates went to a distant branch.

Open The Doors.—The other Sunday morning the minister based his sermon on the story of the Flood, and he told the great story with an unusual amount of dramatic eloquence. He came to the part where Noah received the heavenly command to open the doors of the Ark. "Open these doors-" he called in a voice of thunder. Instantly one of the doorkepers, who had been dozing through the sermon sprang to his feet, hurried up the aisle, and flung open the doors. The congregation, one regrets to add, giggled!

His Reply.—It was a railway carriage, and the occupants were several travellers and a staid, pompous old gentleman. Various and unsuccessful efforts were made to draw him into conversation. At length one of them said: "Come, sir, I know you are one of us. Tell us what you are travelling in?" "Young man," answered the tormented one, glaring at his interlocutor, 'I am travelling in very objectionable and inquisitive company, and the carriage is full of samples." He wasn't disturbed after this.

Bring Him In.—A learned Irish judge, among other peculiarities, has a habit of begging pardon on every possible occasion. On his circuit a short time since his favourite expression was employed in a singular manner. At the close of the assize, as he was about to leave the bench, the officer of the Court reminded him that he had not passed sentence of death upon one of the criminals, as he had intended. "Dear me," said is Lordship, "I really beg his pardon—bring him in."

A Valuable Dibble.—A Tay fisherman, near Kinfauns, many years ago brought up in his net an article, the like of which he had never seen before, but he thought it would do to plant his kail with; and it turned out a serviceable dibble. A gentleman having heard of the fisherman's "dibble" had it sent to him, and discovered that it was a fine old Roman sword, made of bronze, in excellent preservation, after lying in the water for many hundreds of years.

Wept Together.—Hopson groaned. "What's the matter, old chap?" inquired a friend kindly. "Oh; Ach! My wife can't sing!" moaned the miserable man. "Can't sing?" exclaimed the friend cheerfully. "My dear chap, in that case I should have thought you were to be congratulated." The poor wretch shook his head sadly. "Can't sing," he echoed dully, "but thinks she can!" And they sat down side by side and wept together.

Be More Careful.—Judge Parry tells many amusing stories of his County Court experience. He was rebuking a man for backing up his wife in what was not only an absurd story but one in which the Judge could see he had no belief. "You should really be more careful," said the Judge; "and I tell you candidly I do not believe a word of your wife's story." "You may do as yer like," said the man mournfully, "but I've got to."

Maclachlan Arms.—There is a tradition that when Alexander II. came into the Highlands to subdue the country he sent a message to Maclachlan of Strathlachlan to send him tribute by the swiftest messenger. With ready wit the Chief attached the bags containing the tribute to a roebuck, which was sent to the King, and the King was so pleased that he granted Maclachlan two roebucks as supporters to his arms.

His Lot.—A certain juryman was generally singular in his opinion, but was so determined that he converted his eleven confreres to his own way of thinking. The judge asked him how he came to be so fastidious. "My lord," said he, "no man is more open to conviction than I am; but I have not found the same open-mindedness in others. It has generally been my lot to be on a jury with eleven obstinate men!"

The Successful Men. — The men whom I have seen succeed best in life, says Charles Kingsley, have always been cheerful and hopeful men, who went about their business with a smile on their faces, and took the changes and chances of their normal life like men, facing rough and smooth alike as it came, and so found the truth of the old proverb, that ɹǝʌǝu puɐ sɯnu ɹǝq puɐ sɯnu poo⅁, times pass over."

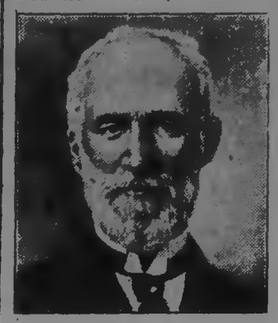
EFFECTS WERE MARVELLOUS

When I Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

HARDWICKE, N.B., Jan. 17th. 1910.
"I feel it my duty to give you a statement in respect to the wonderful cure I received by taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. Chronic Constipation was the complaint I suffered from for years. My general health was miserable as a result of this disease, and I became depressed and alarmed. I was treated by physicians without the slightest permanent benefit and I tried all kinds of pills and tablets



"I saw the strong testimonial in favor of 'Fruit-a-tives' by New Brunswick's 'Grand Old Man' Senator Costigan, and I knew that anything he stated was honest and true and given only to help his fellow-men. I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and the effects were most marvellous, and now I am entirely well from all my Chronic Constipation that I suffered with for years." A. G. WILLISTON.

CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS

Here is a list of suggestions that contains considerable information for those contemplating Christmas decorations and also pointers on how to prevent fires at all times. In large cities Christmastide is often marred by sad accidents as a result of carelessness in connection with Christmas tree celebrations and it is with a view of avoiding these, and fires in general, that the following suggestions are given:

CHRISTMAS "DONT'S"

Don't let children touch the tree.

Don't use festoons of the ordinary tissue paper, or cotton batting on a tree.

Don't use any ornaments made of celluloid.

Don't light a single candle until everything is ready for the children to come in.

Don't permit a draft of air to sway the branches of the tree while the candles are lighted.

Don't let anyone change the position of anything on the tree after the candles are lighted; it is so easy to sway a candle against something which will take fire.

Don't leave a lighted tree unwatched.

Don't put cotton beneath the tree to make the carpet look like snow-covered ground.

Don't fail to have a pail of water near the tree, in case of fire.

Don't remove a thing from the tree until the candles on it are blown out.

Don't let the tree stand long after Christmas. When dry, it is doubly dangerous.

Always start at the top of the tree to light the candles, and at the bottom to put them out.

TO AVOID FIRES

Keep cellars and attics free from combustible materials.

Don't let electric wires or globes come in contact with curtains or metal pipes.

Do not hang electric wires over nails, gas, water or any kind of metal pipes.

Persons using electricity should have a cut-off where the wires enter the building, and turn off current when leaving the building.

See that your gas pipes do not leak.

Do not enter the cellar with a lighted lamp unless sure gas pipes are in good condition and not leaking.

Keep oily rags in metal covered vessels, and the vessels should be equipped with legs or feet at least four inches long so as to allow the air to circulate between the floor and the vessels, and keep the floor cool in case the rags took fire from spontaneous combustion.

Put all ashes in metal receptacles, never in wood.

Do not fill gasoline or lamps when lighted.

When using gasoline for cleaning furniture, clothing, etc., always use it in the yard, and away from the open lights or heating stoves, as it is very dangerous to use in a building, or near open lights or heating plants.

Keep chimney flues free from soot.

Never have lamps, gas, stoves or open lights where oils are kept or stored.

Always keep matches out of the reach of children and in metal receptacles so that mice and rats cannot get them.

Always use the safety match, the kind that is lighted on the side of box, instead of the old friction match.

ADVICE TO MERCHANTS

Keep all decorations away from gas and electric lights.

Never use fine wire for tieing decorations to electric wires, as they are apt to cut through the insulation on the wires and cause a short circuit, which will blow the fuses or cause the wires to become overheated and set fire to insulation, which might set fire to the building or cause a panic, providing the store was crowded with customers. Always use twine, as it is much safer.

Never use cotton batting to represent snow, as it is very inflammable. But use mineral wool, which looks just as nice and will not burn.

Don't use evergreens or materials of that nature, as they take fire very easily, especially when dry.

Don't use any decorations except those that have been made fire-proof. By "fire-proof" it is meant that the decorations have been dipped into a solution that will keep them from bursting into flame, but will turn into ashes without blazing.

A liberal supply of water pails and fire extinguishers should be distributed about the building in convenient places, and the clerks trained to use them in case of fire. A number of clerks should be delegated to look after the exits and assist the people in getting out and if possible to prevent a panic in the event of fire. Too much precaution cannot be taken to prevent a disaster during the holiday season, especially when the large stores are crowded daily with men, women and children buying Christmas presents.

APPROPRIATE DIETS

Plane food for the aviator,
Game for the baseball fan,
Crabs for the youthful oarsman,
Smelts for the mining man.

For the upholsterer, stuffing;
Plums for the grafting "boss";
For the Arctic explorer, ices,
Snow pudding and Chili sauce.

For the coward and politician,
Quail and crow are the birds.
The fool who flies in passion
Should be made to eat his own words.

For the gloveworker, lady's fingers;
Capers for the clowns to eat;
For the matchmaker, minute pudding;
And for lunatics, cracked wheat.

Why is the world like music?—Because it is full of sharps and flats.

What is that which every living being has seen, but never will see again?—Yesterday.

Why is the pith of a tree like the tip of a dog's tail?—Because it's farthest from the bark.

Why ought Ireland to be rich?—Because its capital is Dublin.

Why is a pig's tail like the letter k?—Because it is the end of pork.

What church official would be most useful on the battlefield?—A canon.

When is a person obliged to keep his word?—When no one will take it.

What is the riddle of riddles?—Life, because we must all give it up.

If a barrel weighs ten pounds, what can you fill it with to make it seven pounds?—Holes.

What is that which is taken from you before you can get it back again?—Your portrait.

Why is a pig with a curly tail like the ghost in Hamlet?—He can a tale unfold.

What is the color of the wind and the color of the storm?—The storm rose and the wind blew.

Why is an orange like a church steeple?—Because we have a peel from it.

Why is the letter Y like a young spendthrift?—Because it makes pa pay.

Why is a peacock like the figure 9?—Because it is nothing without its tail.

Which is the most wonderful animal in the world?—A pig—because he is first killed then cured.

When is a Scotchman like a donkey?—When he stands on his tanks and braes.

Why should a novel writer be an extraordinary looking animal?—Because of his tale coming out of his head.

What garden crop would save draining?—Leeks.

What pen ought never to be used for writing?—A sheep pen.

Why is the letter W like the Queen's ladies?—Because it is always in waiting.

What tune makes everybody glad?—Fortune.

Why is U the gayest letter in the alphabet?—Because it is always in f-u-n.

Why is the Bank of England like a thrush?—Because it often changes its notes.

Why is a church bell like a good story?—Because it is often toll'd.

Why are clergymen like railway porters?—Because they do a good bit of coupling.

Why is it absurd to call a dentist's room the dental parlour?—Because it is the drawing-room.

Which is the easiest profession, a doctor's or a clergyman's?—The clergyman's, because he only has to preach, whereas the doctor has to practice.

Why are twice eleven like twice ten?—Because twice eleven are twenty-two, and twice ten are twenty, too.

Why is Buckingham Palace the cheapest palace ever built?—Because it was built for one sovereign and furnished for another.

Why may a beggar wear a very short coat?—Because it will be long enough before he gets another.

Why is a bad picture like weak tea?—Because it is not well drawn.

Which is the smallest bridge in the world?—The bridge of the nose.

Why is a merry fellow like a bad shot?—Because he's the boy to keep the game alive.

A cat and a half caught a rat and a half in a minute and a half. How long would it take sixty cats to kill sixty rats?—One minute.

Why is the letter "g" like matrimony?—Because it is the end of courting.

How many wives does the marriage service allow?—Sixteen. Four (for) better, four (for) worse, four (for) richer, four (for) poorer.

Why is coffee like an axe with a dull edge?—Because it must be ground before it is used.

What is it we all frequently say we'll do, and no one has ever done?—Stop a minute.

Formed long ago, yet made to-day,
I am in use while others sleep;
Me few would like to give away,
And fewer still would like to keep.
—A bed

What are the most unsociable things in the world?—Milestones, because you never see two together.

What is the difference between a good soldier and a fashionable young lady?—One faces the powder, and the other powders her face.

When may a person reasonably condemn his coffee?—When he has more than sufficient grounds.

If a church be on fire, why has an organ the smallest chance of escape?—Because an engine cannot play on it.

Why is love like a Highland plaid?—Because it is full of checks and crosses.

Why is V like a creditor?—Because it is sure to come after U.

Why is a thief in a garret like an honest man?—Because he's above doing a wrong action.

Which is the most abused part of the human body?—The eye, because it is under the lash all day, and gets a good hiding at night.

What is that which by losing an eye has nothing left but a nose?—Noise.

Perfect with a head, perfect without a head; perfect with a tail, perfect without a tail; perfect with either, neither, or both. What is it?—A wig.

What is the difference between a butcher and a fashionably attired lady?—One kills to dress, the other dresses to kill.

Why are two laughing girls like the wings of a chicken?—Because they have a merry-thought between them.

What is a trout like when he is lying on a gravel path?—Like a fish out of water.

Why is it dangerous to take a walk in the woods in spring?—Because then the trees are shooting.

Why are teeth like verbs?—Because they are regular, irregular and defective.

Which is the best land for babies?—Lapland.

Why should young ladies set good examples?—Because young men are so apt to follow them.

What is the best thing to make in a hurry?—Haste.

When is a newspaper like a delicate child?—When it appears weekly (weakly).

Which of the four seasons is the most literary?—Autumn, for then the leaves are turned, and they are red (read).

When is a chicken's neck like a bell?—When it is wrung for dinner.

Why is an army like a newspaper?—Because it has leaders, columns and reviews.

Who gains the most at a coronation, king or people?—The king gains a crown, the people a sovereign.

What is the difference between a lady and her mirror?—One speaks without reflecting, the other reflects without speaking.

Do you know why a fisherman ought to be wealthy?—Because all his is net profit.

LIQUOR WEAKENS NERVOUS SYSTEM

Nerves Demanding the So-called Sedative Effects of Alcohol Are "Alcoholic Nerves."

The Gatlin Treatment, in Three Days, Cures Appetite for Liquor and Restores Nerves.

WHEN a man's nerves are in a condition which demands alcohol as a sedative — in other words, when he must take a drink to overcome nervousness, the more quickly he comes to the Gatlin Institute, or sends for the Gatlin home treatment, the better. Mental decay soon gets in where the nerve forces are impaired. No poison is as destructive to the nervous system as the slowly-acting poison of alcohol.

An appetite—the physical necessity for liquor—is the greatest health liability one can possess.

In three days, without hypodermic injections or any other disagreeable features, the Gatlin treatment drives all accumulated alcoholic poison from the system, does away with liquor craving, strengthens the nervous system to normal, restores appetite for food, and brings back healthy digestion. In short, the Gatlin treatment cures the liquor habit in three days.

Gatlin Institutes are now established all over the United States, Canada and Europe. The treatment is no experiment—there is twelve years of success back of it. Positively no dangerous, cumulative or poisonous drugs used.

Call or write for books of particulars. The Gatlin Institute, 428 Jarvis street, Toronto. Phone North 4538. A. Hargrave, Manager.

THE DIRECT ROUTE TO UNPOPULARITY

Patricia and her mother are having a most unhappy time. Patricia's mother is a sweet and charming woman, whose friends love her. Her ambition for her daughter has been that she may develop into a gracious and popular woman. But Patricia is not popular, she is not loved, and it is all her own fault.

The chief trouble lies in the fact that Patricia is supremely selfish. Her mother has made many sacrifices for her, and should receive her tenderest consideration. Instead of this, however, Patricia's discontent and unfriendliness burden the older woman's heart.

In her narrow-minded egotism, Patricia finds very few whom she considers worthy of her notice. A half dozen of her schoolmates of her own age constitute her social circle. She refuses to be friendly with younger people or older people unless they are marked by some unusual talents or possessions. Old friends of her mother's she treats with rudeness, because they lack some of the graces she considers essential. She goes through the world with her head in the air.

Some day Patricia will wake up to the fact that she has made a mistake. She will find that radiant response and interest in other people are the things which bring popularity. She will find herself left out of pleasant gatherings, she will find that men do not seek her, that women do not call upon her.

She may not discover this while she is at school, because in her busy life there will always be enough of intellectual interest to keep her from monotony, but after she leaves school she will be dependent upon her friends, and there is not a more lonely girl in the world than one whose rudeness and arrogance and pride have alienated those who might have loved her.

As we grow older and wiser we know that there is nothing which graces a girl so much as a deferential attitude toward the old, and a gracious manner toward everyone. The higher we go in social life the more we find the younger women being taught courtesy and consideration. In fashionable schools rudeness is not tolerated. Hence, a girl who thinks that she is showing her superiority by an abrupt manner or cold disdain us, if she but knew it, revealing her lack of breeding and of social experience.

Some day I hope that Patricia will earn that simplicity of manner is a thing which is striven for by those whom the world admits are its greatest women.

The bragging, pretentious person has no place in refined society.

"I can't afford it." was the simple statement made the other day by a woman whose social prestige is unassailable. Patricia would have died rather than have made such a confession. She does not know that the world can see through her little fictions, and that it knows her for just what she is—a very mistaken little maid who will be wiser some day.—D. M.

THE FACE of the CLOCK

An Adventure of Peter Crewe—"The Man with the Camera Eyes."

By Harold Carter.

(Copyright, 1911, by W. G. Chapman in the United States and Great Britain.)

Readers of these memoirs have often said to me: "Why do you lay so much stress upon Peter Crewe's optical powers when the solution of many of these cases was due quite as much to the fertility of his mind and his deductive powers as to his ability to remember everybody and everything that he had ever seen?"

My answer to this criticism has been that, while Crewe possessed in a marked degree the ordinary detective instinct, yet in almost every case it was his optical gift that started him along the correct line of investigation. It was his power of calling up an exact scene, a footprint on a carpet, a misspelled letter in a manuscript, the slightest deviation from the normal, which none other could have discovered, that furnished him with his clues.

Take, for example, the case of the murder of Walter Bentley. Everybody suspected, or at least sensed the fact, that he had been killed by Sewell. But it was Crewe who, by means of this power of his, afforded us proof positive of Sewell's guilt. Once the pistol trap had been laid bare, Sewell was shown to have purchased the weapon, he was identified by a dozen persons, a net of circumstantial evidence was woven around him, independently of the confession which he afterward retracted, and ultimately he paid the penalty of his crime.

Bentley had moved into his palatial apartments a month after Sewell vacated them. He had rented them ready furnished, and thus, before he left, Sewell was enabled to lay his trap. Had Bentley known who the last occupant had been he would never have taken up his abode there; but Sewell had engineered the matter so cunningly, having first lived there under an alias and subsequently secured Bentley's tenancy through a series of adroit measures—had worked the scheme with such perfection that he got Bentley as his successor. That was all he wanted. If ever a man had cause to hate another, Sewell had cause to hate Bentley. The man had ruined him by underselling his "Once-a-Year" clock, in the patent on which a flaw existed, and flooding the market with an inferior product. Then he had foreclosed a mortgage, left Sewell penniless, and finally alienated his wife's affections. Sewell had pondered over these things until he became indubitably insane. He should have been sent to an asylum; but he was found guilty of murder, for the jury considered that no lunatic could have contrived so ingenious a conspiracy.

Bentley was highly pleased with his new apartment, which he considered a bargain. So it was; that was part of the lure. When he saw one of his own brand of "Once-a-Year" clocks ticking merrily upon the mantel he laughed and rubbed his hands, thinking how he had ousted Sewell, the inventor. Altogether, Bentley was in a high good humor.

Gordonia Mansions, where Bentley lived, was in one of those parts of the city in which the past and the future seem to be struggling for supremacy. It was an old house and the district had once been fashionable—was still so; but just across the street a row of rookeries had sprung up, inhabited by Italians of the poorest and most reckless character. Pistol duels were common among them. When, therefore, Bentley was found dead upon the floor of his dining-room, an ugly bullet wound in his head and a hole in the plaster of the wall, it was decided that a stray shot from the tenements across the street must have caused his death. Suspicion was, for a time, drawn toward Sewell, who had been breathing out threats of murder; but Sewell had been staying in a country house 20 miles from Gordonia Mansions, and had been there a week at the time of Bentley's death. The coroner's jury brought in a verdict of "found dead" and the matter dropped out of public notice.

It was Mrs. Bentley who urged me to investigate the affair. She had obtained her divorce from Sewell, had married Bentley, and, knowing the ruthless and relentless character of her former husband, besides being crazed with grief over Bentley's death, resolved to bring the murderer to justice. Although I had little faith in her suspicions of Sewell, I enlisted Peter Crewe's aid in the matter. The apartment had been left just as it was at the time of Bentley's death. Crewe and I went there to investigate. Dust lay thickly over everything, the bullet hole remained in the wall, and the "Once-a-Year" clock still ticked merrily upon the mantel.

Crewe took his station in the doorway and let his eyes travel slowly around the room. In those long glances he was photographing upon the sensitive retina of either eye the exact presentiment of everything within the boundary of those four walls. Never thenceforward, I knew, would the smallest particular be forgotten by him.

"The bullet came through this wall from the outside," said Crewe, indicating the bullet hole, "and went clear through Bentley's skull. Where did it go then? It was not found?"

"No. That was commented on at the inquest. The apartment was searched thoroughly but it had disappeared. The theory advanced was that, its force spent, it had changed its course, passed through the open door leading into the kitchen, and dropped through the open window looking upon the next street."

"If the door was open," said Crewe. "But—" He strode through into the kitchen, calling for me to follow him. "That kitchen window is not in a straight line with the open door. The bullet must have gone round a corner."

"Well, where do you suppose it went?" I asked.

Crewe did not reply, but walked over to the clock and stood regarding it meditatively. It was a heavy, ornamental piece of manufacture, wound once a year, in accordance with the pirated principle of Sewell's clocks, and it ticked slowly and somberly, as though it were the sole guardian of the mystery.

"Do you see anything peculiar about this clock?" asked Crewe, looking at me amusedly. "It is hardly possible that you do not."

"No, I do not," I said. "Of course the principle is different; the ornamentation—"

"Tut! Look at the face."

"It seems a very ordinary face," I said.

"How many clocks have you looked at in your life, Langton? A dozen? A thousand?"

"More likely a thousand," I said.

"And you really never saw a clock whose face appeared radically different from that one?"

"Not that I can recall," I said, looking at the clock hopelessly.

"Well, it seems incredible," said Crewe. "Now, Langton, come to the window and direct your gaze upon the clock in that church spire. You see it clearly?"

"I can make out the figures and the hands."

"Now look back. You see no difference?" He unfastened the glass front and, striking a match, held it to the central aperture in the face, through which the mechanism was wound. Not satisfied by this scrutiny apparently, he drew a tiny battery from his breast pocket, connected two wires and pressed a knob, whereupon a little light flashed in a miniature bulb. He inserted this in the aperture and looked into the clock. Next, having closed the case again, he strode back across the room until he stood half way between the mantel and the hole in the wall, upon a carpet still disfigured with Bentley's life-blood, which had made a dark stain there. He bent down and, with his pocket knife, cut a hole in the carpet. Underneath I saw the wiring of the electrical connections. Crewe rose once more, crossed to the mantel and looked at the baize-coated wires which ran down the side of the mantel from roof to floor.

"You see this?" he asked, indicating a branch which led into the clock.

"Yes. What purpose does it serve?"

"Primarily," said Crewe, "it connects the clock telegraphically with the official chronometer of the astronomical department. That as you probably have read in the advertisements, was a special feature of the 'Once-a-Year' clock, both Sewell's and Bentley's, which in consequence was guaranteed to keep accurate time for the whole period of the twelve months. Actually, it served the purpose of the murderer. Now, Langton, I see that you begin to suspect the secret, and if you can tell me how that clock differs from that clock in the church tower I will explain the mystery."

"Why does it differ?" I demanded, rather angrily.

"There," said Crewe, smiling, "you have me. That will be for the murderer to explain. But if it did not differ I should never have hit upon the discovery. And now for Sewell. Where is he?"

"In town," I answered. "He says he is co-operating with the police in tracing the murderer."

"Where is he living?"

"At his club—the National—according to this morning's papers."

"I didn't read them. Does it say anything more about his lawsuit against the Bentley company?"

"Yes," I said, suddenly remembering. "He has settled the case. He places the full rights of the patent at their disposal, upon condition that the Bentley people call in as many of their clocks as they can purchase and make them on his superior model. There is also a small cash settlement."

"But why does he wish all the Bentley clocks called in?"

"Because he wants the honor of the invention; he wants it as he invented it, and the Bentley people are willing enough to replace the few hundred they have disposed of—"

So lame did Sewell's reason seem to me that I advanced it hesitatingly, as though it were some pitiful personal excuse. But before Crewe could answer there came a tap at the door. The janitor stood there.

"Pardon me, gentlemen," he said, "but Mr. Sewell has sent for the clock."

"What clock? This? What right has Mr. Sewell to it?"

"I mean Mr. Sewell, the manager for the Bentley people," said the janitor. "It's part of the apartments, gentlemen—goes with them, and the landlord's going to exchange it for a new one."

"Can you tell the man to come back this afternoon?" asked Crewe, pressing a silver piece into his hand.

"All right, sir. Thank you," said the janitor, withdrawing. "Sorry to have disturbed you, gentlemen."

"Now, Langton," said Crewe, "hurry round to police headquarters and get a couple of detectives here. Have authority to seal the door. And have Sewell with you."

I hurried away and made my request to the head of the city police. He was disposed to scoff at my demand; but he had a wholesome respect for Crewe, who had assisted him and incidentally made a fool of him on more than one occasion. He agreed to send round the two men at once.

"But as for Sewell," he said, "he's said to be at the National club, but I can't guarantee it. There ain't no more suspicion attaching itself to him and he comes or goes as he pleases. Still, I'll send Sergeant Connolly to ask him to meet some gentlemen at the Gordonia, if he can find him."

A plan occurred to me. "This matter is one that throws grave doubts upon Sewell's innocence," I said, leaning over the chief of police as impressively as I could. "We must make sure of him. We must have a warrant ready for service. Where is the nearest magistrate?"

"There's Mr. Blount will issue one, if you can swear to sufficient facts," he said. "What are the facts?" he continued, looking at me keenly. And then I remembered that I knew none. For how could I say "because the clock in the apartment has a different face from the clock in the church tower, I believe Sewell to be a murderer?"

"Now I tell you what I'll do," said the chief of police, springing to his feet. "I'll get Mr. Sewell myself." He touched a bell and a boy entered. "Tell Briggs to telephone Mr. Sewell, 48562 Old," he said. "Tell him would he mind stepping over on a little matter of business. And send Murphy and Ball to me."

When the policemen came in he bade them briefly report to Crewe at the Gordonia and place themselves at his disposal. If necessary, the apartment was to be sealed. The men saluted and went off, grinning. The police chief looked after them resentfully.

"That's what your friend Crewe's done for me," he said bitterly. "He's made me the laughing stock of my men. He's demoralized the discipline of the force. And by thunder, I'm going to give him a chance now to make a fool of himself. If he's discovered any evidence against Mr. Sewell, after I've spent weeks on the job without finding a particle, I'll—I'll step out and let him have my job," he concluded.

The boy came in.

"Mr. Sewell will be here in half an hour," he said.

"All right," replied the police chief. "Sit down, Mr. Langton," he continued. "You won't mind waiting? All right; then Mr. Sewell and me and you'll go there together."

Sewell was four minutes ahead of time. I had never set eyes on him before. He was a burly man about forty years of age, and carried himself with a certain indescribable "nerve" and swagger which, to my mind, seemed but to accentuate a certain inward trepidation. Certainly, I thought, if he were the murderer of Bentley, if he had actually come back to brazen out the affair and, to defy justice, he was of monumental audacity.

"Ah, Mr. Sewell," said the police chief cordially, "I want you to meet Mr. Langton. Mr. Langton is acting for the —er, the widow," he said, trying to be delicate; "but quite in a professional way, you know. They've found something or other in the apartment and want your aid."

I saw the light of suspicion grow in Sewell's eyes as he stared into my face. Then, the lids dropped and the face became inscrutable.

"By all means," Sewell replied. He took out his watch. "I have an engagement at five. I can give you a hasty half hour, if that will help. What is this discovery?" he asked, turning on me abruptly.

I saw a pulse begin to thump in his temple and, in that moment, I knew that the man before me was afraid, horribly afraid.

"I can't say," I answered. "It isn't mine. Mr. Crewe has something to ask."

"An amateur detective," explained the chief of police, in allusion to my friend.

"One of these would-be Arsene Lupins, eh?" said Sewell, mockingly. "All right, gentlemen. Do you want to put on the handcuffs?" he continued, stretching out his hands playfully, while the pulse thumped furiously.

"I guess we can dispense with them," answered the police chief easily. "I'm sorry to bother you so much, Mr. Sewell," he added apologetically; "I think this time will be the last."

"Well, I hope so," said Sewell. "Otherwise I shall move into the next block and baffle your detective department.

We put on our hats and went into the street. A short walk brought us to the Gordonia, where we found Crewe and the detectives waiting for us. Crewe motioned to us three to be seated. He did not take Sewell's hand, but looked at him with a half smile that set that pulse beating again. In that brief moment I knew that Crewe had photographed Sewell's face upon his mind for ever.

One thing I noted in particular. Wherever else Sewell's roving glances fell, he never looked at the clock.

"I understand that you have accepted the office of general manager for the Bentley company, Mr. Sewell," said Crewe.

"I have. What of it?"

Crewe did not reply, but drummed his fingers on his knees.

"And I understand that you have made some new discoveries in this case," said Sewell. "May I ask what they are?"

"We have found several things," Crewe answered. "For instance, we know that the bullet, instead of passing from without inward, passed from within outward. Therefore the mystery of the missing bullet is made clear. It went through that hole in the wall after it had passed through Mr. Bentley's brain, not previously."

I saw the police chief smile and whisper into Sewell's ear. The two detectives sat stolidly upon their chairs.

"That is very interesting," said Sewell, rising, "and may or may not be true. But I understand that you invited me here for a purpose. Have you any further questions to ask of me?"

He snapped his watch ostentatiously, as though he grudged each moment spent in the presence of us amateurs. Crewe remained silent for a moment, more through abstraction than insolence.

"Only one, sir," he answered finally.

"And what is that?" asked Sewell, sneering.

Crewe rose and placed himself between our guest and the door. He peered into his face. "Why did you change the front of the clock?" he demanded indolently.

The effect of this question was amazing. All the insolence went out of Sewell's face. He sank back into his chair and pressed his hand over his heart. A bluish pallor spread over his features. He could not reply.

"Come, Sewell," said Crewe, more kindly. "Tell us the story of how you killed Mr. Bentley."

He sank back into his chair,

But Sewell's face remained of the same pallor, and he stared up into his inquisitor's countenance, his mouth partly open, his eyes glassy and fixed. He tried to reply, but instead sighed and rolled out of his chair upon the floor.

It was half an hour before we could revive him. The strain and tension of the past month were producing the reaction at last. While we opened his collar and dashed water into his face Crewe went to the mantel and deftly removed the face of the clock. Inside, cunningly fixed and compressed among the mechanism, was a tiny, gripless pistol, whose muzzle of .22 caliber was in exact alignment with the winding aperture. Sewell's eyes lit upon this when he became conscious.

Crewe went over to him and read a brief confession of murder. Putting forth his hand feebly, Sewell signed his name. Then we summoned an ambulance and the two detectives escorted him to the nearest hospital, from which, in course of time, he was taken to court to stand his trial and, as I have related, found guilty. I will not dwell upon the details of the punishment; suffice it to say that the sentence of the law was duly carried into effect.

It was shown at the trial with what amazing ingenuity Sewell had worked. How, having decided that Bentley was to die by the very instrument which he had stolen from him, he baited a trap that could not fail to act. Sewell had had an electrician's training, and it was an easy matter to connect the pistol in the clock with a certain spot on the floor in such a way that the pressure of a foot would complete the circuit and discharge the weapon. But he had done more: That nothing untoward might mar the success of his scheme he had somehow become possessed of Bentley's exact height and had carried on a long series of experiments until he could be sure that the line of the bullet's path would cleave the center of Bentley's skull. And only when standing in a certain exact spot would Bentley complete the circuit. He must have crossed and recrossed the floor a hundred times before his foot found the terminal; he might have lived weeks, months, even a year—but, sooner or later, coincidence would bring about that pressure of his foot upon the terminal and Bentley's consequent destruction.

As to the face which Sewell had put on the clock, it came about in this wise, as he confessed the day before his execution. In removing the front, Sewell had dropped and fractured the piece of porcelain which bore the lettering of the numerals. He had not dared purchase another clock, and, since the parts of the clocks of the two rival companies were identical, Sewell had gone to his own factory by night, after it had been forced to close, and, setting up the printing dies, had printed a new front, which he afterward brought back to the Gordonia and exchanged for the broken portion.

"How did you know that, Crewe?" I asked. "What was the difference between the front that Sewell printed and that of a normal clock—of the church tower, for instance."

"It was a singular event," Crewe answered indirectly, "and seems to show that Providence, or rather Nemesis, follows closely upon the criminal. Sewell must have seen hundreds of clock fronts printed, and yet, at the supreme moment, the habit of years deserted him and he became as helpless as a novice. Langton, take out your watch. You have the Roman numerals. Look at the fourth hour. How is it printed?"

"Four strokes," I said.

"Four single strokes," said Crewe. "A deviation from the Roman lettering. How would you write the Roman 'four' in manuscript?"

"An I and a V," I cried, with sudden enlightenment.

"That is precisely how Sewell printed the face of the 'Once-a-Year,'" said Crewe.

ANY BRIDE SATISFIED HIM

In India, When the Groom's First Choice Balked, He Accepted a Volunteer.

The Youth's Companion recounts a story of a wedding described in Dr. Winifred Heston's "A Bluestocking in India."

"Yesterday I went to a native Christian wedding. Many guests had assembled and the ceremony had progressed to the point where Mr. Grey asked the bride:

"'Do you take this man to love cherish and obey?' when the young woman in the case responded with a surprising and unmistakable 'No!'

"Mr. Grey labored with her in an undertone, but to no avail. The marriage had, as usual, been arranged by the parents without consulting the daughter. But it is almost an unknown thing for a girl to be so bold and disobedient. The situation was then explained to the assembled guests, and volunteers were asked to supply the vacancy. A young woman promptly came forward and the ceremony proceeded as if nothing had happened.

"Afterward the bridal pair left the altar by different aisles to hold a reception under a tree, where congratulations and rice were poured upon them. The groom placed a silver ring upon the great toe of the bride's left foot, and a 'best man' tied the groom's neck scarf to the bride's flowing garment, and thus they sat in state for some hours."

Learning to Spell.

Little Margaret, who is three years old, lived for a long time next door to a family who kept a cat bearing the name of Billy. Then she moved away from the family, and did not see the cat again.

Several days ago Margaret's mother tried to teach her how to spell cat and dog. After many efforts she succeeded in getting her daughter to spell the words after her, and stopped for the first lesson.

The day following the mother said suddenly:

"Margaret, what does c-a-t spell?" She did not have to wait for an answer. Quick as a flash the child turned toward her.

"Billy," she replied.

Japan Made "Hamlet" Up to Date.

Some strange liberties are taken with Shakespeare on the Japanese stage. The Kobe Herald recently described a performance in that town of "Hamlet," with the scene laid in modern Japan. The prince appears first in a silk hat and a swallow-tail coat, then on a bicycle, clad in a bright blue cycling suit and striped stockings, and then in evening dress again, with a flower in his button-hole. This up-to-date collegian has little more resemblance to the Hamlet whom Shakespeare conceived than a Jew of the modern Johannesburg type would bear to the Shylock of ancient Venice. Ophelia, for the purpose of the play, is transformed into a fellow student of Hamlet at the Imperial University of Tokyo.

If She Winked.

"Set down! Set down!" said a cross crabbid old man as two saucy little urchins stood up in front of him at an entertainment, "I can't see er wink."

"Aw, go on!" cried one of them. "If she winks we'll tell you," and remained where they stood the rest of the evening.

GIRAFFE A CURIOUS BRUTE

Though Exceedingly Frightened by Slight Rustle, He Is Quite Indifferent to Loud Noises.

Among the curious characteristics of the giraffe is its strange indifference to loud noises, as contrasted with its peculiar "scariness" with reference to slight sounds. Noisy sounds, like that of a man walking near in hobnailed boots, the giraffe does not appear to notice, but should it be approached by a woman whose skirts give out but the slightest rustle, the sound thereof causes the giraffe to start up with pricked ears and eyes distended in fear.

Officials of a zoological institution, situated near a canal, tell of a curious instance of this peculiarity of giraffes. After a terrible explosion of gunpowder on a barge on the canal, the keepers were astonished to observe that the giraffes took little notice of the tremendous blast. They jumped to their feet, but almost at once laid down again, when they found that nothing extraordinary had happened in their inclosure. But, were a keeper at night to creep along outside that inclosure in his stocking feet, the queer beasts would exhibit such terror that one would imagine them about to dash themselves in terror against the fences.

Giraffes fear the lurking foe, and a big bang scares them hardly at all. To them the faint, rustling sound is a token of the greatest danger. In that respect they are like deer.

Skyscraping Nerve.

Way up in the air, at skyscraping construction work, on a single steel beam, spanning space among the clouds like an aeroplane, a workman lost his balance or made a misstep—so high up he was that watchers could not make out which—and tottered, wavering there to make your stomach fall into your boots while your heart thumped the top of your skull. Then he got a grip on himself, recovered his poise, apparently looked down for a moment on the army of wee human mites so far below on earth—and went about his work again. Good sky scraping nerve. Wonder did he tell the wife and kiddies when he got home to supper? No, not with that nerve.

Chinese Traits.

The Chinese are orderly, law-abiding and well-behaved; they have a strong sense of right and justice—are fair minded; they are reliable in commercial dealings—pay their debts and keep their agreements, whether verbal or written; they are dutiful to parents, fond of children and mindful of etiquette and punctilious about returning courtesies or favors; they are respectful to elders and superiors; they honor and respect character and intellectual ability, and do not recognize an aristocracy of wealth. This list might be largely extended, but it is enough to show what I have undertaken to show—that China has not by any means to seek abroad all the requisites for national greatness and popular welfare; some of the most important are here already.—Address to students of St. John's college, Shanghai.

Has an Eye for Books.

Yale university produced perhaps its pluckiest student recently in the person of a negro youth who applied at the Yale bureau of appointments and self-help for some sort of light work.

The student, who had a diploma from Shaw university, was deaf and dumb and blind in one eye, but he wrote on his slate that the one eye was enough to get him through the Yale Law school, and he felt sure of getting another sheepskin to hang beside his parchment from Shaw.

The bureau refused to make public the student's name, but the officials said they would find some remunerative work for his one remaining eye, even if they had to appoint him to the faculty.

Despised Thistle a Forage.

It was by accident the western Kansas farmers found that Russian thistles make a good forage crop for cattle. The farmers for years had battled against the Russian thistle pest and the state legislature appropriated money to combat it.

One day after a heavy windstorm a farmer found all his cattle eating Russian thistles that had banked up against a barbed wire fence. The news spread rapidly over the western part of the state and as a result Russian thistles are now harvested with as much care as alfalfa.—Kansas City Journal.

It contains no opium or other narcotic and may be given to a child with implicit confidence. Sold by all dealers.

LONDON STATISTICS

The annual volume of London statistics issued by the county council, collates once more the amazing array of metropolitan life in tabular form. Perhaps in no other form than this volume of over 600 pages of table does the immensity of London so impress itself upon the mind. One of the first effects of the recent census is presented; the birth, death, marriage and other rates for last year are corrected, and the result is as follows:

	Per thousand souls.
Births	25.4
Deaths	13.7
Excess—Births over deaths	11.7
Lunatics	6.5
Paupers, indoor	17.4
Paupers, outdoor	9.9
All paupers, including lunatics	31.7

The importance of this revision will at once be apparent. The birth and death rates are higher, but still lower than in 1901, the falling off in the death rate being very marked. The increase in lunatics amounts to 1 per 1,000, but an increase of over 4 per 1,000 is shown in paupers.

An old age pension section is added for the first time, and shows that at the end of last year 78,458 pension claims had been determined, of which 9,225 had been disallowed.

For the first time statistics are given showing the local distribution of workers in different trades. There were in 1907, 387,061 persons engaged in factories in the county of London, divided as follows:

	Male.	Female
Adults	227,844	97,398
Young persons	30,805	30,977
Children	17	20

The boroughs with the smallest and largest numbers of factory workers are given as under, and the large number in the city is very noticeable: Stoke Newington 1,084, Paddington 2,268, Chelsea 2,410. Lewisham 2,855, Marylebone 5,333, Kensington 5,203, city 39,524, Finsbury 34,535, Poplar 26,952, Westminster 26,169, Stepney 22,843, Bermondsey 23,270.

The total parliamentary electorate in the London county council area is 670,110, of whom 575,058 are householders, 88,857 lodgers, and 6,295 freemen of the city of London. At the last parliamentary general election 95.4 per cent. of the electorate was given the opportunity of voting but 74.6 only availed themselves.

There are 50 theatres, 48 music halls, 292 cinematograph theatres, skating rinks, concert halls and dancing rooms, etc. There are 9,298 licensed premises, Westminster leading with 636, Stepney coming next with 600, Hampstead and Stoke Newington bringing up the rear with 87 and 77 respectively.

The work of the detective force is shown in the fact that 10,945 persons were arrested by such officers. "Finger-prints" were responsible for the detection of 9,960 persons. In the course of their duties the police seized 40,285 dogs, stopped 271 runaway horses, attended 2,929 fires, found 27,-'64 windows or doors open, restored 1,579 people to their friends, and took 12,957 people to hospitals in consequence of accidents, etc.

Children on the rolls in elementary schools on March 31, 1910, numbered 19,607. There are in the free libraries under the various London municipalities 7,808,124 books, as compared with 3,886,671 in 1897-98. The number of borrowers last year was 939,220, as against 136,870 in 1897-98.

Figures are given showing the traffic on the main roads on certain days of last year, and it is interesting to note that for the winter enumeration the figures are 133,336, against 194,451, in the summer enumeration. In the latter figures there were 65,280 horse vehicles and 42,107 motor vehicles, 72,637 cycles and 1,613 motor-cycles. The number of trains to each London terminus on an ordinary day in December last was 8,427.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL FOR The Hospital for Sick Children

Dear Mr. Editor,—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

I make this direct appeal to the people of Ontario, for the fathers and mothers of Ontario, outside the City of Toronto, have precisely the same claim for their sick children as regards the privileges of the Hospital, as parents who reside in this city.

In brief the sick children from any place in Ontario whose parents cannot afford to pay, is, on certificate from a municipal officer of any city, town, village or township, treated free.

This is a privilege not granted by any Hospital in the Dominion, or on this Continent.

Let me, in a few words, state that in the last 20 years, since 1891, there have been 4,731 patients from 450 places outside of this city treated free, as the parents were unable to pay for treatment. Last year 384 patients from 224 places outside Toronto were so treated.

The Hospital is not a city but a Provincial institution. The Corporation of Toronto grants $18,000, not only for city children, but towards the maintenance of every patient in the Hospital, and the citizens of Toronto donate an average of $40,000 to the maintenance fund of the Hospital.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province.

Why, in the Orthopedic department in 20 years, nearly 700 children, boys and girls, have been treated for club feet, and about 600 were corrected. Two-thirds of these came from places outside of Toronto, from parents who could not afford to pay.

Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Every day is Christmas to the child whose little life is saved, or whose crippled limb is straightened with the might of money—your money—and the mercy of the Hospital.

Will you, the reader of this letter, think of what your dollar will do? It helps to restore health and strength, and gives sound limbs and straight feet to crippled boys and girls.

You give wealth to the Hospital, and the Hospital gives health to the children.

Yes, your money can put golden hinges on the door of the Hospital's mercy.

Will you, kind reader, help us and send a spare dollar to Douglas Davidson, the secretary-treasurer of the Hospital, or

J ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

R. R. HALL'S ADDRESS

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH

In Which He Sets Forth His Platform as Justification of the Support of the Electors—To Safeguard Popular Rights and Promote Progressive Measures

GENTLEMEN:

As the unanimously nominated candidate of the Liberals of this Riding, it is incumbent upon me to suggest some of the considerations and features of policy I favour in order to justify me in soliciting your support. I therefore submit to you some of the main planks of the Liberal platform and my own on which I stand and if, as a result of your support, I am elected, I shall use my best endeavours to have them given effect.

WORKMAN'S COMPENSATION ACT

The Workman's Compensation Act should be radically remodelled, embodying the best features of the English and German Acts and extended so that full and ample damages may be given to a workman or his family on account of any injury he may sustain in the course of his employment and that without a law suit.

Moreover, the workman or his family under such a law should not be called upon to fight an expensive law suit in the courts with a wealthy corporation and be dragged from one Court of Appeal to another with the evident advantage in the long run to the longest purse, or else be compelled to accept a mere pittance for the injury he has sustained.

THE FACTORIES ACT

In order to prevent accidents to workmen, provision should be made for a more frequent inspection by competent inspectors, whose duty should be to see that dangerous machinery and places are properly guarded, fire escapes furnished, sanitary and ventilation facilities improved, and every step taken to protect and preserve the life, limb and health of employees.

Many accidents happen to employees due to working them too long hours. The employer should be made liable for this increased risk. He should either be compelled to give shorter hours to his employees or else be compelled to assume increased risk which follows in consequence of an employee being over-tired and over-worked.

EDUCATION

A more progressive and adequate educational policy is urgently needed. More liberal grants should be given in aid of primary education, in the promotion of industrial training and technical schools in urban and rural communities; and in the establishment of night schools for the benefit of those who have been forced to leave school at an early age to earn their own living. Model schools should be restored with a view of increasing the supply of efficient and qualified teachers.

Two great general principles should underlie our educational system in this English-speaking province which forms such an important part of this English-speaking continent, namely:

To attain this end, necessary laws and regulations should be passed and enforced and liberal aid should be given to provide further adequate training schools and a sufficient supply of competent and qualified teachers for every School Section in every part of the Province.

Were this done, tens of thousands of our fellow citizens would not be as they are now deprived of the opportunity of acquiring any knowledge of the English language.

AGRICULTURE

The rural population of Ontario is declining in this Province, which contains the richest and best farm lands on this continent. This state of affairs can be reversed by bringing about the active immigration into this Province of suitable people for settlement and employment upon our farm lands; by the building of good roads throughout Ontario, and thereby facilitating traffic and insuring quick delivery of farm and garden produce; by increasing the rural telephone service; by the location of a demonstrator in every rural riding, and by the establishment of suitable demonstration farms in each riding, and by showing to the farmers through such demonstration farms the resulfts of successful experiments in every branch of agriculture.

NEW ONTARIO

New Ontario should be developed and settled and its railway facilities utilized and the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway should be made to do service as a colonization road, and should be extended to the Hudson Bay, and branches should be built as the development of the country demands.

A speedy end should be put to the neglect to settle, and develop, the agricultural possibilities of New Ontario, such as has marked the past seven years. A government with an earnest desire to do something to develop the agricultural possibilities of this splendid farming region, would do something to facilitate its settlement which is now handicapped from lack of roads to give new settlers access to or egress from their premises. Without roads or the sympathic attitude of a government the settler in New Ontario is greatly handicapped and the settlement of the country is correspondingly retarded.

TAXATION

The Assessment Act should be so amended so as to permit a municipality, if it so desires, to exempt improvements from taxation, either in whole or in part, and to provide for the removal of the existing inequalities of taxation.

AID TO CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

The alarming prevalence of tuberculosis calls for the aid of the Provincial Government, which it is not now receiving, (and is rudely denied) to assist in the provision of facilities for curative or pallative treatment for those whose means prevent this. To this end I would favor amendment of the Succession Duties Act so as to impose an additional percentage of taxation on the estates of very wealthy men, say $250,000.00 and over, to provide a fund to be devoted to the maintenance of tuberculosis sanitaria and the aid of the work of the Children's Aid Society.

PROVINCIAL AID TO RADIAL RAILWAYS

Peterborough is particularly well located for the establishment of a system of radial railways in this district owing to the large number of water powers that would furnish cheap operation. These railways would provide the city with more of the necessaries of life at a cheaper rate; would furnish cheaper and better accommodation to farmers in bringing their produce to market; and attract tourists to our summer resorts. Aid should be given to attain this end, with a percentage of profits to be returned to the Province, after roads are in operation and earning reasonable dividends.

In addition to what I have above recited I shall feel it my duty to support any measure to meet the legitimate demands of a progressive people. If you think that I shall be able to give you valuable and effective, as it shall be my aim to give you, faithful service, I respectfully ask your vote and support.

As it will be impossible for me to personally call upon all the Electors, I trust that this means of communicating my position will meet with your approval and secure me the favour of your vote and support.

Yours respectfully,

R. R. HALL

FROM A GIRL'S NOTEBOOK

From the Philadelphia Record

Smartness is a subtle quality, not to be attained by mere beauty or by exquisite dress and faultless surroundings. To be smart it is essential to be amusing, and to amuse is difficult without a flavour of eccentricity—the something original, daring, horse ligne, which duller people talk about and princes admire.

A theatrical manager isn't to be considered an astronomer merely because he discovers a new star.

Scientists claim that women are not inventors, yet it is to their wives that men owe their gift of creative imagination. It develops a tremendous lot of talent to invent original excuses for late hours on club nights.

"Real art conceals art." Shakespeare lived in a kingdom and jested at kingship unreprimanded because he veiled his keen shafts of allegory that did not lessen their sharpness. Possibly those of to-day who are virile enough to expose fallacies of modern statehood and society would be treated less kindly did they practice pungency so artistically.

We would be happier did our good impulses find truer and more natural vent; but we force them through a labyrinth of conventionality thatcompels numerous little struggles of resistance, which are merely the efforts of worldly training trying to assert its feeble rights against the real rights of the universe.

A goodly thing is an umbrella—it always persists in keeping Lent.

Santie's Kiss

By Margaret G Hays

"I'VE HUNG up my stockin' an'
said 'Good-night,'
An' all my folks are sleepin' tight.
Now I'm goin' to watch closely, just because I want to see ol' Santie Claus.
So out o' bed I'll sof'ly creep,
'Cause ever'body's fas' asleep.
I hanged two stockings up, 'cause, see,
The white one 'at belongs to me
Is far too small. I hope 'at he Will soon come down the chim-me-lee.
'Fraid Mother wouldn't 'prove o' this,
But I want to give him jus' one kiss."
Dear, dear! the sandman spoils the plan,
Soon fast asleep falls little Nan.
The fire glows cozily and warm
Upon the little night-gowned form
When down the chimney with his pack
Hops Santa like a jumping jack.
"Why, see who's here?" Old Santa said,
Then carried Nannie off to bed.
Tucked her in warm, dear little miss,
Then softly took one loving kiss.
"She waited up for me, dear tot," Laughs Santa, "So I'll leave a lot
Of all the best my pack contains
And take that sweet kiss for my pains.
"Merry Christmas!" Nannie cries
As she opes her sleepy eyes,
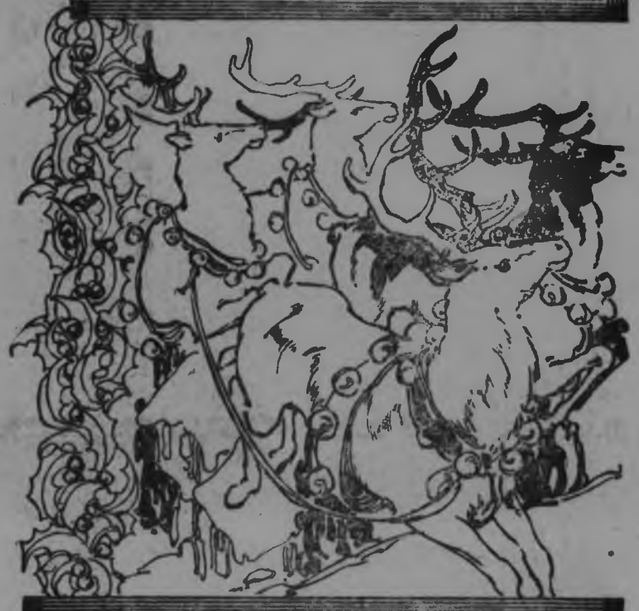
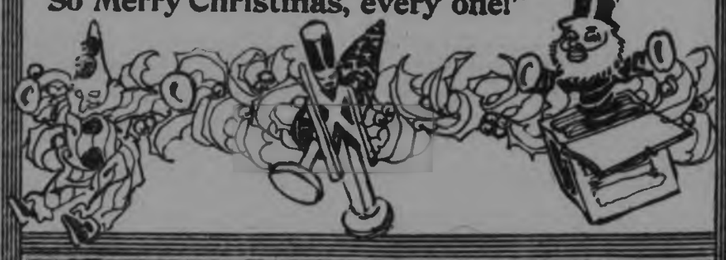
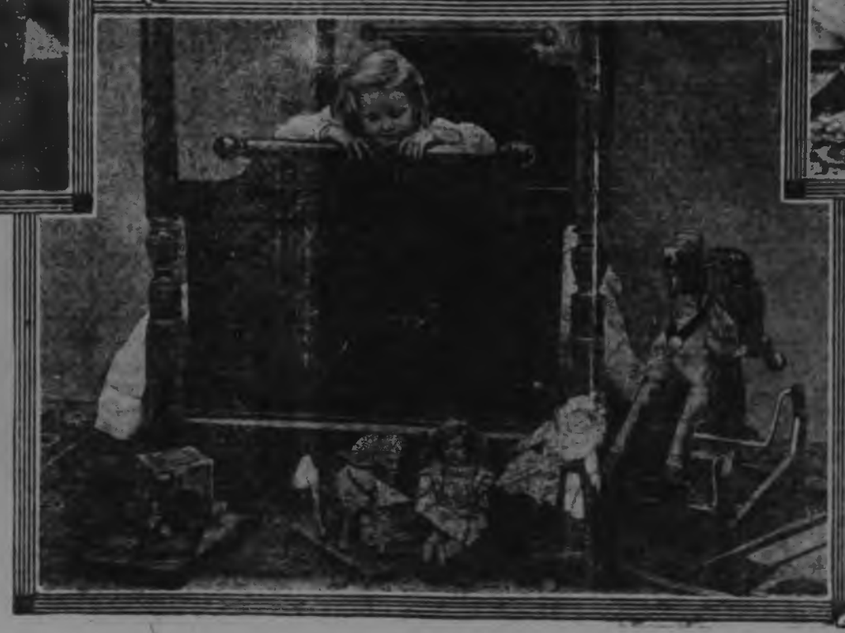
Both stockin's full as full can be,
An' round my bed, upon the floor,
Are toys an' dollies—more an' more.
Dear Santie Claus has sure been here.
Maybe I'll stay awake nex' year.
Now I'll get dressed an' have some fun
So Merry Christmas, every one!"







A Lighthouse Christmas Night

by Molly Elliot Seawell

REDWOOD was a sentimentalist, although nobody knew it except himself. Like all men who act their own plays, he liked to live over again the vivid story. He would stay in town late in order to go down to the big Argus building and, standing on the sidewalk, watch the pressmen trundling in the huge rolls of white paper and all the preparations made before the great presses in the sub-cellar began their clanging at two o'clock in the morning.

As Redwood stood—a big, handsome, clean shaven man he would see himself an awkward stripling, fresh from a country printing office, and thinking the Argus building of forty years before the grandest of its kind. He saw himself rising to be foreman of the pressroom, then publisher and at last owner and proprietor of a newspaper bigger than even his early dreams had pictured, and his early dreams were big.

On the top floor of the huge new Argus offices Redwood had an office that was a vision of white marble and Pompeiian red. Behind it was a little hole of a place in which were Redwood's battered old desk and chair, the first desk and chair he ever owned, and they were thirty years old.

Redwood did not like the smart young reporters, just out of college, to know about this hidden sanctuary and called it his coat room, but the only coat there was the coat on his back. Then, it had a window, and on starry nights Redwood would stand at that window and look over the black and seething city punctuated with electric lamps, past the harbor lights, down the wide stretches of the surging sea to the lighthouse, with its one great incandescent eye flashing once in two minutes.

And a couple of miles to the left, in the bosoage of the shore, was the real shrine of Redwood's affections, his splendid country house, and in the biggest and finest bedroom that money could provide lay sleeping Sibyl, sole daughter of his house and heart. Redwood's affection for this girl had in it something of the savage as well as the saint, for he was not the product of a library or a university, but of powerful endeavor.

Sibyl was not beautiful nor brilliant, this twenty-two-year-old girl, but Redwood yearned to wrest from the world for his Sibyl the same admiration that was laid at the feet of the dainty Chaloner girls with their slim elegance.

That thought always brought Redwood's eye back to the Palladium building, just across the way insignificant in appearance compared with its mighty neighbor, the Argus. But the Palladium was not insignificant, nor was Chaloner, its editor, an insignificant person.

Redwood had always felt a vague fear and envy of Chaloner and his newspaper. Then Chaloner had a son, and the sight of this young man, slight and elegantly made like his sisters, brilliant like his father, with a touch of the university man about him, always stabbed Redwood to the heart. This robust day dreamer, sixty years old, had invented a little romance by which Sibyl Redwood was to become Mrs. Geoffrey Chaloner, and the two newspapers were to be merged as the Argus-Palladium. But, then, Sibyl might not please young Chaloner—at that Redwood ground his teeth. If only her body were as beautiful as her heart and soul Chaloner or any other man would be down on his knees before Sibyl Redwood. So thought her father.

Chaloner's Appeal.

One night when Redwood stood at the window in his alleged coat room he heard a knock at the outer door. He slipped immediately into the Pompeiian and marble apartments called his office. There stood Olin, his managing editor, wearing a large and suggestive grin.

"There's a man downstairs wanting a job—young Chaloner."

"The h—— the devil you say!" shouted Redwood, remembering in time that Sibyl had forbidden him to use the word hell.

"The Palladium has been sold. The whole business went through in a week. Chaloner himself retires from work and young Chaloner is not in sympathy with the new management and wants to know if there is anything for him here. He is in my office now."

"Send him up," said Redwood. In that moment, his mental processes being quick, he resolved not to say anything to Chaloner about his previous salary, but to offer him about twice as much as it had probably been.

In a minute or two Chaloner entered. The two men were the antitheses of each other. Chaloner was the product of many generations of gentle people, the man of the library, but who was awake to the world. Redwood stood forth like Ulysses, the man who had fought his way to the front.

"Mr. Olin tells me you are looking for a job," said Redwood, pleasantly.

"Decidedly," replied young Chaloner. He had always cherished a secret admiration for human catapults like Redwood.

"What can you do?" asked Redwood.

Chaloner smiled a peculiarly quick and brilliant smile, which showed fine teeth.

"Anything," he said, "judging by what I have been doing, and nothing at all, judging by what my father tells me. My father is, in some respects, the worst newspaper boss on this planet. He expects an ordinary reporter to write English like Walter Pater and the editorials to read as if Homer had dashed them off in a moment of inspiration. I can't say I ever came up to my father's ideas, but I can do tolerably good work."

"I know it," replied Redwood. "For pure intellectuality I don't believe any other newspaper ever excelled the Palladium under your father's management. I don't mind saying that I always admired it, but I was not fool enough to try to copy it." Then assuming an air of careful consideration Redwood asked:—

"What do you want by the way of salary?"

"The best I can get," replied Chaloner.

Then Redwood, with the same elaborate pretence of thoughtfulness, named a sum that made little thrills of delight run up and down Chaloner's spine and which he accepted promptly.

"And now," said Redwood, still affecting offhandedness, "since you are the son of a brother editor I would like to establish some friendly relations with you. I have a little place down by the sea"—Redwood thought this was a fine concession to Chaloner, as the "little place" was the handsomest establishment in that region—"and I have a little daughter. Pardon me, but I am so proud of that girl that I think I am doing a man the greatest favor in the world to introduce him to her. Come and call soon. She's to have a big ball on Christmas night and I'd like to have you come. She owns the place and this newspaper plant and me, too."

The Invitation.

"I shall call on Miss Redwood with much pleasure," replied Chaloner. He liked Redwood's innocent enthusiasm, but he had seen Sibyl Redwood—a short, plain, dark girl—and he did not care for short, plain, dark girls. He preferred a slim blonde beauty, like his mother and sisters.

Nevertheless, the call was made, although Miss Redwood was not at home, and soon after he received a big card inviting him to the Christmas ball. The night was clear and frosty, as Christmas nights should be, and the great house, splendidly lighted and wide open, had the air of joyous hospitality. Redwood and his daughter received the guests, and received them well. Redwood appeared to advantage in his own house.

Sibyl Redwood seemed to Chaloner to be shorter and darker and stouter than he had supposed, but she was well dressed and she had an air of dignity and a soft voice and a softer smile. She did not dance, assuming gravely the air of a mature woman, but at two o'clock in the morning, when the dancers' feet had beat the floor for four hours, the Virginia reel began. Then Sibyl, with her father, led the good old fashioned dance.

They Were Shivering and Trembling and Drenched

Redwood danced with a dash and gayety with which he had footed it forty years before in country barns and Sibyl showed unexpected grace and kept up well with Redwood's looping and flinging. Chaloner could not but think it a pretty sight, the father and daughter dancing together. In the middle of the dance they passed under the chandelier hung with mistletoe, and Redwood suddenly stopped and, catching Sibyl to his heart, kissed her all over her face with a passion of fatherhood. A burst of handclapping came, and Chaloner clapped louder than anybody else.

As he motored back to the Argus office under the mysterious stars he concluded that a woman might have great charm without being either tall, blonde or slender, for Sibyl Redwood had certainly a quaint charm.

He continued in this mind during the winter, the spring and summer and autumn. And then an unlucky thing happened. Sibyl Redwood's great lump of money loomed up larger every day. Chaloner was supersensitive and secretly afraid of that world which he defied so smilingly. Being at heart deeply and sincerely modest, he doubted if Sibyl would look at him, and he had a mistaken conviction that Redwood would kick him down stairs if he knew the tender visions that sometimes came between Chaloner's short sighted glasses and the page upon which he wrote his editorials.

And so the year went by and it was Christmas again. This time Christmas had come on a Sunday, and the big ball at the Redwood place was to be on Christmas Eve. The ball was, if anything, gayer and more brilliant than that of the year before. Again Redwood and his daughter danced the Virginia reel together and kissed under the mistletoe, and it was quite daylight before Chaloner, who was the only guest asked to stay the night, found himself in a great, luxurious bedroom, where he lay awake and thinking what an infernal fool he had been from every point of view.

First he had been a fool in thinking Sibyl Redwood without the power to charm because she had little beauty. There are some women whose personality eclipses form and feature. Then, the next piece of asininity—Chaloner caller it by a stronger name with an expletive before it—was ever allowing himself to become enthralled by her. For there was that mountain of money—Chaloner's plans of asking Redwood for his daughter always ended in a vision of being thrown down stairs propelled by Redwood's large foot. Sibyl would not laugh—she was too kindly for that—but she would no doubt think him a puppy.

The Motor Boat.

In another big, luxurious bedroom Redwood was chuckling because he thought he saw that his Sibyl could marry the cleverest young fellow he knew, and that the Argus-Palladium combination, in another form, might come true. Redwood had no occasion to change his mind when he saw Sibyl and Chaloner going off to church together and then strolling about the grounds all the rest of the forenoon. In the afternoon Redwood, who was a rough and tumble diplomat, said to Chaloner:

"Look here, my boy. Every Christmas day my daughter takes a Christmas dinner to the lightkeeper in the lighthouse. I've got to go to town and I don't like to trust her in the motor boat with the engineer, so if you don't mind taking her out I shall be very much obliged."

Chaloner, like a man truly in love, jumped at the proposal. The day was soft and bright and the short stretch of sea between the pier and the lighthouse off the rocky point a mile away was of a glittering blue and gold.

"Can you run a motor boat?" asked Redwood. "If you can't Sibyl can. There's nothing that girl can't do."

At this Sibyl smiled the soft smile that always charmed Chaloner.

"Don't you believe a word my father says about me," she said. "He goes around telling people that I am a beauty and a wit and all sorts of things that are not true. I am so ashamed of him I don't know what to do." At which the father and daughter exchanged a smile that was a caress.

Chaloner thought himself in heaven when he was aboard the motor boat alone with Sibyl and the lightkeeper's Christmas dinner. Suddenly the sun disappeared. The day turned gray and a great fog bank came rushing in from the wide reaches of the ocean.

"I think," said Chaloner, "instead of taking the lightkeeper his Christmas dinner I will take you back to the pier."

The boat was running to meet the fog bank, but Chaloner turned her landward. Then the fog chased them and overtook them. It was as quick as a dream, and the motor, as if in despair, gave a shriek, a sob and a shiver, and stopped, helpless and trembling. Chaloner and Sibyl were alone in a great white world, where there was neither light nor darkness, neither day nor night, neither sky nor sea.

"Don't get scared," said Chaloner, smiling, "nothing is going to happen. The fog will be gone presently."

"I am not scared," answered Sibyl coolly, "and the fog always goes away some time, you know."

Chaloner plunged into conversation. He was not quite so easy in his mind as he pretended to be, but Sibyl's calmness was genuine. So an hour passed and the fog grew denser and more icy every moment. They were drifting somewhere, Chaloner knew not where. Presently, directly under the boat a bell sounded, faint and far off, like the bells of the under world.

"That's the bell buoy," said Sibyl. "It is the fog that deadens the sound. On clear days it can be heard five miles. Now we are in a current that I know perfectly well, because I have steered this motor boat all over these waters. That current will carry us straight to the lighthouse. The keeper will have his dinner after all."

So another hour passed, and striking a match Chaloner could see by his watch that it was four o'clock, but it was as if time and the world had disappeared. His nerves were tense, but Sibyl, sitting muffled up in her furs, was a picture of serenity. He began to see in her something of Redwood's leonine courage, splendid and spiritualized. She was a sensible creature and knew that only one-eighth of an inch of steel was between them and eternity and that at any moment the side of a vessel might loom up out of the fog and that they would receive a mortal blow—one would be enough. But she sat calm and even smiling.

In the Lighthouse.

"We will make the lighthouse sure," she said. "I have often done it just for fun. It is only half a mile and it generally takes an hour to do it. We are almost there. I assure you."

And then, just as she spoke, the helpless boat went grinding up against the stonework of the lighthouse. There was a great archway cut in the piers to protect boats in launching and landing and they slipped under this arch of gloom, made fast the boat and climbed the wet and slippery stairs. On the first floor there was a big room used as a storeroom for material and below the great dynamo filled up the space with its web and bulk of machinery.

"The lightkeeper is up stairs in the room where he lives and where the lights are," said Sibyl, piloting the way up the winding stair.

But there was no lightkeeper, nor was there any light. On the table was pinned a great sheet of paper upon which the lightkeeper had written:—

"At two o'clock there was a tremendous noise in the dynamo room and a sound like cracking walls, and the dynamo stopped. I ran down and found that one of the piers had given way and a big crack was made in the walls. The water was rushing in and the dynamo was drowned. I am going ashore for help, but a fog is coming in and God knows when and where I will land. The lighthouse is rocking like a cradle and is likely to go at any minute. I am off."

It was signed and dated, "Two o'clock, Christmas day."

Chaloner read it over Sibyl's shoulder and merely saw her turn pale, but she showed no fear or nervousness.

"Shall we try the motor boat again?" he asked quietly. "Our chances may be better in that."

"Perhaps," said Sibyl calmly, and they turned and ran below. A sharp wind came tearing in from seaward and was driving the fog before it, and also the motor boat, which they saw drifting off about twenty yards away.

"I think now," said Sibyl, with a shadow of a smile "our best chance is in the lighthouse. Lighthouses don't fall down so easily. I daresay the lightkeeper got scared for nothing. Let us go back."

Chaloner for the first time in his life was brought face to face with that wild beast called fear, but it was fear for Sibyl. He had a man's courage for himself, but the thought that this brave creature might go down in the wreck and storm of mutilation made his heart turn to water in his breast. But her courage shamed his fear. They again climbed the winding stair and saw through the small window of thick glass, like the porthole of a ship, a great mass of stone and brick and iron lying in the sea. The fog, driven landward by the biting blast, turned into a driving snowstorm. Sibyl said:—

"Of course there must be some emergency lamps here. Let us look around and see if we can't light up. This will be a bad Christmas night for vessels as well as for us—perhaps."

The Christmas Dinner.

Then Chaloner and she went down again into the lower room and rummaged in the cupboards, where they found indeed a dozen great oil lamps and plenty of oil. The lamps were filled and Chaloner and herself toiled up the winding stair, which had a faint vibration that sickened Chaloner worse than crossing the English Channel, but he gave no sign. Sibyl, who from the first had taken command, showed Chaloner how to arrange the lamps in their sockets and lighted them. The warm, bright glow and heat of the lamps relieved the cold, which was beginning to be intense. And so inspiring is the spectacle of courage that it gave Chaloner an exaltation that might almost be called happiness.

"And now," said Sibyl, "we must have a Christmas dinner. The lightkeeper's gone in the motor boat, but I daresay something can be found."

Again the two rummaged in cupboards and found some cold meat and colder potatoes, some bread and a bottle of whiskey. This last was hailed with delight by Sibyl and with a deep and silent joy by Chaloner. Sibyl, however, insisted that they must have some equipment for their Christmas dinner—a tablecloth, at least. She found the tablecloth and a treasure besides—the colored supplement of a Sunday newspaper three weeks old.

"We can have some decorations for our Christmas dinner," she said. With a knife she began deftly cutting out the reds and greens and made them into roses, which she placed in the centre of the table. Chaloner watched her with a kind of stupefied admiration. This was indeed Redwood's daughter, the child of his soul as well as of his flesh; the same super's courage, the same mastery of difficulties which had brought Redwood up from the country newspaper office to the place he now occupied. Chaloner even saw a mysterious resemblance coming out between Sibyl and the higher part of Redwood's nature. Sibyl, watching Chaloner as she arranged the paper flowers on the table, easily read his thoughts.

"I know just as well as you that we are speeding between two worlds, but what is the use of getting panic stricken? It is so much more important how one lives than how one dies. The account is all made up now. I believe God hates cowards and He will like us better for taking things, especially danger, quietly."

The storm had now increased; so had the gentle vibration. The wind brought the sound of the bell buoy that could be heard over the screaming and roaring of wind and sea.

"Listen," said Sibyl, "the bell buoy is ringing our Christmas chimes—peace. It means peace in our hearts, and it doesn't matter if the storm is up and the offshore flag is flying."

Presently they were sitting at the little round table opposite each other, and Sibyl, leaning her chin upon her hands, looked full into Chaloner's eyes and said the old, old benediction:—

"God bless us, every one!" To which Chaloner replied, solemnly, "Amen."

"After all," said Sibyl, "there are some blessings. Your mother thinks you safe and my father does not know anything about this rocking." For ever there was that faint vibration, not so much as a street car makes in passing, but to Chaloner it seemed as if the lighthouse rolled at an angle of forty-five degrees. They ate with a good appetite and actually made small jokes about their next Christmas dinner—for courage is contagious, and, as the case often is, the woman infused her brave soul into the man's mind. Chaloner was awkward at clearing the table, and Sibyl called him names, as she often frankly denounced her father. And through it all there was a strange threat and thrill; they were together and alone.

Their conversation came down to a few occasional words, with long and eloquent pauses. Sibyl seated herself in the lightkeeper's big armchair and, leaning her head on her hand, fell into a reverie. As Chaloner watched her eyes closed, and in five minutes she was sound asleep. Meanwhile outside the storm grew more menacing and the waves buried themselves upon the lighthouse like wolves upon their prey. The bell buoy, whose ringing had been faint but clear, now rang wildly, like some terrified living creature, as the wind and waves lashed and tore at each other and all things else.

The Sleeping Sibyl.

Sibyl's sleep, which had at first been soft and shallow, grew deep and was unbroken until three o'clock in the morning. Chaloner sat and watched her. The howling of the wind and sea and the fearful cry of the bell buoy seemed to act on her as a lullaby. Occasionally she moved a little, seeking a more restful position in the great armchair, and presently her long, rich hair became loosed and fell about her in a glory of burnished bronze. Chaloner took a soft tress in his hand and pressed it to his lips. At that moment Sibyl opened her eyes. She had been dreaming of Chaloner, and to see him so close to her seemed part of her dream. Without a word Chaloner took her hand and kissed it. The look in her eyes was encouragement enough, and the next moment their lips met in a long, deep, sweet clinging kiss, one of those caresses of the soul in which its secrets are revealed. Then Sibyl withdrew herself from Chaloner's encircling arms. A sea, louder and heavier than before, struck the lighthouse, a great crash shook it, and it seemed to groan and shiver humanly under the blow.

"Come," said Chaloner, rising. "As love enters one door life often goes out of the other. Let us go down. If we have any chance it is on the pier."

They crept down the trembling stair hand in hand and Chaloner noticed that Sibyl's hand was soft and warm and gave no sign of fear. They glanced at the pier, but over that the waves were breaking in a great glare of phosphorescent light. Above them a haggard moon and menacing stars looked down on them unpityingly, as the black clouds scurried across the angry sea.

"Here must we stay," said Sibyl, drawing Chaloner under the archway. "This arch may hare up or it may crash us, but at least we shall be together."

In icy cold, in darkness, in a deafening clamor of a great wind and a stormy sea, they clung to each other. Whether it should be life or death, love would be with them. They had entertained the Great Guest whom all must receive who wish to say, "I have lived."

The lighthouse held together until daybreak and just as the yellow dawn of December shone over the tormented sea there was a crash louder and wilder than any that had yet been heard. The whole lighthouse tumbled into the sea and the pier became a mass of flying wreckage, but the arch stood and under it Chaloner and Sibyl held each other fast. It seemed to each of them as if the world were too remote ever to be reached again. They had lived in a world of their own only seventeen hours, but it was longer and fuller of surprises and emotions than all of their previous young lives.

When the first shock of the concussion was over and the first drenching wave struck them Chaloner looked into Sibyl's eyes and laughed.

"I think the pier will stand now that the lighthouse has gone," he said, "and the people on shore have seen now what has happened. We shall yet live to be married and have a better Christmas dinner than last night's."

They were shivering and trembling and drenched and Sibyl's mass of hair was flung about by the wind, but hope and joy shone in their eyes and in their voices. They exchanged little tender words such as lovers use and laughed while they shivered. In ten minutes two or three boats and launches put off to the lighthouse. In one of the launches was a man, hatless, with his hands clasped above his head. It was Redwood. As the launch drew near and, rising on the crest of a wave, scraped the base of the pier he sprang out and up and caught Sibyl in his arms.

"I saw the lighthouse when it went over," he gasped. "I had been watching the lights all night and thought my child was safe, and when daylight came—— Oh, great God!"

The strong man reeled in the agony of fear and relief. Chaloner and Sibyl climbed down nimbly enough into the launch as it turned and came back, but Redwood had to be lifted in like a dead man.

* * * * * *

That night the three—Redwood, Chaloner and Sibyl—sat at dinner together warm and safe and in love and peace. Redwood had rallied, but he said to Chaloner:—

"To-night for the first time I feel that I am sixty years old."

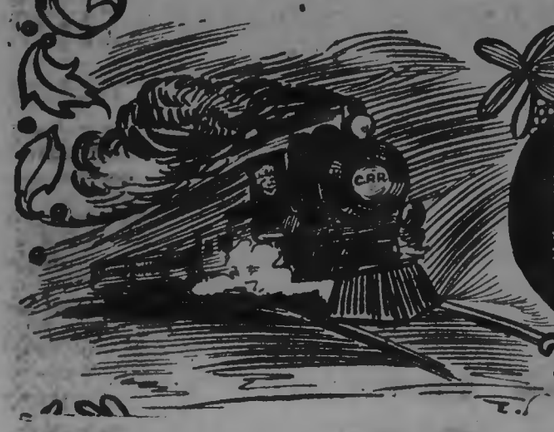
Chaloner's eyes were bright and his brilliant smile came oftener than ever in his life.

"It was pretty bad," he said, "but what came with it was worth it. I don't mind paying the price like a gentleman."

Then Sibyl, looking from one to the other, said in her gentle voice, with that soft smile that began in her eyes and ended on her lips:—

"God bless us, every one!"

How a Big Railroad Keeps Xmas



THE SNOWSHOE CLUB AT THE CHATEAU QUEBEC

The Grand Bounce Canadian Snow Shoe Club

N the year of 1925, if you take up a daily paper of December 25th, you may possibly see a dispatch from the city of "Nowhere," reading somewhat like this:—

(Canadian Associated Press Dispatch.)

Nowhere, Dec. 24th. — Leaping lightly to the Engineer's seat at midnight last night, Santa Claus grasped the throttle of the big locomotive and, quickly the huge special train hurled itself into the dark night carrying with it joy and the Christmas spirit to the people the wide world over.

We say possibly you may see a dispatch like the above, but of course there is also a possibility that you won't, because in the first case it is more than likely that after using them for so many years, Santa won't want to give up "the big sleigh and the eight tiny reindeer," and in the second case, it is just possible that with the big traffic over the railways at Christmas time that even such a very important personage as Santa Claus, couldn't command a special train.

Naturally Christmas is just about the busiest season with a big railway. Not only is there a big freight and express movement but the passenger traffic jumps into big figures. Everybody has a desire to visit the old home at least once a year, and at Christmas, when the snow is on the ground and the spirit of doing and giving is in the air, the desire takes root, grows and finally materializes. There is a wild packing of suitcases, a hurried scurrying to make the "last purchases," and then there is a rush for the station and the train. December is the time when the big rush on the railways first starts, and from then until the last sad obsequies are said over the dead body of the old year railway station officials and sleep are only on the faintest of speaking terms. Long special trains "puff, puff" their way out of the big stations. The colored porters go about on the run, the transfer men work overtime crowding Christmas parcels into the Express cars. The mail men in the post office cars take off their coats roll up their sleeves and sort with twice their ordinary speed. The train despatcher stops going home for lunch, the station master likewise, and then as the December 25th draws nearer, things buzz faster and faster. The man in the information bureau, who ordinarily answers anywhere from 2,000 to 3,000 questions per day now answers 6,000. Extra cars are added to the regular trains. New trains are made up and dispatched within an hour and the station officials get their boots half soled and work harder and later than before. Everybody is going "home." The station is filled with a conglomerate assembly. Over there the fair Co-ed and the Varsity Captain of class '14 scan the pages of the time-table. They are going home to spend the holiday in Cushionville. To the right is the small shop girl who lives at Yorktown, just twenty miles out. She got off an hour earlier than usual to catch the train. On the left a fat man puffs a big cigar and coldly glances at the raging multitude. He wants you to think that he is not at all excited at the idea of getting home. He appears disinterested, but all the same the chances are ten to one that he is thinking of that rocking horse with the real mane that he shipped home to his grandson yesterday. Over there, touching elbows with a matron of sixty, is the young dry goods clerk going back to father and mother on the farm. On all sides are school marms, students, clergy, laborers, clerks, college professors, young maidens, maiden aunts,—all with beaming faces and prominent parcels, and all waiting for the grinding of the wheels and the clang of the bell, that will announce that they are off on their Christmas journey.

The freight and express traffic on a great railway at Christmas time is enormous. There was a time when the greater part of the C. P. R.'s freight and express traffic was from East to West, but with recent years the traffic from the West to the East has steadily increased. This is owing to the great influx of new settlers into Western Canada. The great majority of thees new settlers, of course, came from Britain, and at Christmas time they send home to their relatives and friends numerous presents. During the days preceding the sailing of the last Christmas boats the freight and express matter is forwarded from the West to Quebec and St. John in a perfect flood, and of a varied and interesting nature are the presents sent to friends across the Atlantic. Talk to Canadian railway men and they will tell you that the presents, which are perhaps the most popular with the new settlers are the souvenirs of life in Canada,—miniature snowshoes, toboggans, etc. These are transported from Canada by thousands at Christmas time.

But it is not the increased passenger and freight traffic alone that causes the hustle and bustle in railway circles at Christmas time. On a big railway there are thousands of Christmas dinners to serve, and there are all sorts of Christmas celebrations to prepare for. At Christmas time we happen to know that the C.P.R. orders the turkeys and plum puddings, etc., for its Christmas dinners by the thousands. When the morning of the 24th this year comes into view, all of the company's sixty-seven steamships will not be in commission, but there will be a sufficient number of them out on the broad bosom of the ocean to render necessary the preparation of enough meals to make the figures look pretty large. Then there are the guests at the C.P.R.'s seventeen hotels to feed and the passengers in the dining cars, and altogether the figures are startling.

Christmas is always a festive occasion on the Company's steamships. Over night Santa Claus and his invisible minions work wonderful changes in the appearance of the boats. When the morning of the twenty-fifth dawns, great streamers float in the breezes from the mast heads. Gay bunting and flags "flap, flap," from the lines and the big liners look quite captivating in their holiday clothes. During the day on shipboard, there are sports and concerts and dinners and everybody, from the captain down to the smallest passenger, in the third cabin, joins in the celebration and is happy. First of all, there is a Christmas tree. Christmas Day would not be complete without a tree, so the passengers in the first and second cabins club together, and give the smaller children in the third cabin the time of their lives. The big tree droops under the load of presents. Everybody contributes something, toys, bundles of all sizes and shapes. There are dolls with real hair, and that open and close their eyes. There are toy rubber elephants that squeak in the most "unelephantic" fashion when poked in the right spot. There are toy aeroplanes, toy automobiles, and toy balloons, and occasionally, too, some big, jovial passenger from the first or second cabins will "dress up," and play Santa Claus. Not until the presents are all in their places and the preparations concluded, are the small children of the third cabin allowed into the sacred presence of the tree. Then when the doors are thrown back and the treasures displayed, what a happy giggling and romping there it. For some of them it is their first real Christmas. A couple of years ago on board one of the Empresses there was coming out from Liverpool, a father and mother and two small children. Life had been a failure in England, and the family was on its way to Canada to make a new start. One of the small children was a small girl six years old, who, owing to an infirmity, was unable to join in the play of the other third cabin children. It was lonesome sitting there all alone all day long, and while the little maid did her best to hide that fact, she did not succeed altogether. Then on Christmas morning there was handed to her from the tree, a great big life-size doll, contributed by a first cabin passenger. That marked a new epoch in the little girls' life. After that it did not mattter that she could not build wonderful mud pies in the sand pit with the other children, or play shuffle board. It was her first doll, and she was perfectly happy.

Up in the first and second cabins there are equally stirring scenes. Under the influence of the day there is a general disregarding of the conventionalities. There are games of all kinds. At dinner time in all three cabins the tables groan under the weight of the turkeys, and plum puddings, the fruits, nuts and candies with which they are loaded. In the evening there is a big concert. It is really remarkable the amount of high class talent that is present at these functions—actors travelling between the two continents, amateur and professional singers, expert pianists, entertainers, and occasionally small companies of theatrical players. Outside the wind may be blowing a small gale, but inside the ship, there is warmth, gaiety, and the true Christmas spirit.

At the big railway hotels life on Christmas Day is just as gay as on the steamships. At the Chateau Frontenac, at Quebec; at the Place Viger, at Montreal; at the Royal Alexandra at Winnipeg; and at Vancouver and Victoria the fun runs high. Perhaps there is no hotel on the continent that is quite as renowned, for the festival spirit which pervades its halls at Christmas time as the Chateau Frontenac. The old city of Quebec is wonderful at any time, but at Christmas it is especially entrancing. This is the day when the gay snow-shoe clubs gather at the Chateau. All day long they tramp the parks and country of Quebec, gathering in the evening at the Chateau, tired, but with ravenous appetites. The Chateau is the centre for the festivities for the whole city. From here set out the parties for the toboggan slides. From here go the parties to the skating rinks and the curling rinks. From here leave merry sleighing parties, the bells on the cutters singing a gladsome song. In the evening there is more fun. There is a big dance in the ball room, where guests from the Chateau mix with their friends from the city. The hall is decorated with thousands of flags for the occasion, the big grate fires send up the open chimneys showers of sparks from the Yule logs, the orchestra plays dance music and another Christmas Day goes all too soon.

Getting the Bobs to the top at Ste. Agathe Que.

At Montreal it is becoming the fashionable thing for society to take the railway up to Ste. Agathe for Christmas Day. Here is situated the only bob-sleighing course on the American continent. This is a new sport for Canada, but it is one that bids fair to outrival even the toboggan. The sleighs are built on the same lines as those used in Switzerland. The runners are braced far apart and the hood at the front slopes back towards the steering wheel. On a course like that at Ste. Agathe these sleds travel at an enormous speed,—a mile a minute being often made, when the slide is in good condition. It is an exhilarating sport this, and on Christmas Day the scene at Ste. Agathe is a gay one.

Whenever possible, travellers through the Rocky Mountains at Christmas time try to arrange to spend December 25th at Banff. Banff is an ideal place to spend Christmas Day. Here is the whole big Canadian National Park spread out before one. The park is beautiful in summer, and it is no less attractive in the winter. The towering mountains all around give an air of seclusion and at the same time they suggest that the little village of Banff has been placed there for the sole purpose of pursuing winter sports. And what sport it is. One can drive around Tuhnel Mountain, with the whole valley spread out in the foreground. One can explore on skis the course of the Spray, and pass beneath the shadow of Mt. Rundle. One can rush madly down the slopes of Mt. Sulphur on a toboggan, or tread on snowshoes the the many paths of the woods.

Even on its trains running on Christmas Day the C.P.R. endeavors to keep up the spirit of the day. In the sleeping cars in the moring the colored porter wakes you with a hearty "Merry Christmas to yu, suh." When you enter the dining cars you will find there a special menu for the occasion, and the car is nicely decorated with evergreens and bunting.

That's the way it is throughout the whole C.P.R. system. It is a big railway, but it is not too big to enter fully into the spirit of Christmas Day.

"THE GOOSE"

A Christmas Story by J. J. Bell, Author of "Wee McGregor".

ABOVE the rattle of the sewing machine rose two shrill young voices in conflict.

"I want a turkey!"

"I want a goose!"

"Shut up, Lucy!"

"Don't push me, you horrid boy!"

"Well, don't scratch!"

"Oh—oh, you've bit me!"

"You shouldn't have put your hand in my mouth!"

"I didn't!"

"You did!"

There was a scuffle, a yell, a thud and a low wail.

The sewing machine stopped.

"Children, children," said a sweet, tired voice, "don't squabble. Bobby, help Lucy up, and say you didn't mean to hurt her."

"That would be a big fib," said Bobby, panting.

"Then say you're sorry you knocked her down."

"But I'm not. She slapped me first—and she's bigger'n me."

"Bobby," the mother said reproachfully. "To please me!" she added, gently, prsuasively.

The little boy's fit of temper passed quickly. He extended a hand to his sobbing sister.

"Get up, you silly old ninepin," he said lightly.

"I don't want to get up."

"Come, Lucy, dear," said the mother. "Bobby wants to be friends, you know. And I'm going to stop sewing for five minutes, and you can tell me what the trouble was about. Come her, both of you."

Th little girl rose slowly, dried her eyes on her pinafore, and followed her brother to the table, above which the gas was already lit ,for the December afternoon was of the wettest and gloomiest. The room was warm enough and comfortable in a shabby fashion. Though love had not flown out of the Leslies' window, it was obvious that poverty had come in at the door, and not quite recently; indeed, it had made its first entrance not very long after the Leslies' marriage.

"Now, what was it all about?" Mrs. Leslie inquired, with a smile. She was still pretty, though worried. "You first, Lucy."

"He said he must have a goose for Christmas, and I said a turkey would be far nicer——"

"'Twouldn't! A great big fat goose would be——"

"You've never tasted a goose!" cried Lucy.

"Neither have you! But I smelt the one next door last year. You couldn't smell it, because you had a stuffy nose. So I know——"

"That will do, Bobby," said Mrs. Leslie mildly. "I don't think we'll have a goose this year——"

"Hooray!" cried Lucy, jubilant.

"Or a turkey, either, my dear. I'm telling you now, because I don't want you to be disappointed when Christmas Day comes. But that's not to say that we shan't have a splendid dinner, all the same."

There was a rather distressing silence.

"Mother-" Bobby exploded at last, "how can we have a splendid Christmas dinner without a—a goose?"

"Turkey!" said Lucy, with a threatening of fresh tears.

"Just wait and see," replied the mother with all the cheerfulness at her command. "After all, you know, geese and turkeys are not very good for us; we're apt to require medicine afterwards."

"I wouldn't mind that," the son declared, "I'd take a whole bottle ——"

"I wouldn't eat too much turkey, mother,' the daughter protested.

Mrs. Leslie shook her head. "What do you say to a chicken with lovely stuffing and——"

"A chicken!"

"Whoever heard of a chicken for Christmas?"

"Mis'rable little thing!"

"I hate chicken!"

Mrs. Leslie sighed, then laughed for her sense of humour had survived in spite of care. "I think I'll be able to make you change your little minds about that," she said. "Wait till you smell my chicken! Now get back to your play. I've heaps to do before teatime, and the old machine is in a naughty temper."

The children moved away.

"Lets' ask Daddy when he comes home," said Bobby.

"No!" There was a ring of authority in the mother's voice. "Promise me, both of you, that you'll say nothing to Daddy about geese or turkeys. Lucy—Bobby—you promise?"

Somehow she replied soothingly to their protests and questions, and finally gained the required words. But there was no smile at her lips as she went to wark. And there was a heaviness in her heart. She wished Christmas a year away. To some of us the season has its terrors.

The machine rattled once more; the children fell to playing amicably together; the windows grew black with night.

II.

Robert Leslie had two distinct recollections of being called a fool by his wealthy uncle. The epithet had been uttered in response to his announcement of his approaching marriage and of his decision (a couple of years later) to commence business on his own account. Since the latter occasion Robert had applied the word to himself pretty frequently, though not in his uncle's hearing. As a matter of fact, he had not spoken with his uncle since the day of quitting his employment. Chance encounters on the street—and these were rare—had been limited to a curt nod and mumble on either side. Pride is an excellent thing in its way, but it seldom pays, and often costs even more than money.

And now, for the first time in eight years, Robert, on his way home from business, went round by the street in which his uncle's offices were situated He could not have told why he did so. The night was bitterly cold, and a drizzling rain made the darkness wretched. He was behind his usual time, too. He was fain for his wife and children and fireside, though in these days, alas! he carried home a sorry heartache, and his smile for even the youngsters was wan.

As he drew near the old-fashioned yet handsome building his pace slackened, and presently he came to a halt opposite it, glancing furtively across the street with its dwindling traffic. How familiar everything was, how suggestive of solid business and generous profit, of security from want and safety from sordid petty cares! Over there he had spent the working hours of his youth and early manhood—he could tell the windows behind which his years in the different departments had been passed. He could tell, also, those of his uncle's private room, wherein cold good-byes had been exchanged eight years ago. Most of the windows were now dark, and as he watched, the last of the lights wen ou—extinguished by tshe caretaker, he guessed.

Robert sighed and made to turn away. Stay! There was still some light in the private room—a lowered gas-jet and the flickering glow of a fire. Perhaps his uncle was coming back later. Robert remembered how in the old days just at this time of the year, the master of the good business was wont to spend a few evenings at his desk after dinner. Should he wait on the chance of gaining an interview with the old man? Five minutes ago he had not dreamt of such a thing, but now—somehow—was it the sight of the familiar windows, the cosy flicker that had moved him?—he felt a craving to stand in the old place once more.

What an utter, unpardonable fool he had been ever to leave it—to throw up a sure, generous and increasing salary for the will-o'-the-wisp of a fortune to be derived from his own? Where was the capital he had invested in it? oGne—gone—shadow, bones and all! For himself, he was now slaving in a situation yielding him barely half the salary enjoyed at his uncle's office. Again he glanced at the fire lit window. He shook his head.

No! He could not face his uncle. Besides they would be worrying about him at home; he must hasten. He turned away despairingly, sick at heart.

That night in bitter mood he told his wife of the impulse that had sent him along the more familiar street.

"I don't suppose I could have faced him; and if I had, I'd probably have got snubbed for my pains. He doesn't forgive failures. But, Oh, Marjorie, what a fool I've been!" he concluded.

"Don't reproach yourself, dear," she replied for perhaps the thousandth time in recent years. "I don't care what your uncle may think; I know that you did everything for the best. It hasn't been your fault, Robert—never!"

He shook his head wearily. "You're a brick, Marjorie," he said sadly; "but I know what you suffer."

"Nonsense! Things might be ever so much worse. The children keep well and there's enough to eat, and—and—oh, don't give way, my dear!"

"It's this Christmas business that breaks my heart, I believe," he said bitterly. "You havent a penny to spend on yourself or the kiddies, and as soon as Christmas is past those over-due bills will come flowing in again. I wish we could all go to sleep for Christmas week. One gets one's poverty rubbed in just now. What a mess I've made of things! What trouble I've brought you to!"

"No, no," she said bravely, though her lips quivered. "We'll pull through somehow, Robert. But do you mind telling me, have you ever really felt like going to your uncle for—for help?"

"Why do you ask?"

"Because I want you to understand that you must never humble yourself for my sake, dear."

"Ah, Marjorie, for whose sake would I go to him? But my idea would be to go to him for employment —not charity. Possibly"—bitterly—"he would regard me as a beggar all the same."

Mrs. Leslie was silent. She had never met the rich man. At times she had hated him, though all she knew about him was that he had refused to attend her wedding and had sent a cheque for a hundred pounds with his card, also that he had resented Robert's leaving his office to embark on a new business. She imagined him as an elderly gentleman with a dislike of women and a short temper, and, to tell the truth, she had encouraged her husband when he had first talked of a business of his own. Poor girl, she had even dreamed of the young man becoming the envy of the old.

"You are the most loyal little woman that ever was," said Robert suddenly. "I'll go and see him tomorrow—or the day after. If he snubs me, it will be no more than I deserve."

She protested for a time, but she was very, very tired, body and mind, and at last pride gave in.

"If you like, Robert," she whispered, "tell him it was my idea—your going to see him."

But when Robert called at the big offices a few days later he was shortly, if politely, informed that his uncle was engaged.

"You gave him my name," he stammered to the clerk, a stranger happily. "He sent no message?"

"No."

Robert hesitated, then turned from the inquiry counter. his last hope shattered.

"If you were to call later," the clerk began less stiffly.

"Thank you," said Robert; "I may do so."

But fears of failure had weakened his never very robust spirit, and he knew he could not face the possibility of another rebuff.

As he crossed the street a minute later his uncle watched him from the window.

III.

Mrs. Leslie could not afford a servant in the house, but twice a week a small female, whose age might have been anything between fifteen and fifty, came in to assist with the rough work.

On the afternoon of the 23rd day of December the small female was engaged in scrubbing the narrow hall (which she ought to have done in the morning) when a cab drew up opposite the door.

A smartly-dressed gentleman with white side whiskers alighted, looked about him, frowned, told the driver to wait, frowned again, and approached the door. Whereupon the small female withdrew her inquisitive nose from the letter-flap, and waited, crouching and panting, for the bell to ring. When it did ring she paid no attention for several seconds; then she marked time with her feet as if hastening to obey the summons, and slowly raised her head to the glazed portion of the door. She also applied wet fingers to her front hair. It was her first chance of admitting a visitor, but she knew exactly what to do, having read all about it in a penny book.

"Is Mrs. Leslie at home?"

"Yes, sir. Will you please step in, sir?" She threw the door wide, knocking over the pail of water.

The visitor removed a very shiny hat, but ignored the grubby hand outstretched to receive it.

There was a somewhat awkward pause until the small female, recovering some of her wits, led the way to the sitting room.

"What name, if you please, sir?"

"Kindly say to Mrs. Leslie that a gentleman desires to see her."

"Oh—all right," said the small female, forgetting the words of the book. "Take a seat, and I'll tell her. She's just dressin' herself. Behave yourself, Master Bobby!" she added in a stage whisper. "Here's a gentleman to see your ma."

The visitor found himself in a room as untidy as two healthy children left to themselves for an hour or so could make it. And his ears were assailed by the sound of quarrelling.

"Turkey!"

"Goose!"

"Bobby, don't be nasty. You promised to pray for a turkey——"

"I'll pray for a turkey next year, if you'll pray for a goose for this year. Hurry up, Lucy, or perhaps God won't have any gooses left."

"But I want a——"

They perceived the visitor and were silent, abashed. Taking hands, they stared at him for a moment or two, then edged towards the door, eyeing him suspiciously.

The gentleman coughed. "You needn't run away," he said with something of an effort, but in quite a mild tone of voice. "I have called to see your mother—Mrs. Leslie is your mother, I presume—but you might speak to me until she comes."

Lucy halted. "Don't push, Bobby!" she whispered. She regarded the visitor with a quaint dignity, and said gravely, "But we don't know you."

"Perhaps you've heard of me," he returned, a trifle grimly. "Will you come and shake hands? And I'll tell you who I am."

"Are you a great friend of mother's?" the little girl asked after a pause.

"Well, I can hardly say that, for I've never met your mother. Still, I hope I am not an enemy."

Lucy considered, while her companion tugged at her hand.

"I think we'll wait to see what mother says," she said at last.

"Oh—but perhaps you've heard of me," he said again. "My name is George Leslie, and I am your father's uncle—your great-uncle, you know. You have heard your parents speak of me?"

Both children shook their heads emphatically.

"H'm!" muttered the great-uncle. "Perhaps you won't object to telling me your names; I'd like to know them."

"He's Bobby," said the girl, indicating her brother.

"She's Lucy," said the boy, finding his voice. And all at once taking courage, he left his sister and stepped forward a couple of paces.

"Do you like turkey or goose best?" he demanded.

Mr. George Leslie laughed. "Why," he said, "I never seriously considered the matter; but on the whole, I think I may say goose." He laughed again, quite pleasantly.

Within the moment the triumphant Bobby's hand was in his.

"But," protested Lucy, "Bobby has never tasted turkey and he has only smelt goose once. I've tasted turkey —when he was too young to get any. I'm sure I'd hate goose." She eyed the visitor in a manner that might have been called coquettish, had she been ten years older.

"I see," he said slowly. "Well, Miss Louisa——"

"Lucy!"

"Pardon—Miss Lucy, the fact is, when I was younger I preferred turkey to the smell of goose, but now I prefer goose to the smell of turkey.' And he held out his free hand, which Lucy, coming forward after a little hesitancy, graciously accepted

"But which would you pray for?" The question seemed to escape her.

Mr. George Leslie looked gravely judicial. At last—"Both," he said firmly.

And just then Mrs. Leslie came in to find the children clinging to a stranger's hand and regarding him with the utmost admiration.

IV.

A little later, the children, having been dismissed, the old man said rather drily:

"Mrs. Leslie, shall we come to the point?"

She was taken aback, but recovered herself quickly. "What do you mean, Mr. Leslie?"

"I mean—shall we discuss Robert, your husband?"

Her face flamed. "I'd rather not, Mr. Leslie?" she returned proudly.

He nodded, as if to himself. After a short pause—"How is Robert getting on?" he enquired casually.

Marjorie would rather he had asked any question but that. But she was brave and loyal. And in one way the question reassured her. It told her that, after all, her husband had not called on his uncle; and she felt she would rather work her fingers to the bone and starve than that he should do so now.

"Robert," she said with dignity, "does not complain of business."

The visitor's eyes were on the threadbare carpet. Again he nodded.

"I saw Robert to-day," he said quietly. He held up his hand. "Don't be alarmed—not to speak to." He sighed and went on. "He called at my office, but I sent word that I was engaged."

"Oh!" whispered Mrs. Leslie.

"I don't think," he resumed—and his voice was sad—"that age treats youth quite so unfairly as youth treats age. Perhaps it is natural that it should be so. Age has had his youth; nevertheless, age is never so old as youth presumes it to be. Mrs. Leslie, I have suffered a great deal more than your husband—I don't say more than you, but——"

"I have not suffered——"

He lifted his eyes, but she could not meet them.

"Listen," he said gently. "My affection for Robert, your husband, never ran to sentiment, but it was always sincere. He was left a penniless orphan soon after he entered my business, and I did all I could for him, short of actually pampering him. On the other hand, while I may have been strict, I gave him every opportunity of advancing himself. I was looking ahead, you see." He halted.

"I'd rather you didn't tell me any more, unless——" she murmured.

"My girl," he said with a sudden passion, "do you imagine I ever lost sight of Robert after he left me? Why, since you have come to live here—here!—never a week has passed but I have stood outside your house of a night, wondering how things were within. And I have watched his business career, too, though he was unaware. You don't seem to understand, because I am an old man——"

"Forgive me," she said, hurt by his piteous expression; "forgive me——"

"There is nothing to forgive you, Mrs. Leslie," he proceeded more calmly. "I may have been wrong in objecting to my nephew's marrying—I know now that I was wrong; but I wanted him to wait. I was not wrong, however, in objecting to his starting business on his own account. I knew what he was doing; he didn't. No; it wasn't merely that I wanted to keep him in my own business. I did want him to remain there; I did, with all my heart. Yes, I should not have stood in his way, had his way been the right one. And now that he has failed——"

Marjorie dropped her handkerchief from her eyes. "He hasn't," she cried.

A faint smile moved his lips. "Mrs. Leslie," he said softly, "I have pride as well as you and Robert. Admit that he has made a failure of things."

"No!"

"Ah! From my office window, an hour ago, I looked upon him as he crossed the street. I did not catch even the slightest glimpse of his face, but the set of his shoulders—the set of his shoulders, Mrs. Leslie, just about broke my heart. Robert's the sort of man who carries his burden on his back. Now will you admit failure?"

Marjorie checked her sobs. "No!" she said distinctly.

"You—you have everything you want?"

"I have Robert and the children. Ah, you are cruel!"

The old man rose. "Then I can do nothing for you, Mrs. Leslie?"

Her head dropped; she made no reply.

"Will you do something for me?" he asked almost wistfully. "Will you promise to do me a great favour—tomorrow—Christmas Eve?"

She put her hands to her eyes tightly, telling herself she must do nothing to betray her husband.

"An old man like me doesn't ask favours every day," he said presently. "Can Robert get away from business by five?"

"He's sure to get away early on Christmas Eve," she said with an effort. "But——"

"Will you and he and the children oblige me by taking a drive in a motor car which shall be at your door at five-thirty? Mrs. Leslie, it's an old man that's asking you. Trust him for once."

It was some time ere she promised.

V.

The motor car drew up at a pretty house on a broad avenue in Hampstead.

"You are expected inside, sir," said the chauffeur to Robert, who appeared to be at a loss.

Robert hesitated, but his wife took his arm.

"It's a sort of dream, I suppose," she whispered, "but you promised to go through it, dear, with me."

Presently a maid showed them into a beautiful bedroom.

"Dinner will be served in five minutes, madam," she said.

And at the end of that period, punctually, she conducted them to a handsome dining room, with a great bay window across which heavy crimson curtains had been drawn. On the white, glittering table a first course was already laid. But neither host nor hostess was in evidence.

The maid handed Robert a letter marked "immediate," and at once retired. The contained words were in typescript:

"This house and all within it is the property of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Leslie. Don't let the dinner get cold."

And as husband and wife gasped, a dismal wail came from their son, Bobby.

"It's a turkey—and I prayed to God for a goose."

"Oh!" screamed Lucy, as the curtains of the bay window parted, and Mr. George Leslie, looking rather awkward, stepped forth.

"Where's the goose?" demanded Bobby, and saved his parents from an utter breakdown. "Where's the goose?"

"Here," said his great-uncle, coming forward and taking Robert Leslie's hand. "I'm the goose, because—because this ought to have happened years ago. Robert"—softly—"let's begin where we left off—for your loyal wife's sake—for mine."

* * *

"I don't think you're very like a goose;" remarked Bobby to his new friend, after he had become reconciled to the turkey.

"Thanks, my boy," said Mr. George Leslie. "It would be a pity if we all looked what we were."

"If I had known you were the goose," said Lucy, with her mouth full, "I'd have prayed for goose."

HAS BEEN REMOVED

Last spring a brief article on the Canadian Free Library for the Blind appeared in these columns. In that article it was stated that the Library then at Markham, Ont., was to be removed to Toronto. The removal has since taken place, and the C. F. L. B. now occupies quarters at 105 Annette street, Toronto, Ont.

The Canadian Free Library for the Blind is attempting to reach and benefit all the blind of Canada, but it is encountering serious obstacles in the realisation of this hope from the difficulty in securing names and addresses of those without sight, from the necessity of canvassing for funds to defray the expenses of maintenance. The Board of Management, therefore, requests all readers of this journal, who are acquainted with blind persons not now enjoying the benefits of the library, to send in such names and addresses to the Secretary, S. C. Swift, B. A., 8 Washington Ave., Toronto, Ont. It also makes a direct appeal to the generous Canadian public to contribute, at this joyous season, some small portion of the wealth with which it has been blessed during the past year. All contributions should be sent to the treasurer, E. W. Hermon, Esq., 37 Balmute street, Toronto, Ont.

It is the desire of the C. F. L. B. to establish a printing department for the purpose of printing Canadian texts, in embossed type for the use of the Canadian blind. There is at present no such establishment in Canada, with the result that Canadian literature is practically unavailable to our sightless citizens. Thirty thousand dollars are required to secure a sufficient income to make the plan feasible. Less than a thousand of this amount is at present in the treasury of the C. F. L. B. The library asks the Canadian people this Christmas to help it to realise this plan so worthy of assistance.

A Christmas With My Father

By Mamie Dickens, Daughter of Charles Dickens, in "Ladies' Home Journal"

CHRISTMAS was always a time which in our home was looked forward to with eagerness and delight, and to my father it was a time dearer than any other part of the year, I think. He loved Christmas for its deep significance as well as for its joys, and this he demonstrates in every allusion in his writings to the great festival, a day which he considered should be fragrant with the love that we should bear one to another, and with the love and reverence of his Saviour and Master.

In our childish days my father used to take us, every twentyfourth day of December, to a toy shop in Holborn, where we were allowed to select our Christmas presents, and also any that we wished to give to our little companions. Although I believe we were often an hour or more in the shop before our several tastes were satisfied he never showed the least impatience, was always interested, and as desirous as we that we should choose exactly what we liked best. My father, although the most generous of mortals, did not observe, except in rare instances, the custom of sending Christmas gifts to people outside his home; there was so large a claim upon him there that the pleasure would have been a tax had he gone beyond its walls.

He Wanted His Children to Dance

When we were only babies my father determined that we should be taught to dance, so as early as the Genoa days we were given our first lessons. "Our oldest boy and his sisters are to be waited upon next week by a professor of the noble art of dancing," he wrote to a friend at this time. And again, in writing to my mother, he says: "I hope the dancing lessons will be a success. Don't fail to let me know."

Our progress in the graceful art delighted him, and his admiration of our success was evident when we exhibited to his, as we were perfected in them, all the steps, exercises and dances which formed our lessons. He always encouraged us in our dancing, and praised our grace and aptness, although criticised quite severely in some places for allowing his children to expend so much time and energy upon the training of their feet. Indeed, a common neighbourhood remark on the subject was to the effect that "the little Dickens girls seemed to carry their brains in their heels.

When "the boys" came home for the holidays there were constant sieges of practice for the Christmas and New Year's parties; and more especially for the dance on Twelfth Night, the anniversary of my brother Charlie's birthday. Just before one of these celebrations my father insisted that my sister Katie and I should teach the polka step to him and Mr. Leech. My father was as much in earnest about learning to take that wonderful step correctly, as though there were nothing of greater importance in the world. Often he would practice gravely in a corner without either partner or music, and I remember one cold winter's night his awakening with the fear that he had forgotten the step so strong upon him that, jumping out of bed, by the scant illumination of the old-fashioned rushlight, and to his own whistling, he diligently rehearsed its "one, two, one, two," until he was once more secure in his knowledge.

No one can imagine our excitement and nervousness when the evening came on which we were to dance with our pupils. Katie was to have Mr. Leech, who was over six feet tall, for her partner, while my father was to be mine. My heart beat so fast that I could scarcely breathe, I was so fearful for the success of our exhibition. But my fears were groundless, and we were greeted at the finish of our dance with hearty applause, which was more than compensation for the work which had been expended upon its learning.

My father was certainly not what in the ordinary acceptation of the term would be called "a good dancer." I doubt whether he had ever received any instruction in "the noble art" other than that which my sister and I gave him. In later years I remember trying to teach him the Schottische, a dance which he particularly admired and desired to learn. But although he was so fond of dancing, except at family gatherings in his own or his most intimate friends' homes, I never remember seeing him participate, and I doubt if, even as a young man, he ever went to balls. Graceful in motion, his dancing was natural to him. Dance music was delightful to his cheery, genial spirit; the time and steps of a dance suited his tidy nature, if I may so speak. The action and the exercise seemed to be a part of his abundant vitality.

When He Danced a Hornpipe

While I am writing of my father's fondness for dancing, a characteristic anecdote of him occurs to me. While he was courting my mother he went one summer evening to call upon her. The Hogarths were living a little way out of London, in a residence which had a drawing-room opening with French windows on to a lawn. In this room my mother and her family were seated quietly after dinner on this particular evening, when suddenly a young sailor jumped through one of the open windows into the apartment, whistled and danced a hornpipe, and before they could recover from their amazement jumped out again. A few minutes later my father walked in at the door as sedately as though quite innocent of the prank, and shook hands with every one; but the sight of their amazed faces proving too much for his attempted sobriety, his hearty laugh was the signal for the rest of the party to join his merriment. But, judging from his slight ability in later years, I fancy that he must have taken many lessons to secure his perfection in that hornpipe.

The Merriest of All at a Party

His dancing was at its best, I think, in the "Sir Roger de Coverly"—known in America, I am told, as the "Virginia Reel"—and in what are known as country dances. In the former, while the end couples are dancing, and the side couples are supposed to be still, my father would insist upon the sides keeping up a kind of jig step, and clapping his hands to add to the fun, and dancing at the backs of those whose enthusiasm he thought needed rousing, was himself never still for a moment until the dance was over. He was very fond of a country dance which he learned at the house of some dear friends at Rockingham Castle, which began with quite a stately minuet to the tune of "God Save the Queen," and then dashed suddenly into "Down the Middle and Up Again." His enthusiasm in this dance, I remember, was so great that, one evening, after some of our Tavistock House theatricals, when I was thoroughly worn out with fatigue, being selected by him as his partner, I caught the infection of his merriment and my weariness vanished. As he himself says, in describing dear old "Fezziwig's" Christmas party, we were "people who would dance, and had no notion of walking."

His enjoyment of all our frolics was equally keen and he writes to an American friend, apropos of one of our Christmas merrymakings: "Forster is out again; and if he don't go in again after the manner in which we have been keeping Christmas he must be very strong indeed. Such dinings, such conjurings, such blindman's buffings, such theatre goings, such kissings out of old years and kissings in of new ones never took place in these parts before. To keep the Chuzzlewit going, and to do this little book, the carol, in the odd times between two parts of it, was, as you may suppose, pretty tight work. But when it was done I broke out like a madman, and if you could have seen me at a children's party at McCready's the other night going down a country dance with Mrs. M—— you would have thought I was a country gentleman of independent property residing on a tip-top farm, with the wind blowing straight in my face every day."

At our holiday frolics he used sometimes to conjure for us, the equally "noble art" of the prestidigitateur being among his accomplishments. He writes of this, which he included in the list of our Twelfth Night amusements, to another American friend: "The actuary of the national debt couldn't calculate the number of children who are coming here on the Twelfth Night, in honour of Charlie's birthday, for which occasion I have provided a magic lantern and divers other tremendous engines of that nature. But the best of it is that Forster and I have purchased between us the entire stock-in-trade of a conjurer, the practice and display whereof is entrusted to me. And if you could see me conjuring the company's watches into impossible tea caddies, and causing pieces of money to fly, and burning pocket handkerchiefs without burning 'em, and practising in my own room without anybody to admire, you would never forget it as long as you live."

One of these conjuring tricks comprised the disappearance and reappearance of a tiny doll, which would announce most unexpected pieces of news and messages to the different children in the audience; this doll was a particular favourite, and its arrival eagerly awaited and welcomed.

Christmas at "Gad's Hill"

But I think that our Christmas and New Year's tides at "Gad's Hill" were the happiest of all. Our house was always filled with guests, while a cottage in the village was reserved for the use of the bachelor members of our holiday party. My father, himself, always deserted work for the week, and that was almost our greatest treat. He was the fun and life of those gatherings, the true Christmas spirit of sweetness and hospitality filling his large and generous heart. Long walks with him were daily treats to be remembered. Games passed our evenings in jollity. "Proverbs," a game of memory, was very popular, and it was one in which either my aunt or myself was apt to prove winner. Father's annoyance at our failure sometimes to lead was very amusing, but quite genuine. "Dumb Crambo" was another favourite, and one in which my father's great imitative ability showed finely. I remember one evening his dumb showing of the word "frog" was so extremely laughable that the memory of it convulsed Marcus Stone, our clever artist, when he tried some time later to pourtray it in his choice pantomime.

One very severe Christmas, when the snow was so deep as to make outdoor amusement or entertainment for our guests impossible, my father suggested that he and the inhabitants of the "bachelors' cottage" should pass the time in unpacking the French Chalet which had been sent to him by Mr. Fechter, and which reached Higham Station in a large number of packing cases. Unpacking these and fitting the pieces together gave them interesting employment, and us some topics of conversation for our snow-bound luncheon table.

Our Christmas Day dinners at "Gad's Hill" were particularly bright and cheery, some of our nearest neighbours joining our home party. Dinner on all occasions, plain day and holiday, was served, by my father's special desire, a la Russe. But on Christmas Day this rule was infringed sufficiently to permit the appearance at the table of our holiday pudding. The Christmas plum pudding had its own special dish of coloured repousse china, ornamented with holly. The pudding was placed on this with a sprig of real holly in the centre, lighted, and in this state placed in front of my father, its arrival being always the signal for applause.

A prettily decorated table was his special pleasure, and from my earliest girlhood the care of this devolved upon me. When I had everything in readiness he would come with me to inspect the result of my labours, before dressing for dinner, and no word except of praise ever came to my ears.

He was a wonderfully neat and rapid carver, and, I am happy to say, taught me some of his skill in this. I used to help him in our parties at "Gad's Hill" by carving at a side table, returning to my seat opposite him as soon as my duty was ended. In a large party he sat at the centre of one of the sides of the table, I, directly opposite, facing him. His conversation, as may be imagined, was often extremely humorous, and I have seen the servants convulsed often with laughter at his droll remarks and stories.

"It is good to be children sometimes, when its Mighty Founder was a child Himself," was his own advice, and advice which he followed at times, and never better than at both in letter and spirit.

A New Year's Eve Frolic

One morning—it was the last day of the year, I remember—while we were at breakfast at "Gad's Hill," my father suggested that we should celebrate the evening by a charade to be acted in pantomime. The suggestion was received with acclamation, and amid shouts and laughing we were then and there, guests and members of the family, allotted our respective parts. My father went about collecting "stage properties," rehearsals were "called" at least four times during the morning, and in all our excitement no thought was given to that necessary part of a charade, the audience, whose business it is to guess the pantomime.

At luncheon someone asked suddenly: "But what about an audience?" "Why, bless my soul," said my father, "I'd forgotten all about that!"

Invitations were quickly dispatched to our neighbours, and additional preparations made for supper. In due time the audience came, and the charade was acted so successfully that the evening stands out in my memory as one of the merriest and happiest of the many merry and happy evenings in our dear old home. My father was so extremely funny in his part that the rest of us found it almost impossible to maintain sufficient control over ourselves to enable the pantomime to proceed as it was planned to do. It wound up with a country dance, which had been invented that morning and practised quite a dozen times through the day, and which was concluded at just a few moments before midnight. Then leading us all, characters and audience, out into the wide hall, and throwing open the door, my father, watch in hand, stood waiting to hear the bells ring in the New Year. All was hush and silence after the laughter and merriment! Suddenly the peal of bells sounded, and turning he said: "A happy New Year to us all! God bless us." Kisses, good wishes and shaking of hands brought us again back to the fun and gaiety of a few moments earlier. Supper was served, and the maddest and wildest of "Sir Roger de Coverlys" ended our evening and began our New Year.

How Year's Day on the Green

One New Year's Day my father organized some field sports in a meadow which was at the back of our house. "Foot races for the villagers come off in my field to-morrow," he wrote to a friend, "and we have been hard at work all day, building a course, making countless flags, and I don't know what else. Layard"—now Sir Henry Layard—"is chief commissioner of the domestic police. The country police predict an immense crowd."

There were between two and three thousand people present at these sports, and by a kind of magical influence my father seemed to rule every creature present to do his or her best to maintain order. The likelihood of things going wrong was anticipated, and, despite the very general prejudice of the neighbours against the undertaking, my father's belief and trust in his guests was not disappointed. But you shall have his own account of his success. "We had made a very pretty course," he wrote, "and taken great pains. Encouraged by the cricket matches' experience I allowed the landlord of the Falstaff to have a drinking booth on the ground. Not to seem to dictate or distrust I gave all the prizes in money. The great mass of the crowd were labouring men of all kinds, soldiers, sailors, and navvies. They did not, between half-past ten, when we began, and sunset, displace a rope or a stake; and they left every barrier and flag as neat as they found it. There was not a dispute and there was no drunkenness whatever. I made them a little speech from the lawn at the end of the games, saying that, please God, we would do it again next year. They cheered most lustily and dispersed. The road between this and Chatham was like a fair all day; and surely it is a fine thing to get such perfect behaviour out of a reckless seaport town." He little realized, I am sure, that it was the magnetic power in himself which gave him the love and honour of all classes, which gave the day's sport its great success.

In His Element on Twelfth Night

My father was again in his element at the Twelfth Night parties to which I have before alluded For many consecutive years, Miss Coutts, the late Baroness Burdett-Coutts, was in the habit of sending my brother, on this his birthday anniversary, the most gorgeous of Twelfth-cakes, with an accompanying box of bonbons and Twelfth Night characters The cake was cut, and the favours and bonbons were distributed at the birthday supper, and it was then that my father's kindly nature overflowed in merriment. He would have something droll to say to every one, and under his attentions the shyest child would brighten and become merry. No one was overlooked or forgotten by him. Supper was followed by songs and recitations from the various members of the company, my father acting always as master of ceremonies, and calling upon first one child, then another, for his or her contribution to the festivity. I can see now the anxious faces turned toward the beaming, laughing eyes of their host. How attentively he would listen, with his head thrown slightly back and a little to one side, a happy smile on his lips.

Oh, those merry, happy times, never to be forgotten by any of his own children or by any of their guests! Those merry, happy times!

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10,000 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out; I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, the write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 857 Franklin Building, Toronto, Can.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that; I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that.

who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests, I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Scanty or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostatic trouble.
6—Rise or pain in the stomach.
7—General debility, weak nerves, dizziness
8—Pain or soreness under right rib.
9—Swelling in any part of the body.
10—Constipation or liver trouble.
11—Palpitations or pain under the heart.
12—Pain in the hip joint.
13—Pain in the neck or head.
14—Pain or soreness in the kidneys.
15—Pain or swelling of the joints.
16—Pain or swelling of the muscles.
17—Pain and soreness in nerves.
18—Acute or chronic rheumatism.

Shirriff's TRUE VANILLA

goes farther than ordinary extracts, because ordinary extracts are Vanilla in name only. But Shirriff's True Vanilla is made from finest quality Mexican Vanilla Beans. And aged until it surpasses all others in strength. Six drops of this matchless flavor is equal to 15 drops of the imitation. And your cakes will taste more delicious when flavored with the true thing. So will your sauces and puddings.

CRISTMAS GAMES AND PASTIMES

Following is a list of some games suitable to the Christmas season, written specially for the Examiner. Some of these may be new; others may be familar, but they are all good:

TRENCHER

For this game all that is required is a wooden bread-plate or trencher. The players are seated in a circle, or in two rows facing each other, whichever is more convenient. One of the company then stands in the centre and spins the trencher on the floor by giving it a twirl between the fingers and thumb, at the same time calling out the name of one of the players. The player called upon has to catch the trencher before it falls flat. If he fails, he has to spin, and call upon someone, and, in addition, must pay a forfeit (see last game). If he succeeds in catching the trencher, he may return to his seat, and the caller must repeat the spinning until some one fails to catch it.

MUSICAL CHAIRS

Here is an old time favourite of the romping, rollicking kind. Take a number of chairs, one less than there are players, and arrange them in one line, every alternate chair facing the same way, so that half of them will be facing one way and half the other. The players then stand in single file, and commence marching round the line of chairs to the music of a lively tune played on the piano. The music suddenly stops when least expected, and everyone scrambles to seat himself in the nearest chair without turning any of them. As there is one chair less than there are players, one unfortunate is left standing, and is put out of the game. A chair is then taken away and the marching commences again to the music. The same tactics are observed—one more player failing to secure a seat at the critical moment when the music ceases. Another chair is taken away, and so the fun goes on fast and furious until, finally, the two remaining players with nerves all a-quiver are seen careering madly round the last solitary chair, literally at the mercy of the pianist. The climax is reached when the music ceases and the two contestants endeavour to secure the coveted seat.

I MET AN OLD WOMAN WITH A BASKET

After the strenuosity of the last game, this one may come as an agreeable relief. There is not much to recommend it, in the way of excitement, but it can be used as a breathing spell—the fun consists in the nature of the goods in the old woman's basket. The players being seated in a circle, one of them commences by remarking to his neighbour "I met an old woman with a basket." The one addressed asks, "What had she in it?" to which the other replies "Apples" or some article with "A" for its initial letter. The second players then turns to his neighbour with the same remark, "I met," etc., and in reply to the question gives the name of an article beginning with "B," and so the game progresses until the whole of the alphabet has been used. As the players have to give the name of the article without any hesitation, some of the articles in the basket would be incongruous enough. By the time the last letter in the alphabet is reached probably some of the party, the younger ones at any rate, are ready and anxious for another exciting game, and perhaps nothing would suit them better than one of the oldest of the old English games,

BLIND MAN'S BUFF

A person is blindfolded and placed in the middle of the room, and the following dialogue ensues. A player, "Grandmother wants you!" Blind man, "What for?" Player, "She has a basin of broth for you." Blind man "Where's the spoon?" Player, "Turn round three times and catch it." The blind-folded one then turns completely round three times, thus losing his bearings, then starts off to make a capture, every one doing their best to keep out of his way. When he has succeeded in catching a "spoon" he has to guess who it is, and if not correct has to let the spoon go and start again, but if he guesses successfully, the "spoon" is blind-folded and the game goes on as before. A forfeit may be claimed for each unsuccessful guess. This game may be followed by

PUSS IN THE CORNER

Five persons only are required, one in each corner of the room, and the fifth for the centre. Calling to each other "Puss, puss," they endeavour to exchange corners, while "puss" in the centre also makes a dash for a vacant corner. If he succeeds the one thus ousted takes the place in the centre and the game proceeds as before.

SHOUTING PROVERBS

One of the company goes out of the room and the others decide on some well known proverb, as "Look before you leap." Each player is assigned one word of the proverb, and the player outside is called into the room. The whole company then shout simultaneously the word assigned to them, and he is allowed three guesses. If he fails he has to go out again, but if he guesses correctly the person from whom he got his cue takes his place. This is not so easy as it appears at first, as the shouting of different words at the same time produces a very confusing effect.

THE FAMILY GHOST

For this you need a small room or recess curtained off the main apartment. Drape a gentleman from head to foot in a large white sheet. Put in a saucer a small quantity of alcohol and salt. The "ghost" is seated at a table bending over the saucer. Put a lighted match to the contents of the saucer, turn the lights out, and draw the curtain disclosing the spectre, who stirs the mixture with a small stick, the flames giving to him and his drapery a ghastly appearance.

MESMERISING

This is a harmless joke that invariably causes great amusement. Tell your friends you are rather clever at mesmerism, and induce one of the company, preferably a gentleman, to allow himself to be a medium. Have in readiness two saucers, the bottom of one having been previously covered with some black substance—a burnt cork rubbed on will do. Then inform the medium he has to keep his eyes fixed upon your face and do exactly what you do. You then give him the prepared saucer, and standing in front of him a short distance away holding the other saucer place your finger under it, draw a circle and then draw the same finger across your forehead. He of course does the same, and you repeat the action, meanwhile keeping up a patter of small talk, asking him if he is beginning to feel the influence, etc. The laughter of the company will warn him there is some joke of which he is quite oblivious, and when the experiment is concluded, to your satisfaction, conduct him to a mirror, and then make your escape as speedily as possible.

"I SPY"

When the frolickers are beginning to tire from their exertions, "I spy" is a welcome diversion from the more boisterous games, and, moreover, can be indulged in by the elderly and more sedate. Its simplicity is not its only attraction. One of the company having been chosen to start the game, he selects (mentally) some object in the room that is visible to all, and gives the initial letter of its name, using the following formula, "I spy with my little eye something beginning with—" (here giving the initial letter). Each person is allowed three guesses only, the successful solver having the privilege of announcing the next article to be guessed, using the same formula. It must be borne in mind that the article shall be in the room and visible.

FORFEITS

In most of the foregoing games, the losers may be asked to pay a forfeit (some small article in their possession), which may be redeemed at the conclusion of the games. The redeeming of the forfeit is in itself a game that causes much mirth, and is conducted in the following manner: Two of the company are selected to act as "crier" and "teller." The crier is generally a lady and the teller a gentleman. The latter is blind-folded, and the crier then picks up at random one of the forfeits and says: "Here is a thing, a very pretty thing, what shall be done for this pretty thing?" The teller then asks, "Lady or gentleman," and the crier having ascertained the sex of the owner, informs him, and he proceeds to deliver the sentence, which the unfortunate owner of the forfeit must perform or lose the forfeit. The fun, of course, in in the nature of sentence, and a witty teller can impose all manner of ludicrous tasks on his victim. He, himself, having some forfeits at stake, it occasionally happens that he is unwittingly imposing upon himself some grotesque task, the performance of which causes immense satisfaction to his victims.

HAD VERY BAD COUGH.

Tickling Sensation In Throat.

Could Not Sleep At Night.

A bad cough, with that distressing, tickling sensation in the throat, is one of the most aggravating coughs a person can possibly have.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will quickly stop that tickling in the throat which causes the dry cough that keeps you awake at night, for the simple reason that it is so rich in the healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, it cannot help but do otherwise.

Miss C. Danielson, Bowsman River, Man., writes:—"Last fall I had a very bad cough and a tickling sensation in my throat. It was so bad I could not sleep at night, so I went to a druggist and told him I wanted something for my cold and he advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup which I did, and after taking one bottle I was completely cured. Let me recommend Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup to any one who suffers from a cough or throat irritation."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

DOCTORS ADVISE MEDICATED AIR

It Cures Catarrh, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Throat Troubles, Hoarseness.

For diseases of the lungs, throat and nasal passages mountain air has always been deemed salutary because of its pureness and freedom from disease germs. The air of pine forests, laden with minute particles of volatile germ-destroying principles, has enjoyed an almost unexampled reputation in these diseases also.

A MARVELLOUS DISCOVERY.

After years of exhaustive study a chemist devised a means of supplying right at home a healing balsamic remedy that is even more effective in catarrhal diseases than the air of the pine woods. Of course, this remedy was copyrighted in every civilized country and was at once offered to the public under the name of "Catarrhozone." Its success has been phenomenal.

Just think of it! A healing, soothing substance capable of destroying those noxious organisms which excite and maintain disease. Capable, also, of allaying congestion and of stimulating the healing processes of nature, which are combined in that invaluable compound so well and so favorably known to the medical world as "Catarrhozone."

CATARRHOZONE CURES.

Catarrhozone is simply the concentrated qualities of the air of pine woods. If you breathe it you will derive more benefit in one hour than you could possibly get from the woods in a year.

This great advantage arises from the fact that, in addition to those healing emanations from pine, other ingredients distilled from the vegetable kingdom are so united as to give results that could not possibly be derived in the simple form in which nature supplies medicated air.

20,000 PHYSICIANS ENDORSE IT.

For all diseases of the nose, ear, throat, bronchial tubes and air passages—for catarrh in every form—cure is certain with Catarrhozone, which is not a nostrum, but a high-class scientific treatment. Large size, sufficient for two months' use (guaranteed), price $1.00; smaller size 50c, at all dealers or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

The Night Before Christmas

AN OLD FAVOURITE

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house,
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse,
The stockings were hung by the chimney with care,
In hopes that Saint Nicholas soon would be there.
The children were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of sugar plums danced in their heads,
And mamma in her kerchief, and I in my cap,
Had just settled our brains for a long winter's nap,
When out on the lawn there rose such a clatter,
I sprang from my bed to see what was the matter.
Away to the window I flew like a flash,
Tore open the shutters and threw up the sash,
The moon, on the breast of the new-fallen snow,
Gave a lustre of midday to objects below.
When what to my wondering eyes should appear
But a miniature sleigh and eight tiny reindeer.
With a little old driver so lively and quick,
I knew in a moment it must be Saint Nick,
More rapid than eagles his coursers they came,
And he whistled and shouted and called them by name—
"Now, Dasher! Now Dancer! Now Prancer and Vixen!
On, Comet, On Cupid! On, Dunder and Blitsen!
To the top of the porch, to the top of the wall!
Now, dash away, dash away, dash away all!"
As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,
When they meet with an obstacle, mount to the sky,
So up to the house-top the coursers they flew,
With a sleigh full of toys — and Saint Nicholas too,
And then in a twinkling I heard on the roof
The prancing and pawing of each little hoof.
As I drew in my head and was turning around,
Down the chimney Saint Nicholas came with a bound.
He was dressed all in fur from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot;
A bundle of toys he had flung on his back
And he looked like a peddlar just opening his pack.
His eyes how they twinkled, his dimples how merry,
His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry,
His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow,
And the beard on his chin was as white as the snow!
The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke it encircled his head like a wreath,
He had a broad face and a little round belly,
That shook when he laughed like a bowl full of jelly.
He was chubby and plump —a right jolly old elf,
And I laughed when I saw him in spite of myself.
A wink of his eye and a twist of his head,
Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread,
He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work.
And filled all the stockings, then turned with a jerk,
And laying his finger aside of his nose
And giving a nod, up the chimney he rose.
He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle.
And away they all flew like the down of a thistle;
But I heard him exclaim ere he drove out of sight:
"Merry Christmas to all. And to all a good-night."

MY FIRST CHRISTMAS TREE

BY HAMLIN GARLAND

I will begin by saying that we never had a Christmas tree in our house in the Wisconsin coulee; indeed, my father never saw one in a family circle till he saw that which I set up for my own children last year. But we celebrated Christmas in those days, always, and I cannot remember a time when we did not all hang up our stockings for "Sandy Claws" to fill. As I look back upon those days it seems as if the snows were always deep, the night skies crystal clear, and the stars especially lustrous with frosty sparkles of blue and yellow fire—and probably this was so, for we lived in a Northern land where winter was usually stern and always long.

I recall one Christmas when "Sandy" brought me a sled and a horse that stood on rollers—a wonderful tin horse, which I very shortly split in two in order to see what his insides were. Father traded a cord of wood for the sled, and the horse cost twenty cents—but they made the day wonderful.

Another notable Christmas Day, as I stood in our front yard mid-leg deep in snow, a neighbour drove by closely muffled in furs, while behind his seat his son, a lad of twelve or fifteen, stood beside a barrel of apples, and as he passed he hurled a glorious big red one at me. It missed me, but bored a deep, round hole in the soft snow. I thrill yet with the remembered joy of burrowing for that delicious bomb. Nothing will ever smell quite as good as that Wine Sap or Northern Spy or whatever it was. It was a wayward impulse on the part of the boy in the sleigh, but it warms my heart after more than forty years.

We had no chimney in our home, but the stocking-hanging was a ceremony nevertheless. My parents, and especially my mother, entered into it with the best of humour. They always put up their own stockings or permitted us to do it for them—and they always laughed next morning when they found potatoes or ears of corn in them. I can see now that my mother's laugh had a tear in it, for she loved pretty things and seldom got any during the years that we lived in the coulee.

When I was ten years old, we moved to Mitchell County, an Iowa prairie land, and there we prospered in such wise that our stockings always held toys of some sort, and even my mother's stocking occasionally sagged with a simple piece of jewellery or a new comb or brush. But the thought of a family tree remained the luxury of millionaire city dwellers; indeed it was not till my fifteenth or sixteenth year that our Sunday school rose to the extravagance of a tree, and it is of this wondrous festival that I write.

The land about us was only partly cultivated at this time, and our district schoolhouse, a bare little box was set bleakly on the prairie; but the Burr Oak schoolhouse was not only larger, but it stood beneath great oaks as well and possessed the charm of a forest background through which a stream ran silently. It was our chief social centre. There of a Sunday a regular preacher held "Divine service" with Sunday school as a sequence. At night—usually on Friday nights—the young people met in "ly-ceums," as we called them, to debate great questions or to "speak pieces" and read essays; and here it was that I saw my first Christmas tree.

I walked to that tree across four miles of moonlit snow. Snow? No, it was a floor of diamonds, a magical world, so beautiful that my heart still aches with the wonder of it and with regret that it has all gone—gone with the keen eyes and the bounding pulses of the boy.

Our home at this time was a small frame house on the prairie almost directly west of the Burr Oak grove, and as it was too cold to take the horses out my brother and I, with our tall boots, our visored caps and our long woollen mufflers, started forth afoot defiant of the cold. We left the gate on the trot, bound for a sight of the glittering unknown. The snow was deep and we moved side by side in the grooves made by the hoofs of the horses, setting our feet in the shine left by the broad shoes of the wood sleighs whose going had smoothed the way for us.

Our breaths rose like smoke in the still air. It must have been ten below zero, but that did not trouble us in those days, and at last we came in sight of the lights, in sound of the jingling, the laughter, the bells of the feast.

It was a poor little building without tower or bell and its low walls had but three windows on a side, and yet it seemed very imposing to me that night as I crossed the threshold and faced the strange people who packed it to the door. I say "strange people," for though I had seen most of them many times they all seemed somehow alien to me that night. I was an irregular attendant at Sunday school and did not expect a present, therefore I stood against the wall and gazed with open-eyed marvelling at the shining pine which stood where the pulpit was wont to be. I was made to feel more embarrassed by reason of the remark of a boy who accused me of having forgotten to comb my hair.

This was not true, but the cap I wore always matted my hair down over my brow, and then, when I lifted it off invariably disarranged it completely. Nevertheless I felt guilty—and hot. I don't suppose my hair was artistically barbered that night—I rather guess mother had used the shears—and I can believe that I looked the half-wild colt that I was; but there was no call for that youth to direct attention to my unavoidable shagginess.

I don't think the tree had many candles, and I don't remember that it glittered with golden apples. But it was loaded with presents, and the girls coming and going clothed in bright garments made me forget my own looks—I think they made me forget to remove my overcoat, which was a sodden thing of poor cut and worse quality. I think I must have stood agape for nearly two hours listening to the songs, noting every motion of Adoniran Burtch and Asa Walker as they directed the ceremonies and prepared the way for the great event—that is to say, for the coming of Santa Claus himself.

A furious jingling of bells, a loud voice outside, the lifting of a window, the nearer clash of bells, and the dear old Saint appeared (in the person of Stephen Bartle), clothed in a red robe, a belt of sleigh-bells, and a long white beard.

The children cried out, "Oh!" The girls tittered and shrieked with excitement, and the boys laughed and clapped heir hands. Then "Sandy" made a little speech about being glad to see us all, but he had many other places to visit, and as there were a great many presents to distribute, he guessed he'd have to ask some of the many pretty girls to help him. So he called upon Betty Burtch and Hattie Knapp—and I for one admired his taste, for they were the most popular maids of the school.

They came up blushing, and a little bewildered by the blaze of publicity thus blown upon them. But their native dignity asserted itself, and the distribution of the presents began. I have a notion now that the fruit upon the tree was mostly bags of popcorn and "corny copias" of candy, but as my brother and I stood there that night and saw everybody, even the rowdiest boy, getting something we felt aggrieved and rebellious. We forgot that we had come from afar—we only knew that we were being left out.

But suddenly, in the midst of our gloom, my brother's name was called, and a lovely girl with a gentle smile handed him a bag of popcorn. My heart glowed with gratitude. Somebody had thought of us; and when she came to me, saying sweetly, "Here's something for you," I had not words to thank her. This happened nearly forty years ago, but her smile, her outstretched hand, her sympathetic eyes, are vividly before me as I write. She was sorry for the shock-headed boy who stood against the wall, and her pity made the little box of candy a casket of pearls. The fact that I swallowed the jewels on the road home does not take from the reality of my adoration.

At last I had to take my final glimpse of that wondrous tree, and I well remember the walk home. My brother and I travelled in wordless companionship. The moon was sinking toward the west, and the snow crust gleamed with a million fairy lamps. The sentinel watchdogs barked from lonely farmhouses, and the wolves answered from the ridges. Now and then sleighs passed us with lovers sitting two and two, and the bells on their horses had the remote music of romance to us whose boots drummed like clogs of wood upon the icy road.

Our house was dark as we approached and entered it, but how deliciously warm it seemed after the pitiless wind! I confess we made straight for the cupboard for a mince pie, a doughnut, and a bowl of milk!

As I write this there stands in my library a thick-branched, beautifully tapering fir tree covered with the gold and purple apples of Hesperides, together with crystal ice-points, green and red and yellow candles, clusters of gilded grapes, wreaths of metallic frost, and glittering angels swinging in ecstasy; but I doubt if my children will ever know the keen pleasure (that is almost pain) which came to my brother and to me in those Christmas days when an orange was not a breakfast fruit, but a casket of incense and of spice, a message from the sunlands of the South.

That was our compensation—we brought to our Christmastime a keen appetite and empty hands. And the lesson of it all is, if we are seeking a lesson, that it is better to give to those who want than to those for whom "we ought to do something because they did something for us last year."

THE CHRISTMAS TOPIC

Nineteen hundred and eleven years ago at Bethlehem in Judea was born an infant of humble parentage. With that child was born into the world a new civilisation, a new Christianity, a new hope. It matters little to our rejoicing whether this Child was human or divine—whether he was God or God's messenger of love. Christian and infidel alike agree that the life He led was pure and blameless and the principles He taught have blessed and sanctified the world. All over the country, all over the world—a few years hence it will be also all through the air—sounds the greeting Merry Christmas! On the sea and land, to the palace and in the hovel, in the hospitals and in the prisons, in the asylums amid the orphans and in the homes for the friendless and for the aged, wherever even two persons meet who know and love the story of Christmas, the greeting is exchanged. Where can there be a parallel to the universal greeting? Is there any other sentiment that has the sovereignty of this cheerful and heartfelt word? It travels through the mails like nothing so much as the doves to the altars of which the Scripture speaks, for surely the sentiment flits from altar to altar of the hearts of men and is as gentle as the dove. Grudges and animosity vanish before the wafting of Christmas greeting, the smile of hope illumines the countenances of those under the pall of depression, the dimpled cheeks of the babies seem like veritable nooks for fairy hiding as the lips coo in response to the Merry Christmas, with the little emblem of the day that comes to the infant from its loving parent. In the days of romance hostile forces passed upon the field, sheathed their swords and clasped hands across the battle line, greeting one another with the sentiment of universal good will.

Sciatica AND Lumbago

Suffered for Twenty-five Years and Could Get No Relief

How Tells of the Wonderful Results Obtained by the Use of

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Sciatica, neuralgia and sciatic rheumatism are the result of a run-down nervous system. For this reason all treatments must necessarily fail which do not build up the nervous system.

Mr. Collins suffered for twenty-five years and never was able to obtain satisfactory treatment until he began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. While the Nerve Food forms new blood and restores the exhausted nervous system, the Kidney-Liver Pills invigorate the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

Mr. W. T. Collins, Morpeth, Ont., writes: "It affords me pleasure to be able to speak favourably of two of Dr. Chase's medicines—the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. I had been a sufferer for twenty-five years from sciatica, lumbago and neuralgia and tried almost all the medicines I could hear of, without one particle of benefit, until I commenced to use Dr. Chase's. I noticed an improvement before I had used two boxes and the benefits obtained by continued use have been wonderful. I have so much confidence in these two medicines that I have recommended them to dozens of my friends, and I have yet to hear of a single case in which they failed to give satisfaction."

Dr. Chase's medicines are for sale by all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

WAS SO RUN DOWN

COULD NOT DO ANY WORK.

Thought She Was So Far Gone Nothing Could Cure Her.

MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS Made Her Strong and Healthy.

Many women get run down, and are unable to look after their household duties, owing to their nervous system becoming unstrung, and when this happens, the heart starts to work in sympathy with the nerves. In Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills is combined a treatment that will cure all forms of nervous disorders, as well as act on the heart itself. Mrs. F. McFadyen, Brookside, Sask., writes:—"It is with the greatest of pleasure I write you stating the benefit I have received from using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. This spring I was so run down I could not do any work, and one day a neighbor advised me to try your Pills. I told her that I thought nothing could cure me, as I was too far gone. But she told me to get a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which I did, and before I had finished them, I began to improve, and when I had finished the one box I was as strong and healthy as any person. Anyone who is suffering from heart or nerve troubles should take your Heart and Nerve Pills and they will soon discover their worth."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THEM FIRST SUMMER HOLIDAY

A Short Story

THE cloud grew bigger. A moment ago it had worn a golden edge, but since the sun had set a deadly grayness overtook the wine red; its its feathery rim sagged downward like a bird stricken with gunshot. Other clouds drifted inward from the south. Some took the shape of torn images; one coppery fugitive with a windtorn mane raced like fury across the sky.

The man and the woman in the boat took small heed of the sky. Weariness from overwork set upon the man. His hands rested idly on the oars; his eyes were haunted by shapes that would not take form, the shapes of imperfect men and women moving toward a point where sat King Tragedy watching with terrible eyes.

The man was a writer, a craftsman in the manipulation of certain ideas. He had known the woman almost since childhood. At school and during the after years she had marked his progress in the literary arena. Partial failure had greeted his early efforts, but even now, in his thirtieth year, the fire of struggling genius dozed in his eyes.

This was their first summer holiday since she could remember. To go with him in a boat away from the crowded pier was the result of her own planning. She wanted Philip to herself even for one brief hour after the years of disappointment and waiting.

Beyond the surf-whitened bar she heard the gulls preaching, preaching it seemed to her an eternal sermon to the sea. They hovered and circled with long drowsing wings between the chills and the bar while her heart drank in the throbbing sound of wind-fretted water astern.

Something in the crying of the gulls prompted her to speech.

"How is your book progressing, Philip? Will it be ready this year?"

She spoke in a low voice as one discussing a sacred thing.

The man winced a little, as though confronted by a tedious explanation. "No," he answered, "it isn't finished yet."

Then he rowed silently for a few minutes and closed his eyes.

"Book writing is the new death," he said hoarsely. "It is a ghastly business. Nights of heart-breaking labour, the sickening quest for the tragic close which turns to clownish laughter in the end."

"But it will all come right, I am sure." She allowed her ungloved hand to splash in the water. The yoke lines lay twisted serpent-like in her lap. "I dreamt last night that your book was a great success" she went on, "and that you grew famous in a year, and forgot me." She drew in her hand suddenly and shook some sea-drop in his face. "You forgot me and married a bookish woman with red hair and spectacles".

A sudden flush brightened the novelist's face. The nervous grip of his hand almost made him cry out. "When the book is finished, Paula, we'll go where there are new mountains and rivers. I want to feel a wind from the snow. I want to hear it belching through the valleys and under the frost-bound trees. I want arest. But I've yet to fight this horrible finish of the book. I may have to wait years before the end shapes itself, but the end will come—grand and terrible."

A gust of wind seemed to wrench the words from his mouth. A long, white wave swung them with savage strength into a deep hollow of green water. The tiny boat sea-sawed as the woman with the yoke-line clutched forward to regain her balance. Another long wave with a bristling crest flung them over and down like a giant skilled in the art of drowning. men and little boats Philip Hume heard the wateds singing over him while the dinghy gyrated somewhere under his feet.

The blood rushed in torrents to his brain. He rose swiftly to the surface while his hands stroked forward mechanically. His mind had become so fiercely occupied with a certain thought as to render the act of swimming a mere mechanical side issue. The shock of submersion gave voltage to his brain, and . . . in a lightning flash he saw the end of his book. The fruit of three years' toil took shape in the millionth fraction of time.

"Help . . . Philip. My——, I am drowning! Help! help!"

Dimly he recognized the voice as belonging at his companion who had sat with him in the boat. Her cries angered him a little. The water was so beautiful and cold. He was floating with the ease of an expert swimmer. Although his limbs were submerged in the swirling waters, his brain had become a theatre wherein moved the tragic figures of his story . . . a woman and a priest, behind them rose a dark cathedral, its thin steeples piercing the night. The blackness of the stone affrighted him Several nuns passing through the gigantic vestibules were no larger than hooded sparrows. Three monks deliberating down the aisle rose to the height of three black thumbs. The monster organ was silent, but he could almost hear the voices of the dead singing in the choir. . . . A huge iron gate swung back; he heard the jangle of keys. Following the nuns down the aisle wer a woman and a child.

"Help, Philip, help!"

The seas moved past them as though loth to drown so fair a burden. Then he felt her hands touch him almost accidentally, and in that moment—the cathedral bell boomed through his brain; the iron gates clashed as the woman with the child stole down the aisle.

Then her hand closed on his shoulder, closed with the grip of life, and he knew that death only could unclasp it.

In a flash all thought of his book vanished.

"I will save you, Paula!" he shouted. "Keep your hand on my shoulder . . . so . . . on my shoulder. Don't try to hamper me or you will drown us both. I'm a good swimmer. Don't be afraid!"

She did not answer, but her grip tightened; her set white face bore in it no gleam of reason; all her senses were overridden by a lunatic fear of death.

He noticed that the sea washed her hair across his left shoulder. Sometimes it swam into his eyes and clotted his vision.

A strip of beach lay on his right. It was almost dark now. High above him on the boulder-packed headland he saw the light of an automobile moving up the road. The wind tore big drops of spray across his face. From time to time half-seen waves raced toward his mouth and eyes.

At first he did not feel the woman's weight, the sea supported her, but after the first dozen strokes her saturating clothes drew limpy about her. Her skirt enmeshed him.

"We are all right," he gasped, "not far ot go now. Don't press quite so close . . . Paula, you only hamper me. And . . . we haven't far to go."

Again she made no answer. Her grip had become like an iron clasp with ten hooks, and each hook was hokding a piece of his flesh.

"Nt so tight, Paula. We, we have not far to go, I say . . . not far to go."

His breath came at sharp intervals between wave and wave. The sea clutched now with icy fingers at his throat and eyes. It was as though a devil were pouring water upon him from a mountain top. It blinded him, hurt his temper.

"Not so tight, Paula. I'm swimming for life. What's the use hampering? Not far to go."

He looked at her swiftly, and saw a white hostility in her face—it was not Paula's face, this bleak, seared profile with the bulging eyes and the mouth that seemed to have frozen in its cries for help. She was clinging now with the weight of iron. In her clasp was the strength of an implacable foe.

He must drown with her. He did not fear death, but an unconquerable agony seized him when he remembered that the book must perish with him. It would never be finished; the story of a colossal tragedy would not, evaporated in the dead cells of his brain.

He scanned the distant beach wildly.

"Too far!" he choked, "too far!"

In that moment their eyes met, and he saw a live horror, a terrible demand in her hers.

"Paula, don't grip me so. Too far, I say, too far to go."

He tore at the clenched fingers on his shoulders. He thrust his palm un derher chin cunningly, and pressed her ihed downward. It seemed to him that a great wave wrenched them apart, but he remembered long afterward that he had struck her.

The beach still held the warmth of the afternoon sun. He dragged his body through the surf, and lay down. A flock of storm-beaten gulls wheeled inshore. An intolerable loneliness crept upon him.

"Paula, Paula!" He stretched a hand to where hte surf thundered beneath a headland. The Sea answered for the woman, and her voice shodted through the after years of is life.

The bathers watched him all that summer, as he paced the beach, vacant gaze directed toward the sea, frowning brow and muttering lips.

"I wonder what he says to himself," remarked the newly-appointed life-saver."

"He is looking for her, the girl torn from him by the waves," sighed one of a group of feminine admirers. "What a perfect love".

Late in the season someone eavesdropped and this is what they heard him murmur:

"A woman and a priest—behind them a dark cathedral — the great bells chiming—and then—and then—what—merciful heaven, what was that climax?"

A YEAR INDOORS

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

SNOWING

Feathering the willows,
Drifting in the hedges,
Piling downy pillows
On the mountain ledges.

Bordering the streamlet
Where the sedges shiver
Wafting on a dreamlet
To the drowsy river.

Weaving robes of ermine
For the perished roses,
Soft as couch of merman,
When the deep reposes.

Speaking in a whisper
Mystical and olden,
Silver-throated lisper
With a language golden.

Soothing out the wrinkles,
In the cemetery,
Laughing where the tinkles
Of bells are merry.

Dancing like a fairy,
Vanishing, returning,
Till the spirits airy
Set the woods a-yearning.

Deathly Cramps, Stomach was Bloated

A Bad Case That Proves Cramps and Stomach Disorders are Cured Fast by Nerviline.

"The distress I suffered from cramps last summer was so severe I thought it meant death," writes P. R. Emerson, of Guys Hill, P. O. "I was doubled up with pain and in such bad shape I couldn't walk a hundred feet. I remembered having Nerviline on hand and took half a teaspoonful in sweetened water. In five minutes I was well and my stomach derangements disappeared entirely."

NERVILINE AN INSTANT RELIEF

For cramps, flatulence, diarrhoea and disorders of the stomach and bowels, Nerviline knows no equal—one million bottles used every year—fifty years on the market, that's proof enough of its merit. Large bottles, 50c., trial size 25c. All dealers or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

The Night before Christmas

By Gilbur D. Nesbil

"'Tis the night before Christmas"—
I whisper the rhyme
And wander in fancy
To "once on a time."
I see the big fireplace,
The girls and the boys,
The long, heaped-up stockings,
The drums and the toys.

"'Tis the night before Christmas"—
So old, and so new!
With all of its dreamings
So good and so true.
I see all the faces
Forgotten so long,
And out of the twilight
There murmurs a song.

"'Tis the night before Christmas"—
And here, by my grate,
The past rises, glowing;
The years lose their weight;
The boy-days come trooping
At memory's call,
And gleam in the embers
That flicker and fall.

"'Tis the night before Christmas"—
Ah, could I but clutch
The gold of my fancies!
'Twould go at my touch!
The shouts and the laughter
Now sweet to my ear
Would shrink to a silence
Too deep and too drear.

"'Tis the night before Christmas"—
Remembrances stir
As sweet as the cherished
Frankincense and myrrh.
And, hark! As the visions
Grow dim to the sight,
There comes: "Merry Christmas!
And, boy-days, good night!"

Christmas In The Old Land

A Review of the Yule-Tide Customs of the Mother Country by J.A. New Christmas is, in the old land, a season of reunion. It is the ambition of the heads of every household to have with them the members of the family, complete, or as near to completion as possible.

Though in the main the season of Christmas in England corresponds with that of Canada, there are a few details in which it differs. To review the mother country's Christmas we will commence a week or two previous to the eventful day.

The first notification of the approaching feast day is the singing of carols and the performing of waits. In some towns carol singing only is indulged in. A little band of boys will gather at the door of a home and sing various Christmas selections, ending with the following lines:

And now our song is ended;
We have no more to say.
We'll give the door a double knock
Before we go away.
And, waiting a few moment at the door, receive their due reward.

In other towns some folks maintain the old custom and extend their musical efforts in a similar manner, though the performers are generally adults. These are called waits, and it is generally for the benefit of some charity that they perform. The newspapers, too, invariably organize a fund in aid of the sick and needy, while some prominent citizens, endowed with sympathy for the orphans, will head a subscription list in order to make the unfortunate children's Christmas a happy one.

But to return to the waits: they dress in various fancy costumes representing famous personages, and conspicuous among them is the bogus children's benefactor, Santa Claus. Upon introducing themselves at any home they are usually invited to enter and there in the parlour they render their performance. In return for their entertainment they are feasted with Christmas fare, and leave with their funds duly augmented.

Meanwhile, of course, the stores or shops, as they are called, are decorated in like manner to those of the land of the Maple Leaf.

In the churches the rehearsal of special music in the form of carols and sacred cantatas are also in progress. As a rule Handel's "Messiah" or Haydn's "Creation" is rendered by the choirs of the largest churches on Christmas Day.

We now pass on to Christmas Eve. This is, indeed, a busy day. Though "shopping" has been in progress for some time, there still remains much to be purchased on Christmas Eve. The seething throngs of humanity, so characteristic of the English cities, surge to and fro — completing their final preparations for the festive season; and the postal employees: By Jove! how they hustle! The letter-carriers — postmen they are called — may lessen flitting hither and thither, and the mail delivery wagons, laden with parcels, struggle through the crowds in unceasing activity. But this, of course, is applicable in a certain measure to every country.

It is Christmas morning. The echoes of the chimes may be heard floating upon the pure and frosty air (if it is not raining) and awaken the youngsters, who scramble to the foot of the bed to see what Santa Claus had deposited in their stockings. Occasionally a greedy boy will "pinch" his father's or his big brother's stocking in anticipation of a larger complement of "nice things," and in that case he gets nothing.

The "25th" is a day of devotion in England, and is ot usually spent in merry-making. For this latter purpose, the following day—Boxing Day—is appointed. New Year's Day is not recognized as a holiday.)

The main feature (in a worldly sense) of the English Christmas Day is the dinner. Yes! it is certainly a day for feasting, though a sacred one. Bob Cratchet's Christmas dinner! Probably the reader will be acquainted with this portion of Dickens' work. Who could improve upon the immortal Dickens' description of an English Christmas dinner as contained in "A Christmas Carol." After a vigorous attack upon turkey or goose, the famous Christmas pudding is brought to light with a piece of holly planted in the top. What yearning must fill the heart of an exiled Englishman when he thinks of the hour "his people" will commence to demolish the pudding. Almost invariably threepenny pieces are scattered broadcast in the pudding, and it is a superstition that the lucky ones will have good luck throughout the ensuing year. Nor is the feasting yet complete, as there still remains some appetite for fruits and sweets. The remainder of the day is spent in a quiet manner round the "yule log."

On the following day—Boxing Day—things are again enlivened. It is on Boxing Day that the Christmas parties commence. Never are these happier moments in a child's life than those spent at a Christmas house party. The home of the "host" is gorgeously decorated with fancy coloured paper, tiny flags, gilt balls, holly and mistletoe (for some reason or other a bunch of mistletoe usually hangs in the corridor), while myriads of coloured lights encircle the rooms. And the Christmas tree, how the children's eyes sparkle as they behold it in all its blazing glory. Of course the tree doesn't burn, it is only the almost numberless fancy candles whose flames reflect upon the many gilded and coloured articles borne by the tree that occasion the use of the word "blazing." It would be almost impossible to describe all the articles which a fir tree possesses at this festive season. Upon the extreme top of the tree is fixed a large doll, the Princess. About her and extending all over the tree where a twig is available are soldiers, gilded balls, boxes of chocolates, squeakers, fools' caps, bonbons, sugar mice, more dolls and numerous other articles. These are all numbered, and at the close of evening the children draw pieces of paper from a vessel of some description, and the article corresponding to the number on the paper falls to the child's lot. The old custom of the Christmas tree is maintained in many of the Canadian and American homes. Special games are selected for Christmas parties. One favourite pastime which creates much merriment is called Snapdragon: A warm plate is obtained and on it are placed some raisins. Whisky is then sprinkled over the fruit and a match applied. Upon the ignition of the spirit the children make hasty snatches at the flaming. Another famous pastive is "blind man's buff." In this game one of the gathering is blindfolded and is set to catch one of the remainder. This often results in hilarious laughter.

The games of the "young people's" parties differ accordingly, and are incorporated with music, singing and dancing. These gatherings of course cannot all take place on the same evening. They are therefore extended over a period of about a month after Christmas Day, and those who lament the close of the season are not a few.

THE CHRISTMAS CHIME

Meta E. B. Thorne

The hallowed morning breaks in skies all richly glorified,
Appareled in celestial light sleeps the unruffled tide,,
Tach pinnacle is tipped with flame, and all the circling hills,
As waiting in the heavenly courts my heart with rapture thrills,
By angel wings upborne into diviner, purer air
Upon my tranquil spirit steals a benison of prayer.

And then upon my ear there falls one grandly solemn tone
By some angelic chorister on silver trumpet blown—
As warder on the jasper towers the universe he hails,
And calls across the spaces vast, "Joy, day o'er night prevails."
"Joy, joy," the countless hosts repeat, as centuries ago
They woke Judea's hills and vales with music's solemn flow.

So now down through the lucent air the full notes slowly fall
One after one, long, resonant, down from the shining wall—
"Joy, joy," the burden of their strain, "your sun has risen, rejoice,"
"Your King has come, oh waiting ones. Sing, sing with heart and voice,"
Then in each heart sweet echoes wake, and all their tongues employ,
While hills and valleys, waves and floods, "repeat the sounding joy."

Ring on, ring on, sweet Christmas bells, your tuneful chimes ring on;
O vibrant air with pulsing wave thro' earth's remotest zone
Repeat the joyous sound, until from farthest sea to sea,
Earth's millions shall have heard and join the glorious harmony,
Till every heart and every voice alike rejoicing sing,
"Joy, joy, the Lord is come. He reigns the universal King."

WOMEN MUST NOT READ

If there's anything worries a woman,
It's something she ought not to know,
But you bet she will find it out somehow
If she gets the least kind of a show.

Now we'll wager ten cents to a farthing
This poem she has already read;
We knew she'd get at it somehow,
If she had to stand on her head.

THOUGHTS FOR SICK

Whomsoever else Santa Claus forgets at Christmas time—alas, that anyone should be forgotten!—we should, all who have opportunity, help him to remember those who are sick, especially the invalids who are shut in day after day. It requires more tact and consideration to select gifts for those who are sick than for the healthy, because the former in their weakness feel disappointment keenly. For the same reason, if the right thing is hit upon it gives proportionate pleasure.

School children can be encouraged—a hint is all they will require—to make Christmas a very happy time for one of their number who is ill. One school last year contributed the contents of a box which was sent to one of their schoolfellows, a gentle manly boy who had been a favourite until he was stricken with disease. Into the box went a couple of books, a group photograph of the class, a red tartan stocking filled with delicious home-made bon-bons, some fruit, a collection of picture cards with greetings from each one of the class, and by way of a joke a whole menagerie of little candy animals. The box made Christmas glad for the young invalid, and helped to lighten many a weary day that followed. But it should not be only the favourite, well-behaved boys and girls who are thus remembered. The child who has been rough or indolent or generally trying needs the influence of kindly Christmas thought and action.

A novel way of finding his presents will often give added pleasure to a sick child, although nothing can quite take the place of a well-filled stocking. After he has had his stocking, later in the day if he is ready for some fun, a half-hour's fishing will be great amusement. Provide him with a light round stick to which is fastened a piece of cord with a bent pin on the end. A number of small parcels are placed behind a screen near the bed, and the little invalid fishes over this. Some person concealed behind the screen helps on the game. The parcels must be light, of course, and may contain the merest trifles. Small candy fish of different colors, or baked from biscuit dough if candy is forbidden, would be great sport. The fishing game will appeal to a little girl as well as to a boy, or she can have a "shower," and secure the little packages by drawing on different coloured ribbons leading from a small coloured parasol, in which the packages are concealed, to the bed or chair.

In the case of an older invalid, the element of surprise and novelty may be a welcome relief from monotony. Several friends can arrange it so that their gifts will be delivered at intervals on Christmas Day, instead of sending them to the house on Christmas Eve. Do not give an invalid things to be worn during illness, unless the person is poor and really needs them. Give things that suggest getting well rather than a continuance of illness, or if convalescence seems a long way off, and things for immediate use are advisable, let them be as pretty and dainty as possible. A favourite magazine arriving by post on Christmas morning with a note stating that it will come monthly throughout the year is a welcome visitor to the "shut in." Sometimes an invalid fond of reading finds the weight of a book tiresome. The parts of a serial story can be removed from back numbers of a magazine, which the person has not had a chance of reading, and the several parts bound separately in plain paper, and numbered on the cover. A snapshot album, the kind that has paper covers of some satisfying artistic tint, a box of unmounted kodak pictures of members of the family, friends — human and animal—and bits of scenery, and a tube of photographer's paste may furnish many a half-hour's interested occupation. If the invalid is a woman who likes to crochet or do needlework, some new patterns and designs may be acceptable. Crochet patterns can be picked up from a few inches completed and accompanied by written or typed directions, understood of the worker in crochet, although Greek to the uninitiated. A piece of linen stamped and with the silks or threads to work it will be welcomed by the embroiderer who has not always money to spare for her hobby.

In every case where an invalid, grown up or little, old or young, is concerned, great care should be taken to ascertain the desires and to consider the tastes of the person for whom the gift is intended. It is well worth a little extra trouble to give the right thing in the right way.

Wilkerson's White Lie

BY S. E. KISER.

IT WAS generally known that Wilkerson owed his rapid rise to his wife. There were few things that he hated worse than work, and his sense of humor seemed to have been stunted early, yet he was not a financial genius. He might have been a broker's clerk all his life if another man had not done him a great wrong. Some people were inclined to believe he had exhibited shrewdness in marrying the young widow of Ebenezer Bankhead; but it had not been shrewdness at all. He had gone to her on the rebound.

If Betty Thornton's father had liked him, Wilkerson would have married Betty and they would have lived in a little flat somewhere and lived happy ever after—perhaps. But one evening Betty handed him back his ring and announced that all was over forever between them; then he went to the fair young widow to forget, and remained to love. He found himself wondering at the fact that he had not until then realized how beautiful she was. The splendid fortune she possessed—at all events it seemed splendid to Wilkerson—may have accentuated her beauty; but he would probably have loved her if she had been penniless. He had a large supply of love to bestow, and the agreeable widow provided convenient terminal facilities for his affections.

After a brief courtship they were married, and the broker's office, where Wilkerson had been an inconspicuous figure knew him no more. There was only one thing that interfered with his happiness. That was his wife's jealousy. She appeared to have an idea that it was necessary for her to watch him continuously. He was under almost constant surveillance, and he at length began to be haunted by a fear that he might, somehow, furnish a justification of Mrs. Wilkerson's lack of faith in him and be turned out into the cold world.

For two years, therefore, he patiently gave a full and fair account of himself every evening when he got home from the business which had been established by Ebenezer Bankhead, nor did he complain because it was necessary for his stenographer to be old enough to be his mother. Furthermore, he refrained from exhibiting any evidence of perturbation owing to his wife's habit of popping into his office without warning, or interfering with his work by frequently calling him up by telephone to assure herself that he was where he belonged.

On the afternoon before Christmas an unusual thing happened. A young woman called at the office to see Wilkerson. He appeared to be greatly surprised and somewhat agitated owing to her arrival, and for half an hour they remained alone in his private room.

Barry, the sales manager, who had an eye for beauty, had seen her come in, and presently he leaned over the assistant secretary's desk to ask:

"Do you know who that is in there with the chief?"

"No," said Ferguson, "I only got a passing glimpse of her."

"Then you missed something rare. She's a dream."

"Oh, anything with a petticoat on puts you in a trance."

"Wait till she comes out. If you don't admit that she's about the prettiest thing you ever saw it'll be because your halcyon days have departed."

"What if the missus should come while she's in there?"

"Me for the fire escape if that happens."

"A Young Woman Called at the Office to see Wilkerson."

When Wilkerson and his visitor came out of the private office, Barry found it convenient to be where he could see her again, and the opinion he had previously formed was not only confirmed but strengthened. She passed near him on her way out and for an instant looked into his eyes, thereby causing him to become the possessor of a thrill that was new and pleasing.

After she had departed Wilkerson sat down at a desk and began drumming on it with his fingers. It was evident that he was troubled. He got up at length and took a turn around the room, after which he stopped near Barry, who pretended to be busy studying an order sheet, and gazed at him thoughtfully. Finally he laid a hand on the sales manager's shoulder.

"George," he said, "I'm going to skate on some thin ice, and I want you to stand by with a pole to help me if I fall through. That lady was Miss Thornton. She and I were engaged when I met my wife, and Henrietta seems to have an idea that I'm still in love with her; but I've got all over that. I give you my word. Betty Thornton and I are friends, nothing more. Now she's in trouble, and I've get to help her."

"How do I figure in the case?" asked Barry.

"I don't know yet. You've got to help me fix up some kind of a story that will satisfy my wife. Here's the situation. Betty and I were, as I told you, engaged when I met my wife. Well, Betty threw me over shortly after that, and I never knew just why. Now she tells me that her father is dying and will not be happy until he confesses to Betty and me. It appears that he told her something about me which was wholly unfounded, and he has sent her to get me. He wants us to stand at his bedside and hear what he has to say before he goes. This is Christmas time and I feel that I ought to be charitable."

"Go ahead," said Barry. "I'll run things in your absence."

"But they live away out in one of the most remote suburbs. It's nearly four o'clock and it will be very late before I can get home, if I manage to get back at all to-night. Of course, I can't tell my wife where I'm going. She'd never stand for it. You'll have to help me out. Have you an engagement for to-morrow?"

"No. Tell me how I can help, and I'll be glad to rush to the rescue."

"I've suddenly thought of a plan. I think I must have been inspired. You have decided to get married."

"Wait. You're going too far. I haven't any such notion."

"Be patient. I'll unfold the plot. You have decided to get married, and a friend of yours, knowing of your intention, wishes to show you a house out Arlington way. Do you grasp the idea?"

"I am beginning to get hold of the edge of it."

"Very well. You are unwilling to trust your own judgment when it comes to buying a house, and you insist that I go with you to look at it. Your friend takes us out in his automobile, and punctures a tire. We can't very well desert him, and thus it happens that I get home late. We must agree on a name for your friend. How will Alexander do?"

"Alexander is a good name; but why is it necessary for me to bother about the matter? Go ahead and fix up any kind of a story you like."

"You are coming out to take Christmas dinner with us to-morrow. You want to talk to me about your plans, and that will give you a chance to lead up to the story of our adventure, thus corroborating me. Now, this will be purely a white lie. It will be told for the sole purpose of keeping my wife from becoming needlessly unhappy. Nobody will be wronged by it, and I feel that it is wholly justifiable, this being a time of peace on earth and good will."

Owing to the derailment of a car on the suburban line over which Wilkerson had to travel on his way into the city after he had heard Betty Thornton's father's confession, it was long after midnight when he reached home. His wife was waiting up for him, and he hastily began to tell her the story he and Barry had concocted, but she stopped him before he had uttered half a dozen words.

"Henry," she said, "don't lie to me. I want the truth. I can tell by your look, by the tone of your voice, that you are trying to deceive me. I shall never forgive you if you fail to tell me everything, just as it happened. Oh, that this should have come to me on Christmas eve!"

There was something in her look that Wilkerson regarded as uncanny. He felt that she was reading his thoughts, and, panic-stricken, he made a full confession—told her everything except the story that he and Barry had fixed up to deceive her. Then she put her arms around his neck and forgave him, because it was Christmas time.

"It is so nice to have you with us to-day," she said to Barry when they had got seated, in readiness for their Christmas dinner. "You don't come often lately."

"Thank you," he replied. "You see, I'm thinking of getting married."

"George," Wilkerson hastily broke in, "I want to show you my den after dinner. You'll probably be having a den of your own one of these days, and you may want some pointers as to how to furnish it."

But it was useless for Wilkerson to attempt to keep Barry from telling the story. Mrs. Wilkerson's cheerful demeanor indicated to the visitor that his friend's scheme was working effectively, and he was determined to do his part for the purpose of keeping peace in the Wilkerson family.

He hastily ran over the story in his mind, as he and Wilkerson had composed it, and he nobly decided to substantiate it to the best of his ability.

"I hope," he said, when he was sure he had it all straight, "that you were not worried because Mr. Wilkerson was out so late last night."

"Oh, I never was so frightened in my life," she replied, while her husband, from behind his napkin, tried by mysterious motions and winks to apprise Barry of the situation. "I was sure that something dreadful had happened to him."

"Well, it might have been——"

Barry was going to say the automobile accident might have been serious, but he was interrupted by Wilkerson, who was suddenly seized with a violent coughing spell.

"Dear me, Henry," his anxious wife said, when the paroxysm had subsided, "you'll frighten me to death yet. I want you to see Dr. Roswell to-morrow and have him examine your lungs. I do hope," she went on, turning to Barry, "your wife will be less nervous about you than I am about Henry. I realize that I'm awfully foolish, but I can't help it. When do you expect to be married?"

"I'm not at liberty to tell yet," he replied, surreptitiously winking at Wilkerson, "but it will probably be before very long. The house we looked at yesterday——"

"Ouch! Oh! Oh!" exclaimed Wilkerson, getting up and hopping around on one foot; "it's come at last. I knew I'd have it sooner or later. My father and my grandfather had it before me. Oh, this is awful!"

"Henry, dearest, for mercy's sake," his wife cried, rushing to him and endeavoring to soothe him, "what is it? What is the dreadful thing that has come at last?"

"Gout," Wilkerson groaned, as he sat down again and drew a sigh of relief. "It's gone now—but it was terrible while it lasted."

While his wife was bending over him from behind he found an opportunity to make certain grimaces at Barry, who judged that he was expected to hasten the unfolding of the story he had to tell, and as soon as Mrs. Wilkerson had again succeeded in calming herself, he attempted to fulfil his part of the compact by saying:

"It is very good of you not to chide me for taking him away out there without letting you know, but, you see——"

"Henrietta," said Wilkerson—"excuse me for interrupting you, George—there's something the matter with this fish. Doesn't yours taste funny, George?"

"No," replied Barry, "mine seems to be all right."

"What ails you to-day, Henry?" Mrs. Wilkerson complained. "There's nothing the matter with the fish. But I'll have another piece brought in for you. You seem awfully fidgetty. What were you going to say, Mr. Barry?"

Wilkerson was holding his napkin up and endeavoring to signal from behind it, but Barry, failing to understand, said:

"It would have been all right if we hadn't got that puncture. And the worst of it was that it had to happen when we were nowhere near a telephone station."

Wilkerson, feeling that all was lost, sank down in his chair and waited for the bitter end.

"That is where it always happens," said his wife, smiling across the table. "I hope she was not frightened."

"She? Oh, no, not at all." Barry hastily concluded that Wilkerson must have given out the impression that they had had the future Mrs. Barry with them. "She was as calm as you are at this moment, although the automobile turned almost completely around right there in the road. But we have about decided that the house isn't just what we shall want."

"Where is it?" Mrs. Wilkerson asked

"I thought you knew. It's out just this side of Arlington. Alexander is bound to have us take it, but it is rather more expensive than I feel like affording."

"And when am I to have the pleasure of meeting her?"

"Very soon, I hope. She has been out of town most of the time during the past few——. Thank you, Henry; yes, I will have some of the celery, if you please."

"I am so glad to know that you are going to get married," the lady said, smiling archly, "because I can't see how anyone can be really happy until one marries. I must confess, though, that you never impressed me as being a marrying man."

"Oh, you never can tell about looks."

Wilkerson drew a deep sigh of relief. He began to hope that the danger might be over. In a little while he would be able to take Barry aside and explain to him. In the meantime, it would be easy to keep the conversation confined to safe channels. But just as he had arrived at this comforting conclusion, his wife, turning to Barry, asked:

"When did it happen?"

"You mean—our engagement?"

"Oh, dear, no. I shouldn't think of asking anything as personal as that. I mean the accident."

"Why, yesterday afternoon. That was what kept us so late, you know."

"I Have Come for that Raise"

"Hist!" exclaimed Wilkerson. "What was that queer noise? Did you hear it, Henrietta?"

"Henry," she answered, "I insist that you take something to quiet your nerves. You are all upset. It must have been your experience of last night."

"I'm sure I heard someone walking upstairs," he declared, "George, come, let's go and see. Henrietta, you stay here."

"Indeed, I'll do nothing of the kind. Wait a minute. I'll have Mary go up and look. But there's nobody up there. Hark!"

They all sat breathless for a moment, listening. Then Mrs. Wilkerson smiled at Barry and said:

"If I were of a suspicious nature I might suspect that Henry's conscience was troubling him."

"Oh," he replied, intending to reassure her, "if it were a matter of conscience, I ought to be the one who was troubled. If it hadn't been for me——"

"There it is again!" shouted Wilkerson, dropping his fork with a clatter.

"Henry," his wife chided, "what in the world is the matter with you? I'm sure you didn't hear a thing."

She paused for a moment, gazed at him intently, and then added:

"You are keeping something from me. What is it?"

"Nothing—nothing, I assure you, my dear," he replied, at the same time trying to kick Barry's foot and bumping his shin against one of the cross bars under the table.

"I'm sure there is no reason why he should wish to keep anything from you, Mrs. Wilkerson," Barry said. "I noticed last night that he seemed to be greatly worried because he was being kept out so late."

"You noticed it? How could you notice it?"

Wilkerson was having another coughing spell, and he waved his napkin frantically at Barry, who supposed he was being signalled to "lay it on thick."

"Yes. The moment we got the puncture he wanted to start for home. Blame me for it all. Alexander kept promising that he'd have the tire fixed in a little while, and she didn't want him to leave us without having seen the house, so——"

"Henry," Mrs. Wilkerson demanded, "what does this mean?"

"It means," said Wilkerson, rising and flinging his napkin on the table, that I've been lying to you. I knew you wouldn't believe me if I told you I was out all night helping George and his future wife to find a house, so I told you that story about Betty Thornton's father. Go ahead, George, and tell the whole story. Don't keep anything back on my account."

When the coast was clear the next morning, Barry stealthily entered Wilkerson's private office and bestowed upon that gentleman a look which was not primarily intended to be friendly.

"It's all right, George," said Wilkerson. "Don't worry for a minute. It's the luckiest thing that could have happened. Her confidence in me has been greatly increased."

"It has, eh? But how about her confidence in me? How am I to make good?"

"The thing is very simple as far as you're concerned. All you have to do is to get married."

"Fine! I have a nice little salary for two people to starve on."

"I'll make you a wedding present of a substantial raise. Considering the circumstances, I can afford to be liberal. I'll tell you what I'll do. When you tell me the wedding day is fixed, I'll just double your income—provided you arrange it within three months. By the way, Miss Thornton has just telephoned that her father is out of danger, so you see you've helped me to save a life. He was fretting himself to death because of the wrong he had done me."

One morning about six weeks later Barry again entered the private office.

"What's on your mind, George?" asked Wilkerson.

"I've come for that raise."

Wilkerson got up and fervently shook the young sales agent's hand.

"I'm mighty glad of it," he said. "My wife's been asking me a lot of embarrassing questions about you lately. I wish you everlasting happiness."

"Thanks. She will be glad to know we have your good wishes. She was afraid you might not be eager to extend them."

"Why shouldn't I?"

"There's no reason why you shouldn't, but she has had an idea that you might think she ought to die an old maid on your account."

"On my account? Who is she?"

"Betty Thornton."

Facing the New Year

NO man knows what the coming year has for him. Before us all it stretches dark and mysterious. Yet only the craven-hearted regard it with fear. Something within us bids us take up its days even with rejoicing, though it be no other than the joy of him who tackles some new task, who grapples with some worthy foe.

Why should men thus face their days? Why do we feel that he who thinks of life as a thing to be endured is an unworthy being, a coward among his kind, and a traitor to life's opportunities? Is it not because we set the present in the light of the eternal and think of life in terms of the infinite reaches of our immortality?

They who live only from day to day, like driven cattle, who set the years inseparation as weary miles to be taken one at a time, to be forgotten when trodden and feared when lying before, to such life is indeed a tale of bitterness which cannot too soon find its finish. Only the fear of the darker mystery of death binds such beings to the darkness of life.

No life can be measured in any allotted span. Seventy years or a hundred cannot tell its tale. It reaches its roots far back through many centuries; it sends forth its fruits no man knows through how many ages. Even life drinks deep of immortality. And it is this sense of the reach of ourselves to the past and to the future that makes possible our living in the present.

This sense of belonging to an endless life is found in man everywhere. While the man of science writes of it and the intelligent, civilized man talks it over with his neighbor, the bushman of Australia is sitting by his fire under the stars and, far into the night, as the embers glow down, he talks with his fellows, on the whence and the whither of being; he dreams of life before and pictures beyond life.

This day and this new year, these are but part of eternity. The life that I must live through them belongs as much to the long past and the infinite future as it belongs to this passing day. No day is complete in itself; it bears the fruitage of eternity; it sows the seeds of the unknown future. The wondrous living in eternity does not wait until after death for its beginnings; it is ours now.

So I take up these new days with joyous anticipation, for are they not to bring to me the accumulated wealth of days gone by? This new year must of necessity be a richer year than last, because it possesses all the eternal, undying elements of the last.

The Search for Happiness

HAPPINESS is not what we are to look for. Our place is to be true to the best we know, to seek that and do that; and if by "virtue is its own reward" is meant that the good man cares only to continue good, desiring nothing more, then it is a true and noble saying—Let us do right, and then whether happiness comes or unhappiness, it is no very mighty matter.

If it comes life will be sweet; if it do not come, life will be bitter, bitter, not sweet, and yet to be borne. The well being of our souls depends only on what we are; and nobleness of character is nothing else but steady love of good and heavy scorn for evil. Only to those who have the heart to say, "We can do without selfish enjoyment," is there no secret. Man will have what he deserves, and will find what is really best for him exactly as he honestly seeks for it.—Froude.

Happiness is found in doing one's best regardless of reward.

All designs are pertect works of Art.

We have 150 patterns that you can choose from.

This is one of our numerous designs.

To Our Patrons

Since adding to our factory the plant formerly carried on by Thomas McGeachie & Son, of Trenton, who manufactured all kinds of Grilles and Novelties, this branch of our business has been steadily increasing; numerous grilles have been placed in Peterborough, one of which was installed by us in the Boston Cafe, during the past year, which has been greatly appreciated and commented on by the proprietor and his numerous customers, which upon inspection would give intending purchasers an idea as to the design and class of workmanship made by us.

The workmanship on these Grilles is superior to any on the market to-day. We have made during the year numerous orders for Toronto, St. Catharines, Hamilton, Oshawa, Belleville and several other cities, and from the favorable comments received in every instance, we are satisfied that our efforts to make this branch of our business a success has been entirely appreciated.

Extension Grilles

Bear in mind that these Grilles can be extended to about six inches, therefore avoiding any possible danger of fitting the openings inaccurately; this feature has been greatly appreciated by our customers, and they have advised us that our Grilles are preferred to all others on the market.

Britain's Sailor King

HER MAJESTY QUEEN MARY

HIS MAJESTY King George V. has been scarcely two years on the British throne, yet already he has given every encouragement to the hope that the best predictions in regard to his reign will be fulfilled. His Majesty has displayed a wisdom and tact worthy of his father, and there is ample reason for the belief that if his reign is not a glorious one, the fault will not be his.

King George was born a younger son, and therefore was not dedicated from boyhood (as in the case of a prince in the direct line of succession), to the duties that have fallen upon him to discharge. Younger sons of the sovereign are freer to follow their own inclinations than is the son chosen by birth for the throne, and George freely followed his.

Prince George and his elder brother were brought up pretty much as all English children in substantial circumstances are reared. The rod was not spared. They saw a great many people, but not more than most children whose parents hold a high position and keep up a great country estate. Perhaps the thoroughness with which modern languages were rubbed into them was the only point of departure from the curriculum and mode of life of the ordinary well-to-do family.

At an early age George was thrust into the strict democracy of the navy, there to acquire an invaluable and unsurpassable education in orderliness, self-restraint and the prompt discharge of his duty, to learn that being a prince is not everything, and to develop under an impartial discipline the character that has enabled him to stand on shore the full onrush of sycophancy and adulation.

Prince George and his elder brother, Albert Victor—the former twelve and the latter fourteen years of age—joined the "Britannia,' the famous training ship of generations of British seamen, together. Their path was not strewn with roses, and the only indulgence allowed them was a separate cabin. They rose at the same hour, messed at the same table and off the same rations, had as few or as many holidays as their companions. Prince George took to the life readily and easily. The two years he spent on board confirmed his liking for a sailor's life. In 1879 the two princes joined the "Bacchante" from Spithead late in September, and made a tour of the West Indies. As on the "Britannia," so on the "Bacchante," the princes were treated exactly like their gun-room mess mates, taking their turn at watch in all weathers by day or night and going aloft at sail drill or boat duty. In January, 1880, they were created midshipmen. In September of the same year the "Bacchante" started on a long cruise, visiting South America, South Africa, China and Japan. Before he was twenty years of age Prince George had seen more of the outside of the world than most men see in a lifetime. He had visited nearly the whole Empire and realized whenever he stepped ashore what it meant to be a prince of the nation that had the ordering of so vast a heritage. Land ceremonies were little to his taste, not because he had to play second fiddle to his brother—of that or any other kind of vanity King George is simply incapable—but because he had learned to find his chief happiness at sea. He received on the "Bacchante" a thorough grounding in seamanship, qualifying himself for higher positions in the navy.

When the "Bacchante" was paid off, the two brothers spent six months in Switzerland, and then parted, Albert Victor to take up the thread of the various duties devolving upon the elder son of the heir apparent, and George to see service on the North American and West India station as midshipman on board the "Canada". The young prince determined to take only such promotion as he might honestly earn. Nothing that came within the scope of his duties was shirked. A Turkish pasha, who boarded the prince's vessel off Salonica to pay his respects to a son of the heir to the British throne, found him, covered with smut and dust, superintending a coaling party. He braved all the usual examinations and survived them, taking on one occasion four firsts out of a possible five.

In 1889 Prince George commissioned a torpedo boat for the annual manœuvres which were held off the Irish coast, and greatly distinguished himself by skilfully bringing off a sister vessel which had damaged her screw and was being driven on to a lee shore by a stiff wind.

In 1890 he was given chareg of the gunboat "Thrush," and after thirteen months was promoted to be commander. He had barely commissioned the "Melampus" when his brother's death cut short his naval career. Since then he has only once seen service—in 1898, when for three months he commanded the "Crescent."

During his colonial tour in 1901, his companions remarked the intensity of his pleasure at being at sea again. He took part in all the games that Jack Tar has improvised, and when the "Ophir" crossed the line he submitted with the heartiest good-will to being ducked with the rest. And again, in 1908, when he visited Canada for the Quebec celebrations, he showed on the homeward trip the old sailor spirit, going down into the stoke-hole and helping the "Indomitable" to make the record passage across the Atlantic.

It is eighteen years since Prince George was obliged to abandon the navy, but his interest in all that concerns it has remained unabated. His comrades of those early years are his friends and intimates to-day, and he never speaks with such confidence and power as when he is appealing for funds on behalf of the many charities connected with the navy.

It has been aptly said that there is not a more English Englishman than King George, nor a more ardent or more understanding imperialist in the Empire. "By England," he once said, "we do not mean these islands in the Western Sea, but an England which is spread over the whole surface of the world." Time and again he has acted as the interpreter of the needs and opinions of Greater Britain to his own home-keeping companymen. When he summed up the unspoken message from the Empire to the Mother Country in the exhortation, "Wake up, England!" when he urged with courage and force the necessity of seeing that the emigrants sent out from Great to Greater Britain were of the best and most suitable quality—on these and many other occasions he showed the authentic spirit of imperial statesmanship.

King George has passed nine years of his life as heir presumptive to the throne, and nine more as heir apparent, but during the reign of his grandmother and father, self-suppression was his chief characteristic. He never sought publicity, and never accompanied his father on any of those remarkably productive pilgrimages through Europe, which earned for King Edward the title of "Peacemaker of the World." Though King George has justly earned the reputation of an orator of ability, he is by no means fond of speech-making.

King George is moreover a most conscientious man, and possesses a keen sense of duty. Scandal has passed him by, as he gives no opening to it whatever. His home life is as pure, as unpretentious, as much a matter of intimate, homely joys, as that of any household in the land. In short, he is a man who in private life and in all the domestic relations has kept his scutcheon spotless. As for church-going, besides recognizing the duty of setting an example of religious devotion, he is believed to have a genuine and natural vein of piety. He is very little of a clubman, preferring the joys of home to the pleasures of a "man about town". Nevertheless he is a good out-of-doors man, is a splendid shot and enthusiastic fisherman, and has developed a taste for farming. He is often seen at Varsity sports, and during the past two or three winters has been assiduous in his attendance at football and hockey matches.

The King is a keen politician, and much given to getting up on his own account the pros and cons of public questions. Those who know him well declare he is neither Tory nor Liberal, and forms his opinions from the standpoint of neither political party.

HIS MAJESTY KING GEORGE V.

The Greatest Written Word

IN THIS plain fashion, better than any other great thing ever was told, we have the story of two worlds commingling on that night, now almost two thousand years ago, when there came the announcement of a change that has not yet fulfilled itself. Hear Luke as he tells it:

"And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

"And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

"And the angel said unto them, Fear not; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

"For unto you is born this day in the City of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. . . . . .

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and saying,

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, and good will toward men."

And flying up that symphony, the angels "were gone away from them into heaven."

So we have word of that Babe, whose mission was to shake down the powers that were, and traverse the ages with a new power, purely of the spirit, which has mastered most of the races of men, and sorely troubles the others. To the mind of the narrator, these supernal happenings were as of natural course, and so, in simple terms, he gives them.

No word of man has any nobler majesty than this of Luke's. Bringing together the ends of the universe, and speaking in terms that take the supernal as granted, it stands forth as the most beautiful, the most transcendent, of descriptions. It comprehends cosmos.

The heralding of the Prince of Peace could not have been told in language purer or more complete. It is the greatest written word. It befits the advent of the Benign One, Who in His tenancy of the flesh was a man of sorrow, acquainted with grief, but whose work, sown among the lowly, progresses through all time. God speaks through humble instruments, even as then He spake, that His truth may be "understanded of the peoples," by the lowliest minds among them, and yet illumine the loftiest. For it is of the essence of life, and like His mercy, endureth forever.

A Christmas Fairy

IN the centre of a room place a large round table covered with a green cloth scattered all over with small boughs of evergreen frosted with tinsel. Suspended from the chandelier and hanging just far enough apart to admit a little light from above, have garlands sparkling with frost, with the ends fastened to the sides of the table, three-quarters of the way around it. The effect will be that of a tent. The other quarter should be left open, so that one may look inside and see an immense cornucopia covered with silver paper, with its open end toward the front. As though emerging from it the Christmas fairy (a wax doll), sparkling in robes of white and silver, should be poised. A frosted wreath should crown her golden curls, and in her hand she should hold a long silver wand. The cornucopia should seem to be emptying itself into the glittering train of the good fairy.

Every right action and true thought sets the seal of its beauty on the person and the face.—Ruskin.

There are many Christmas superstitions, long held as articles of faith, that are to be recalled. Among these are the beliefs that oxen kneel in their stalls at midnight on Christmas Eve in adoration of the Nativity and for one hour have the power of speech. For that one hour, too, the lost spirits have rest. Judas sleeps, Herod ceases to clank his chains, the daughter of Herodias may pause in the dance, in which she is condemned to spin forever, and Pilate's ghost ceases its wanderings on Mount Pilatus. It used to be believed, too, that the sound of church bells could be heard wherever a church had stood, though no trace remain, and that on that pregnant night one sleeping in a manger would see his future in a vision.

MY POSITION IN THE OPTICAL BUSINESS

THERE have been published in several of the current magazines recently, articles reflecting upon the Optical Business, and the men engaged in it. While there is truth in some of the claims made, the articles are in the main biased and unfair. Great stress in one article is laid upon inaccurate tools and instruments used by the profession, endeavoring by such statements to prove that correct work could not be done under such circumstances. We agree with the writer that if such conditions exist, that accurate work cannot be done. To guard against such conditions in my business, I have always spared no expense in procuring the best instruments and tools obtainable with which to diagnose errors of refraction and to produce accurately made glasses.

I am submitting a list of apparatus which I use, with the maker's name of each article, and assure the public that not one of them was bought until I was satisfied that it was the best thing in the line obtainable.

Christmas

CHRISTMAS is not what it used to be. It is better.

Bridging the centuries and their confusion of "isms," the teaching of Jesus is to-day once more a truly active principle in our common life. The Sermon on the Mount, standing uninterpreted and in its own simple speech, means more to us as a plain law to live by than it meant to the people of no more than thirty years ago, when creed and form bound the minds of men more closely to outward things than now.

Tacitly or openly, there is a tendency away from "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men," and toward a practice of that kind of charity embodied in the gentle ordinance, "Bear ye one another's burdens."

The Christmas of our time has lost much of its old significance as a religious festival merely. Even its historical aspect has been growing dim. But its animating quality is if anything the more alive, and penetrates more deeply the annual observance. It has come to be a time of genuine kindliness, of the renewal or strengthening of family and social ties, of a larger generosity toward those who walk in darkness, or sit apart under the blight of misfortune.

A trait in men's minds that is neither a sign of the times nor in any way a result of either the higher criticism or the uneasy drift away from old beliefs, is that any man one meets on terms that open confidence, is certain to admit an interest in spiritual things. Not the things that fill their days, but that lie farther within, and exert power upon the outward life.

One day a young friend said to me: "There is a man I have known a long time as a good fellow in a clean way, a raconteur, and a remarkably successful business operator, from whom I had never heard a word bearing upon religion, or anything like it. During an evening of leisure, passed together in quiet and alone, I asked this man (he had no heirs) what he meant to do with the vast fortune he had built up.

"'I mean to use it in founding a college in Saskatchewan,' said he, 'where essential Christianity shall be taught. I want to do what I can to assure Western Canada of a class of business men who shall live Christianity, not merely profess it. It won't be a church school, nor a religious school in any way. It will be simply a common-sense school of applied Christianity. In doing that, I hope I will have justified my having lived at all."

I think this man's purpose instances what I mean when I speak of the immanence of Jesus and the actuality of His influence. It is at work all around us, not only in the beauty and bounty of Christmastide, but everywhere, and at all times, though not always in open view, and never by loud profession. It is pervading more minds than we wot of, is reaching more hearts.

It is not the kind that bids you, "let your light so shine before men that they shall see your good works," but that moves you to do good works for their own sake.

It is a softener of pride, a touchstone no wrong can withstand, a prime mover to brotherly helpfulness and breadth of human sympathy. It is the spirit that vaunteth not itself, but in the Christmas time may stretch its hands toward the light, not empty, but bearing in their palms a record of good deeds done unselfishly, and say not only "Glory to God in the Highest," but with glad humility, "Son of the Carpenter, receive this gift of mine."

Never deny the babies their Christmas. It is the shining seal set upon a year of happiness. Let them believe in Santa Claus or St. Nicholas or Kriss Kringle, or whatever name the jolly Dutch saint bears in your religion.—Marion Harland.

Stick to the outside track; collision is less likely.

A Merry Christmas Jest

AN OLD chronicle contains the following quaintly worded anecdote:

"There was some time an old knight who, being disposed to make himself merry in a Christmas time, sent for many of his tenants and poor neighbors with their wives to dinner, when having made meat to be set on the table would suffer no man to drinke till he that was master over his wife should sing a caroll; great niceness there was who should be the musician. Yet with much adoe, looking one upon another, after a dry hemme or two, a dreaming companion drew out as much as he dare toward an old-fashioned ditty. When having made an end, to the great comfort of the beholders, at last it came to the women's table, when likewise commandment was given that there should no drinke be touched till she that was master over her husband had sung a Christmas caroll whereupon they fell all to such a singing that there was never heard such a catterwaling peece of musicke. Whereat the knight laughed heartily, that it did him halfe as muche good as a corner of his Christmas pie."

Yuletide Proverbs

THE wise man begs to express much more than proverbial wishes that his entire clientele may enjoy the merriest of merry Christmases.

The universal spread of dolldom and drumdom is infinitely preferable to that of the doldrums.

Our early days will not, indeed, come back, yet is Christmas an Indian summer evening to the venerable, a reviving reminiscence of youth.

"The mirror of all courtesy" should be polished on Christmas day.

Photograph by Hall, Peterboro.

"A royal train, believe me," is the reindeer equipage of good old St. Nick.

"Nature teaches beasts to know their friends," and why should they not share in the Christmas good-will.

A Greeting

IT IS going to be a happy year. Let us greet it in that mood, and we shall make it so.

It is a sense of this that underlies the new year wish and the new year resolution. It is a time of sunny outlook. We perceive each other again smilingly, with greetings of friendship, as in the light of a pure young morning. If we are wise enough, and a little courageous, the feeling of dawn and strength will go with us until the happy evening falls.

"There will always be another day." Give it a chance. Let us say to ourselves:

"The year that cometh is a king
With better gifts than the old year gave"

Say that, and believe it, and the King that cometh will be bountiful. Hope, strength, and good-will, to all of us. A Happy New Year.

Medical Health Officer, Dr. A. W. McPherson, hunting for game bigger than Microbes

THE illustrations on this page from photos taken by Mr. Fred Roy, the Roy Studio, are typical of a phase of Canadian life, and are particularly appropriate in a Christmas number. The citizens who only know Mayor Morrow from seeing him preside at Council meetings will find the representation of the city's Chief Magistrate, as given here, a novelty, while Dr. McPherson, the city's Health Officer, shows himself as adept in chasing deer as he is in the pursuit of germs or of good sanitary conditions. In another page of the same section is a novel picture of the personnel of the Ketchecum Lake party taken during the annual trip this autumn. Many well-known citizens of Peterborough will be recognized in the group.

Facts About a Good Store Service

Mostly every town and city in Canada possess at least one old-established mercantile house, that appears to be inseparably linked with the municipality's existence and history. This particular business house has grown up with the place from the time that it was first a hamlet, then a town, and later a city. As the hamlet grew to a town, then to a city, the particular establishment to which we refer kept a pace with the march of progress, until it is now looked upon as being as much of the city's institutions as the Municipal Buildings or the local churches.

Peterborough has a splendid example of this, in the old-established dry goods and house furnishing establishment of Richard Hall & Son, Limited. The firm of Richard Hall & Son, Limited, is undoubtedly the best known retail institution in this part of Ontario. It is a striking example of the success that can be obtained by following the slogan "Good Service," and having "Progress" as one's watchword.

The Store of Richard Hall & Son, Limited, was founded in the year 1847, by the late Mr. Nicholls, whose name will be handed down to posterity by reason of its being associated with a number of Peterborough's charitable institutions. For 53 years Mr. Richard Hall, the senior member of the present house, has been associated with this well-known institution. There is reason to believe that there will be a Mr. Hall actively associated with the firm for another generation at least. Mr. S. Dickson Hall, son of Mr. Richard Hall, has been actively associated with the management of Richard Hall & Son, Limited, for the past 18 years. No doubt the son of Mr. S. Dickson Hall, whose photo appears in the children's group opposite, will some day succeed to the management of the well-known house

The store of Richard Hall & Son, Limited, at No. 353-355 George Street, is one of the finest and most modern in the smaller Canadian cities.

The firm of Richard Hall & Son, Limited, have attained to the mercantile leadership of Peterborough by reason of the fact that quality and service is always guaranteed. Each year adds to the firm's increasing patronage. One can always rest assured that anything bought from this well-known firm will render the utmost satisfaction. The firm fully guarantees that they are ready at all times to redeem their pledge in this respect.

Mis-statements and misrepresentations are unknown features in connection with the business dealings of Messrs. Richard Hall & Son, Limited. One can rely on every statement the firm makes either by word of mouth or in their advertisements. It is for this reason that customers know that they are always safe in making their purchases at Peterborough's big store. Absolute satisfaction is guaranteed with every article they sell.

The firm of Richard Hall & Son, Limited, is always trying to please its customers. No establishment in Peterborough has done more to provide a store service that is unsurpassed in efficiency. The firm's assortments are always the largest to be had, their prices the lowest procurable, and their patrons never disappointed. Of course, any store that has a standing offer to refund the purchase price of any article that proves unsatisfactory, such as Richard Hall & Son, Limited, guarantee, cannot help but please the public.

No mercantile home in Peterborough makes a stronger bid for patronage than Richard Hall & Son, Limited. Just let them prove how advantageously they can serve you.

Fifteen Years Ago

THE accompanying group suggests the idea that history, or at least humanity, repeats itself. This group, which was taken by the Roys about fifteen years ago, and reproduced in the Christmas Examiner of that time, has a most interesting connection and association with the full-page group found on the preceding folio of this number. Many of the boys and girls whose faces appear in the adjoining picture are now the fathers or mothers of several of the bright-faced youngsters appearing in the beautiful group on the preceding page.

Thus rolls round the everlasting round of this good old world.

Let Us Smile

—x—x—

The thing that goes the farthest toward making life worth while,
That costs the least and does the most, is just a pleasant smile.
The smile that bubbles from a heart that loves its fellow-men
Will drive away the cloud of gloom and coax the sun again,
It's full of worth and goodness, too, with manly kindness blent—
It's worth a million dollars, and doesn't cost a cent.
There is no room for sadness when we see a cheery smile;
It always has the same good look—it's never out of style—
It nerves us on to try again when failure makes us blue;
The dimples of encouragement are good for me and you.
It pays a higher interest for it is merely lent—
It's worth a million dollars, and doesn't cost a cent.
A smile comes very easy—you can wrinkle up with cheer
A hundred times before you can squeeze out a soggy tear.
It ripples out, moreover, to the heart-strings that will tug,
And always leaves an echo that is very like a hug.
So, smi' away. Folks understand what by a smile is meant,
It's worth a million dollars, and doesn't cost a cent.

BURGLARS CRACK SAFE AT LAKEFIELD AND GET AWAY WITH $200

Grocery Store of S. J. Charleton Was Entered by Unknown Parties Who Skillfully Used Nitro-Glycerine in Opening Vault—Only One Man Heard Explosion.

Special to The Examiner.

LAKEFIELD, DEC. 11.—The grocery store of Mr. S. J. Charleton here was entered early Sunday morning by unknown parties, who blew open the safe and made a get-away with a sum of money silghtly over $200 which had been left in the vault. There is no clue as to the identity of the guilty parties, but it is thought they were two in number, and judging from the neat job they pulled off, it is thought that they were not new to the gentle art of safe-cracking. They gained entrance to the store by forcing a window and then broke the knob off the door of the vault and opened it by using nitro-glycerine. The door was completely shattered and a quantity of flour that had been used in driving the force inward, and deadening the sound, was found scattered over the floor. So skilfully was the operation conducted that people sleeping a few yards away were not awakened by the explosion. The only man who heard the noise had been kept awake by a sick baby, and then he did not suspect anything was wrong. As a result the robbery was not discovered until 10 o'clock yesterday morning, by which time of course, the burglars had made their escape, leaving no trace behind them.

Chief Thompson of Peterborough, was informed immediately and is working on the case.

WHOOPING COUGH
Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly completely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

Indications All Over Province Point To Light Vote To-day

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, DEC. 11.—Early indications of to-day's elections received at the capital of the Province this morning, show a decided lack of interest, resulting in comparatively few voters going to the polls. Here and there in different constituencies some excitement prevailed, such as for instance in North Toronto, where ex-Mayor Joseph Oliver is running against J. J. Foy. But, on the whole it was, perhaps, the quietest election day in a decade. The disagreeable weather in many parts of the Province, did not help matters at all. Threatening clouds dampened things in the capital, while in Western ridings rain lessened the number of votes cast. Then, again, muddy, sloppy roads, kept agricultural votes small. The farmers did not care enough about the outcome to drive their teams through seas of mud to register their votes at the nearest sub-division. In North Oxford, where Leader Rowell is running, bribery rumours caused some excitement, and odds of four to one were offered by the Tories against his election. However, he appeared confident and prophesied a handsome majority.

GERMAN SOLDIER KILLED

Special to The Examiner.

METZ, ALSACED-LORRAINE, DEC 11.—A German soldier was shot and killed by Alexander Semaine, leader of the French party yesterday in a street row, and it is feared that the incident will stir up racial animosities, which have always been acute here. Five have been arrested.

READY FOR THE DURBAR

Special to The Examiner.

DELHI, INDIA, DEC. 11.—Like a scene from the Arabian Nights are the streets of Delhi, now completed in gorgeousness for the great Durbar ceremony to-morrow, thoroughfares are jammed with representatives of a hundred races, and creeds, and the population has increased three hundred thousand in the last week. The King and Queen this morning reviewed the troops and presented colours to regiments. A polo tournament and the state banquet are the order of things for this afternoon and to-night.

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS
Mrs. Nettie Massey, Consecon, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

$95 STOLEN FROM THE BELL TELEPHONE OFFICE

Last night a sum of money amounting to $95 was stolen from the office of the local manager of the Bell Telephone Company. Chief Thompson was informed as soon as the theft was discovered and expects to clear up the case without trouble. Rumours round the street to-day have connected the theft with the burglary at Lakefield early Sunday morning, but officially the two cases are not considered the work of the same parties.

Haultain To Be Judge

Special to The Examiner.

REGINA, DEC. 11.—Chief Justice Wetmore is to retire March 1, on full pay, having completed twenty-five years' continuous service. It is stated he will be succeeded by F. W. G. Haultain, leader of the Saskatchewan Conservatives, and formerly Premier of the Northwest Territories, who accepts the Government's offer of the position.

Picture Fakir Operating

A prominent resident of the Township of Hope told the Guide this morning of the old game which is being played upon the easy ones once more. It is the picture business and your picture is enlarged for almost nothing. This is sufficient bait for the majority, but when the picture is delivered, the frame costs you all the way from $4.00 to $16.00. Business was quite brisk in the Township of Hope and now it reported the same man is doing a big trade in Peterborough.—Port Hope Gide.

Smuggled Chinamen

Special to The Examiner.

BUFFALO, DEC. 11.— Five Chinamen, said to have been smuggled from Canada, were found in a deserted automobile yesterday. One said he had been brought across the river in a row boat. They were arrested and taken to New York.

Arrests In Belmont

Things are again being stirred up in Belmont Township. Two men and a woman were arrested there on Saturday and lodged in the county gaol on a charge of theft.

Glenn Brill and Oscar Copperwaite are charged with stealing a number of ducks and geese from Wm. Plunkett, near Havelock.

G. Brill and Mrs. S. Lewis are charged with stealing turkeys from Peter McMillan, near Havelock.

Oscar Copperwaite is charged along with stealing two hen turkeys and a gobbler, also.

The three prisoners will come up for trial on Wednesday.

They are at present in the county gaol here and it has not been decided whether they will be tried here or at Havelock.

Sent Bombs In Mails

MacDONALD SENTENCED TO SIX MONTHS IN CENTRAL PRISON

Youth Who Stole $30 From Polack Was Sentenced To-day ---Blacklisters Get Heavy Fines---Big Row in Chinese Restaurant---Police Court News.

A local young man was arraigned in the Police Court this morning on a charge of assaulting Thos. Him, proprietor of the Chinese restaurant, on George street. He at first pleaded not guilty, but later, after evidence had been taken, changed his plea to guilty, and was fined $10.00 and costs, amounting to $14, in all.

Another man was at first charged with the assault, but the charge was later changed to that of drunk and disorderly, to which he pleaded guilty, and a fine of $5.00 and costs, amounting in all to $8.75, was imposed.

Thos. Him, the victim of the assault, was put in the box, and gave evidence, as follows: "About 6.30 Saturday night, three men came in to the restaurant to get a meal, and when they had finished, they refused to pay for it. The two prisoners and another man, whose name I could not get, were the ones. They went to go out, and I closed the door, and one of them said to me—'look at my hand,' and when I did, he hit me in the eye. He also hit the waiter, and pulled the knives and forks and stuff off the table, and went out without paying for anything. During the scuffle, a large pane of glass in the front window, was broken."

P. C. Kidd was put in the box, and testified to having seen the trouble. He said that he saw the prisoner hit the Chinaman, and pull stuff off the table, and general disorder prevailed. He stated that he and Detective Newhall arrested them, and the two men were very much under the influence of liquor.

Magistrate Dumble then imposed the above fines. The Chinese will be paid for the damage done out of the fines.

Common Drunks.

John Stover, drunk and disorderly, was fined $2.00 forthwith.

Benj. Colberg, drunk and disorderly, was fined $5.75.

Dan. McCann drunk, was fined $2.

A blacklister who was found drunk was fined $10.00. He was put in the box to tell where he obtained his liquid refreshments, and denied knowing the man from whom he the liquor. He afterwards admitted however, that he purchased the liquor himself from the clerk in a local liquor store, but stated that the Clerk did not know him.

Edward King, a blacklister, who was arrested last September and was allowed to go on the promise that he would appear in Court a couple of days later, was arrested and arraigned this morning, having failed to keep his promise to appear. He left the city at the time and did not come back until recently. He pleaded guilty of having liquor in his possession on that date, and was fined $10.00 and costs, amounting in all to $14.50 to be paid forthwith, or 30 days in gaol.

Six Months in the Central.

John A. MacDonald, who was arraigned in the Police Court a few days ago, charged with stealing $30 from a Pole, on the way from a lumber camp, having previously worked with him in a railway construction gang on the C. P. R., was arraigned again this morning, and sentenced to six mothe in the Central Prison. Mr. E. E. Wood, Crown Attorney, stated that he had not received any report from Halifax, regarding the prisoner's record, so as they did not consider a remand necessary, the sentence was imposed.

Johnston Again on the Warpath.

For the last couple of weeks Pete Johnston, who appeared in Court, charged with insanity, has been staying at the House of Providence. On Saturday night he took another spasm and ran away, wandering to a place south of Downer's Corners, where he went into a house, and badly frightened the people. The police brought him back, and he was this omrning again remanded to gaol.

A Des Moines man had an attack of muscular rheumatism in his shoulder. A friend advised him to go to Hot Springs. That meant an expense of $150.00 or more. He sought for a quicker and cheaper way to cure it and found it in Chamberlain's Liniment. Three days after the first application of this liniment he was well For sale by all dealers.

How Finds It a Pleasure to Enjoy Meals

"Here is a case which seemed as bad and as hopeless as yours can possibly be. This is the experience of Mr. H. J. Brown, 264 Bathurst St., Toronto, in his own words:

"Gentlemen—I have much pleasure in mentioning to you the benefits received from your Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets and can cheerfully recommend them. I deeply had condemned dyspepsia with all its unnatural symptoms, and tried about all the advertised cures with no success. You have in Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets the best curative agent I could find. It is now such a pleasure to enjoy meals with their consequent nourishment that I want to mention this for the benefit of others."

The fact that a lot of prescriptions or so-called "cures" have failed to help you is no sign that you have got to go on suffering. Try Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets and see how quickly this sterling remedy will give you relief and start your stomach working properly. If it doesn't help you, you get your money back. 50c a box at your druggist's. Compounded by the National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 141

BROKEN FAITH.

It appears that the "truly loil" and perfectly pure machine element of the Conservative party, at Ottawa, are going to over-ride the agreement made between the local parties in South Renfrew—Liberal and Conservative—that the Conservative candidate for the Ontario House, Dr. McGarry, be allowed election by acclamation in the event of Hon. G. P. Graham being unopposed for the Dominion seat. One part of the agreement has been carried out, and Mr. McGarry was allowed to be returned without opposition. Now, to make it troublesome for Mr. Graham, to put him to the expense and work of a contest, he is to be opposed. The grounds upon which this opposition, a distinct breach of faith, is justified are characteristic. The agents of the Ottawa machine say that the fact that twenty or twenty-five men in Renfrew of both parties in singing the agreement, gave them no authority to voice the sentiment of the riding. That is to say, the men on the spot, the resident electors, had no right to voice the sentiment of their neighbours, but the party machine has every right to control the local management of the affairs of the electors. This breach of faith is natural. The Borden Government, having broken faith with its own followers, in respect of everything, the mass of them, in Ontario, especially, hold dear, and for which they voted, cannot be expected to keep faith with their political enemies. A Government that throws down its friends can feel quite comfortable in "taking a rise" out of its enemies.

A LIE NAILED.

This time-honoured form of expression, may have, with the change of conditions in the ethics of political discussion, become obsolete, to a certain extent, but it comes into significant play in this present election, and especially in regard to two last-minute roorbacks, in the Review of Saturday. One is a gross perversion of the facts in the case of Mr. Hall and the King case, in which the Review seeks to twist the facts, and goes back seven years to its own files to reproduce a statement that has been absolutely disproved, in so far as Mr. Hall is guilty of any over-reaching or under law charges. The fact is it was due to the gratuitous services given by Mr. Hall, and his firm that the widow got anything at all.

Another absolutely false statement is to the effect that Mr. Stratton accompanied Mr. Hall to Ottawa, in connection with securing Dam No. 4. This is an absolutely false statement. Both may have been in Ottawa, but they were not in Ottawa together in the corrupt sense the Review insinuates—to collude in securing Dam No. 4, for Mr. Hall. Each went on his own business, and the business of the one had no connection with that of the other. This contradiction is not made for any political purpose, for the voting will have been done before it is read; but it is made in the interests of fair dealing and honesty of discussion, and to show the public to what lengths political rancour will go. The opening paragraph in the Review's article of Saturday, referred to above, in its entire absence of truth, is a sample of the whole article, and a sample of the tactics of false statement and insinuations that have marked the Review thsoughout the campaign, a course hardly worthy of the organ of "the party of gentlemen."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Eggs are 50 cents a dozen in Chicago. The Canadian farmer had a narrow escape from being flooded with these pauper products under reciprocity.

In England fifteen per cent. of a mans earnings is regarded as the largest proportion that should be paid for rent. We are apt to think of England as a landlord-ridden country, but the city-dweller who gets off with as low a rental as that in Peterborough is a rare bird in a rare nest.

The lost legion has been found by E. A. Lancaster, of Lincoln. He proposes to, says the Ottawa Free Press, to not only reinstate all the Welland Canal employes who were dismissed in 1896-7, but he would go further and insist that the sons of the men so dismissed should also be looked after. It's a hungry horde, all right.

THE VOTE FEMININE.

(Finance Chronicle)

It is hard to predict or to predicate anything about the vote feminine. We have heard most people assumed that only a small proportion of the women would vote if they had the privilege; that they would vote for prohibition almost to a woman, and vote for almost anything "faddy." In the Los Angeles election 95 per cent. of the women on the list voted, about seventy-five per cent. of them against the Socialist or "faddy" candidate for the mayoralty; and in a constituency where 70,000 were women out of a total list of 140,880 a prohibition amendment was defeated. Explain it who can. "If she will, she will you may depend on't; and if she won't, she won't and there's an end on't.' Another marvel, only one woman is on record as having gone back to the poll wanting to change her vote.

THE PROBLEM OF EDUCATION.

(Montreal Herald)

The election controversy in Ontario is helping to restore education to a front place among subjects of popular study. Ontario has a pretty good system of education, but good as it is there is much camplaint over a partial breakdown in the supply of good teachers in the rural parts. In the cities the criticism tends to go somewhat deeper. Indeed, in all cities, there is some complaint that no boy or girl who goes to school wants to do the kind of work that somebody has to do when school days are over. Possibly the extent of the mischief is overestimated. Mankind is everywhere as lazy as it dare be, but the need to live does produce the habit of work, and, like other habits, few who acquire it ever quite break from it. The judgment of a boy is not unerring, but if fault there is in his preferring the life of a bank clerk or bookkeeper to that of moulder, machinist, or drayman, a perfectly truthful person will admit that it takes a good deal of imagination, where one has no previous experience, to make these pursuits look inviting to the healthy minded boy. There may be ways of turning the boy's mind in the direction of bricklaying and plumbing, of making the girl see how her future happiness may be bound up in a knowledge of the arts of house-keeping, but there is not very much ingenuity exercised in bringing them to see these things this way.

Another unavoidable difficulty is that arising from the presence in the same class of the bright and the dull boy, who determine how far the class can go. Here in Montreal one of the grave defects is that when the dull boy stopsschool the bright boy stops, too. It is not universally so, but there are a good many schools where it works that way. The dull boy knows enough of books to scorn bricks; the bright boy has to turn to driving a coal cart when he ought to be on his way to a university. No rule can quite cover such cases, but, especially in the case of the boy whose parents are poor, there ought to be special attention given to see that he does not stop going before being brought to sight of what is for him the promised land. The boy, as boy, and the bright boy, are, as Cecil Rhodes has emphasized in terms of startling magnificence, two essentially different propositions.

Meet At Hankow

Special to The Examiner:

SHANGHAI, CHINA, DEC. 11. — The Revolutionists have notified the Imperial party that Republicans have selected Hankow as a place for meeting of the peace conference.

Local Artists Took Part

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of St. John's church, Emily, a very successful basket social was held at Orange Corners last Friday evening.

The attendance was large and the receipts satisfactory. The Rev. Mr. Earle, of Omemee, occupied the chair and an excellent programme was rendered. The artists were principally from the city and were taken out by Mr. E. P. Jackson of Peterborough. Mr. Thompson's humorous songs were very much appreciated as were also the vocal solos of Miss Kemp, while Miss Galloway was responsible for some fine recitations.

THE FAVOURITE LAXATIVE

One at Night Makes the Next Day Bright; No Charge if It Doesn't.

Because of its extremely gentle and effective action, Rexall Orderlies have become the most popular Remedy for Constipation.

We are so positive that Rexall Orderlies will do all that is claimed for them that we positively guarantee to hand back the money you paid us for them upon your mere request, if you are not entirely satisfied.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy, are very pleasant to the taste, do not gripe, cause nauseau, or any other annoyance usually experienced when ordinary cathartics are used.

Rexall Orderlies have a positive regulative effect upon the bowels and tend to provide permanent relief from Constipation and the myriad of associate ailments. Besides, they help to overcome the necessity of the constant use of laxatives to keep the bowels in normal condition.

We honestly believe there is no similar medicine so good as Rexall Orderlies, especially for children, aged, or delicate people. They are prepared in convenient tablet form in three sizes of packages. Prices, 10c., 25c., and 50c. Why not try them at our risk on our guarantee?

Remember, Rexall Remedies can be obtained in this community only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

DARROW IS IMPLICATED

Special to The Examiner.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., DEC. 11.—Clarence S. Darrow, chief counsel for the McNamara brothers, was implicated in the preliminary hearing of Bert. H. Franklin, this morning, charged with bribery. Geo. N. Lockwood, the juryman whom Franklin is accused of bribing, testified that Franklin told him he "would see Darrow and arrange how the money was to be paid."

DON'T WAIT SO LONG

One of the most surprising things in the world to druggists is that so many people endure unnecessary suffering and trouble.

Every day they hear people say, "I have been feeling so weak and miserable for the last few months that I finally decided to come and ask you what to do for it."

For instance, Miss Zulah Teagarden, of Connellsville, Pa., says in a letter: "For years I had been in bad health owing to run-down system and general weakness. I had no appetite, was tired out, and had no strength.

"Hearing so much about Vinol I decided to try it, and I find it the greatest of all remedies. It has built up my strength, restored my appetite and made me as well as ever. I might just as well have had this benefit years ago if I had taken Vinol then."

Now if you are weak and in poor health, don't wait another day, but let Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron remedy without oil, make you strong. We guarantee it — you get your money back if not satisfied. McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

"THE AVENGER"

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XXXVII

Sydney Barnes stepped quickly forward. If Wrayson had permitted it he would have snatched the packet from the girl's fingers. Wrayson, however, saw his intent and intervened. He stepped forward and led her to the writing table.

"I want you to sit down here quietly and open the envelope," he said, switching on the electric light. "That is what he told you to do, isn't it? There may be a message for you inside."

She looked around a little fearfully. The presence of the Baroness evidently discomposed her.

"I thought," she said, "that we were going to be alone, that there would be no one here but him and you."

"The lady is a friend of mine," Wrayson said, "and it is likely that she may be interested in the contents of this envelope."

She untied the string with trembling fingers. Wrayson handed her a paper knife, and she cut open the top of the envelope. Then she looked up at him appealingly.

"I—I don't want to look inside," she half sobbed. Wrayson took up the envelope and shook out its contents before her. There was a letter addressed simply to Agnes, and a small packet wrapped in brown oilcloth and secured with dark-green ribbon. Sydney Barnes' hand stole out, but Wrayson was too quick for him. He changed his position, so as to interpose his person between the packet and any one in the room.

"Read the letter," he told the girl. "It is addressed to you."

She handed it to him. Her eyes were blinded with tears.

"Read it for me, please," she said.

He tore open the envelope and read the few lines scrawled upon a half sheet of note paper. He read them very softly in her ear, but the words were audible enough to all of them.

"My Dear Agnes,—

"I have just discovered that there are some people on my track who mean mischief. I have a secret that they want to rob me of. I seem to be followed about everywhere I go. What they want is the little packet in this envelope. I'm leaving it with you because I dare not carry it about with me. I've had two narrow escapes already.

"Now, you'll never read this letter unless anything happens to me. I've made up my mind to sell this packet for what I can get for it, and take you with me out of the country. It will be a matter of ten thousand quid and I only wish I had my fingers on it now and well out of the country. But this is where the rub comes in. If anything happens to me before I can bring this off, I'm hanged if I know what to tell you to do with the packet. It's worth its weight in bank notes to more persons than one, but there's a beastly risk in having anything to do with it. I think you had better burn it! There's money in it, but I don't see how you could handle it. Burn it, Agnes. It's too risky a business for you! I only hope that in a week or so I shall burn this letter myself, and you and I will be on our way to America.

"So long, Nessie,

"From your loving husband.

"P.S.—By the by, my real name is Morris Barnes!"

There was an instant's pause as Wrayson finished reading. Then there came a long-drawn-out whisper from Sydney Barnes. He was close to the girl, and his eyes were riveted upon the little packet.

"Ten — thousand—pounds—! Ah! Five thousand each! Give me the packet, sister-in-law!"

She stretched out her hand as though to obey. Wrayson checked her.

"Remember," he said, "what your husband told you. You were to burn that packet. He was right. Your husband was a blackmailer, Mrs. Barnes, and he paid the penalty of his infamous career with his life. I shall not allow either you or your brother-in-law to follow in his footsteps!"

She flashed an indignant glance upon him.

"Who are you calling names?" she demanded. "He was my husband and he was good to me!"

"I beg your pardon and his," Wrayson said. "I was wrong to use such a word. But I want you to understand that to attempt to make money by the contents of that packet is a crime! Your husband paid the penalty. He knew what he was doing when he commanded you to burn it."

She looked towards Sydney Barnes.

"What do you say?" she asked.

The words leaped from his mouth. He was half beside himself.

"I say let us open the packet and look it through ourselves before we decide. What the devil business is it of anybody else's! He was my brother and your husband. These people weren't even his friends. They've no right to poke their noses into our affairs. You tell them so, sister-in-law. Give me the packet. Come away with me somewhere where we can look it through quietly. I'm fair and straight. It shall be halves, I swear. I say, sister-in-law Agnes, you don't want to go back to the refreshment bar, do you?"

"No-" she moaned. "No! no!"

"Nor do I want to go back to the gutter," he declared fiercely. "But money isn't to be had for the picking up. Ten thousand pounds Morris expected to get for that packet. It's hard if we can't make half of that."

She looked up at Wrayson as though for advice.

"Mrs Barnes," he said gravely, "I can tell you what is in that packet. You can see for yourself, then, whether it is anything by means of which you can make money. It consists of the letters of a very famous woman were stolen from him on the battlefield; I do not wish to pain you, but the thief was Morris Barnes. The friends of the lady who wrote them paid your brother two thousand pounds a year. Her enemies offered him—ten thousand pounds down. There is the secret of Morris Barnes' wealth."

Sydney Barnes leaned over the back of her chair. His hot whisper seemed to burn her cheek.

"Keep the packet, sister-in-law. Don't part!"

"Your brother-in-law," Wrayson remarked, "is evidently disposed to continue your husband's operations. Remember you are not at liberty to do as he asks. Your husband's words are plain. He orders you to burn the packet."

"How do I know that you are telling me the truth?" she asked abruptly.

"Undo the packet," he suggested. "A glance inside should show you."

For some reason or other she seemed dissatisfied. She pointed towards the Baroness.

"What is she doing here?" she asked.

"She is a friend of the woman who wrote those letters,' Wrayson answered. "I want her to see them destroyed."

There was silence for several moments. The girl's fingers closed upon the packet. She turned round and faced them all. She faced them all but she addressed more particularly Wrayson.

"You are wondering why I hesitate," she said slowly. "Augustus said destroy the packet, and I suppose I ought to do it."

"By God, you shan't!" Sydney Barnes broke in fiercely. "Morry didn't know that I should be here to look after things."

She waited until he had finished but she seemed to take very little, if any notice of his intervention.

"It isn't," she continued, "that I'm afraid to go back to the bar. I'll have to go to work somewhere, I suppose, but it isn't that. I want to know," she leaned a little forward, "I want to know who it is that has robbed me of my husband. I don't care what he was to other people! He was very good to me, and I loved him. I should like to see the person who killed him hanged!"

Wrayson, for a moment, was discomposed.

Kidney Pains in the Back

Could Not Stand or Even Turn in Bed —Legs Greatly Swollen

All Doctor's Medicine Failed—Cure Effected by Use of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Again this great medicine has triumphed over kidney disease of a severe type. From a bed of suffering and helplessness Mrs. Walsh was restored to health and strength by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Kidney pains in the back tortured her. Dropsical swellings had set in and she had no reason to hope for cure since the doctor's medicine failed to even relieve her. Read what the husband says about this remarkable cure.

Mr. Thos. D. Walsh, Pictou, N.S., writes: "Two years ago my wife took to her bed after suffering for a long time from kidney pains in the back. She was not able to stand on her feet or even turn herself in bed. The doctor's medicine was no benefit whatever, that we could see. Sometimes her legs would swell considerably. Reading about a woman in similar condition being cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, we purchased two boxes, and when these were used she was able to sit up. With three more boxes she was restored to health and doing her own housework.

"As for myself I also found these pills all that is claimed for them. I give this statement in order that others may obtain the same ease from suffering as that experienced by my wife and myself."

One pill a dose. 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

INCURABLE INDIGESTION

COMPLETELY CURED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

BANCROFT, ONT., October 17th.

"Fruit-a-tives" will cure every trace of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Bloating and Pain After Eating. Take them regularly—one before meals and at bedtime—give the intensified fruit juices a chance to regulate your system—and you will be cured. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

ELECTION GOSSIP

Ald. Bradburn Only Candidate So Far for the Mayoralty to Announce Himself as Definitely in the Race

ALD. BULLER RETICENT

The municipal pot is still simmering and will continue to do so, unless some new aldermanic material looms up on the horizon. In all probability some of the old timers will make an attempt to get back. A well posted politician predicted yesterday, that there would be plenty of prospective candidates by the end of next week. "The woods are full of them," he declared.

There will be seven vacancies in the Council at the end of the present year, six for aldermen, and one for mayor.

Mr. G. N. Gordon has announced his intention of entering the running in the Centre Ward, while Messrs. R. N. Jones, W. J. Johnston and Wm. Kempt are possible candidates. Ex-Ald. W. J. Johnston looks like a certainty. While he has not committed himself yet, his friends feel certain he will go to the people again.

It looks at present as though Ald. Bradburn, who has announced his intention of running for mayor, will play a lone hand in that particular field. As yet he has met with no opposition, although current rumour has it that Ald. Buller and Ald. Morgan are aspirants for this office. However, these gentlemen refuse to declare themselves.

The aldermen who will retain their office for another year are Messrs. Duncan, Brown, Graham and Morgan.

Nominations will take place on December 22nd and the elections on New Year's Day.

Ald. Anderson of East City is a candidate again for aldermanic honours. Ald. Anderson, who has been appointed chairman of the Finance committee of the Council, following the resignation of Ald. Bradburn, has proved himself a most worthy representative and is expected to poll a big vote on New Year's Day.

MISSED THE PRINCESS

HOT SALTS; OIL OR PILLS BUT CASCARETS

No Odds How Sick Your Stomach; How Hard Your Head Aches or How Bilious — Cascarets Make You Feel Great

You men and women who somehow can't get feeling right—who have an almost daily headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel all worn out.

Are you keeping clean inside with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foulgases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box fro many drug store will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good — do good—never gripe or sicken.

CUT IN TWO BY TRAIN

BARTENDER A MAN OF STRAW

That Alexander Hamilton, hotelkeper, must pay the town of Beaverton $384.14, the balance of a bill of some $600, for costs in connection with an effort made to quash the local option by-law, is the decision of Chancellor Boyd. The action was brought in the name of Sturmer, a bartender.

Chancellor Boyd says: "The petition in the name of Sturmer was a matter for which Hamilton and Overand were responsible. Sturmer is a man of straw They feared to appear lest they might be responsible for costs; they became responsible to the solicitor, who acted for Sturmer, and the matter was really an abuse of the process of the courts.

We wish to call your attention to the fact that most infectious diseases such as whooping cough, diphtheria, and scarlet fever are contracted when the child has a cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will quickly cure a cold and greatly lessen the danger of contracting these diseases. This remedy is famous for its cures of colds. It contains no opium or other narcotic and may be given to a child with implicit confidence. Sold by all dealers.

ST. JAMES' BAZAAR

St. James' Methodist church are holding a bazaar in the Market Hall on Dec. 14 and 15, and can you believe it, they are having an American booth. They say that reciprocity in good work if not in tariff, is carried. The ladies in charge invite all visitors not to forget to call at their booth. They have all kinds of Christmas gifts and great bargains will be offered. Dinner will be served from 12 to 2 o'clock and supper from 5 to 7 p.m., while lunch will be served continuously during the day. Don't fail to patronize the American booth, wherein some striking bargains will be offered.

TRY TO ESCAPE BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Look Well to Your Kidneys — Keep Them Healthy and Thus Avoid Incurable Diabetes and Bright's Disease.

If you would avoid Bright's disease take Dr. Hamilton's Pills at once—no delay about their action, which is swift and thorough. In every case complete cure attends their use.

Read the following symptoms—they tell if your kidneys are sick or well—whether or no you require a medicine such as Dr. Hamilton's Pills:

WATCH YOUR WATER.

Does it smell bad?
Is it red, bloody?
Painful and too frequent?
Does it drip?
Discolor the linen?
After standing 24 hours, if the urine is cloudy, highly colored, stringy, contains sediment like brickdust, then

YOUR KIDNEYS ARE DISEASED.

To protect your system against the further inroads of kidney complaint try on Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They give instant relief to the backache, those dragging sensations, desire to urinate too often or too seldom. You'll feel invigorated and braced, your appetite will improve, sleep will be restful no medicine on earth will do you more lasting good. Price 25c per box, or five boxes for $1, at all dealers.

PUBLIC SCHOOL GRANTS ANNOUNCED BY INSPECTORS

The legislative and county grants to rural schools on the basis of accommodation and equipment have just been apportioned by the School Inspector, and are now payable to the sections. This grant is paid, one-half by the Legislature, and the other half by the county, and amounts to an average of about $34 for each school. It is apportioned among the schools, each receiving 10 per cent. of the total value of the equipment, consisting of maps, charts, libraries, and apparatus. The rest is divided on the basis of the Inspector's grading of the accommodations, according to a schedule prepared by the Minister of Education. The amounts received by the schools in the inspectorate of Peterborough East, are as follows:

CAMPAIGN NOTES

Do you know the best place in the city to get the maximum amount of fun for a minimum amount of expense? It's at the Y. M. C. A. Perhaps you have been told that before and didn't believe it. Probably you never investigated for yourself. There are a whole lot of fellows in that condition in this city. The Y. M. C. A. boys know it, too. And they have arranged to give everybody in the city an opportunity to see for themselves. To-morrow evening the Y.M.C.A. is open to everybody. If you have never been in the building go to-morrow night and see for yourself what a fine place the "Y" boys have.

You are at perfect liberty to go anywhere you like, gymnasium, bowling alleys, reading-rooms, wrestling, baths, etc.

And they won't ask anyone to join. Just go and investigate for yourself

WON'T MIX

Bad Food and Good Health Won't Mix.

The human stomach stands much abuse but it won't return good health if you give it wrong food.

If you feed right you will feel right, for proper food and a good mind is the sure road to health.

"A year ago I became much alarmed about my health for I began to suffer after each meal, no matter how little I ate," says a Denver woman.

"I lost my appetite and the very thought of food grew distasteful, with the result that I was not nourished and got weak and thin.

"My home cares were very heavy, for besides a large family of my own I have also to look out for an aged mother. There was no one to shoulder my household burdens, and come what might I must bear them, and this thought nearly drove me frantic when I realized that my health was breaking down.

"I read an article in the paper about some one with trouble just like mine being benefitted by Grape-Nuts food and acting on this suggestion I gave Grape-Nuts a trial. The first dish of this delicious food proved that I had struck the right thing.

"My uncomfortable feelings in stomach and brain disappeared as if by magic and in an incredibly short space of time I was again myself. Since then I have gained 12 pounds in weight through a summer of hard work and realize I am a very different woman, all due to the splendid food, Grape-Nuts".

A Sunday Morning Visit to George St. Methodist Church

(By Roy Gilray.)

Last Sunday morning I visited "George Street." If the sermon I heard from the lips of the pastor, Rev Mr. Couch, is a sample of those usually delivered, I cannot see how a single member can stay away. It was a treat from beginning to end. Ornate for those who love lofty, flowery language, concise and to the point for those who insist on brevity, full of variety for those who abhor needless repetitions, bristling with points in perfect continuity for the deep thinker, and yet rendered so simple by the judicious use of apt illustrations that anyone could see the truth as it was developed from the reading of the text to the call for prayer.

As I picked my way down George street through the mists and saw the stately tower come into view I was reminded of the days when it did not exist, of days when there was a cumbersome debt, a heavy load carried by a faithful people for the benefit of those who should come after. Modelled after the great Metropolitan church of Toronto, she stands a noble structure, the home of an ambitious people, whose aspirations are limited only by the means at their disposal.

At the door I was met by a hand-shaking deputation, who enquired after my health. In a Methodist church one naturally expects a little more cordiality than elsewhere, but this was about the only "touching scene" I saw. Young men act as ushers, while a fresh contingent take up the collection. Some shamble along in a disinterested way, while others pace the aisle with the confidence and military tread of a Kitchener.

The choir marched in during the concluding strains of the opening voluntary, the ladies wearing gowns. They were twenty-seven strong (to say nothing of the boy), and contributed some excellent music, especially the anthem which they sang unaccompanied, though, possibly, its effect would have been greater if one of the choristers — using an orchestral term — had worn a "mute on his bridge."

The organist certainly is master of his instrument, though he has a very poor organ on which to exhibit his ability. To me, it has always sounded like a brass band with a preponderance of bass and kettle drums, and, Sunday morning, someone must have been sitting on the safety valve, for the singing of all the hymns was performed with a full head of steam. This may stimulate the congregational singing, but it is not as impressive as the Presbyterian method of variation to suit the thought as expressed in the text.

In looking over the slim congregation due, no doubt, to the threatening weather, and the presence of a former pastor at Charlotte street church, I was impressed with the large percentage of children and young people present.

George Street will have to give more concern to the rising generation in its homes and provide better accommodation for them in its Sunday school. It is about time they discarded their present underground, damp, dismal quarters for something more inviting and up-to-date. If they do not bestir themselves they will awaken some day from their Rip-Van-Winkle sleep and find the lambs stolen from their flocks. Why not take opportunity by the forelock and purchase the adjoining property to the north, erect a commodious Sunday school, filling up the church lawn with the earth taken from the cellar, making it level with the sidewalk, and do away with that tumble-down fence that surrounds the property.

A new feature, which is to be highly commended, is the system whereby the laymen are given an opportunity of coming into closer contact with the membership of the church. The congregation is divided into districts, each section to be visited by a pair of special representatives, whose duty it will be to call quarterly and help develop the spiritual life in the concrete; the brother who is strong in the prayer meeting and weak in contributing for church support will have his spiritual strength renewed just where it is showing signs of decay. Care will have to be exercised, however, lest these visiting missionaries degenerate into political deputations or travelling newspapers.

The Methodist church in Canada still adheres to the itineracy system, the term being three years, with the option of a fourth. The optional extension has worked out so satisfactorily the general term will soon be five years. While there are some good points in the "move-on" principle, there are some bad features which are all too apparent.

The great difference between a minister who stays with his people and a Methodist parson is the greater personal sympathy of the former. He has—in many cases—seen his congregation of fathers and mothers grow up from boys and girls. No matter how clever a sermonizer a Methodist clergyman may be, he cannot get the hold over his congregation which the Episcopalian or Presbyterian gains by long intimacy. Eloquence may sway the feelings and arouse the emotions, but such stirrings are weak when compared with the composite power of the parish priest who has served a life-time among his people.

It has also been instrumental in teaching the people the pernicious habit of irreverence for their leader. During his first year the average pastor is "adorable," the second "passable," the third "horrible," the fourth year—well it is "move-on" for him. While this is not a pleasant prospect, yet it is true in some cases at least, due to the fact that the habit seems to have been formed as an indirect result of the system. I am told that the love of a "change" has so taken root in the church that even their organists have to keep their furniture on wheels.

It likewise has the tendency to keep the salaries down almost to the point of penury. To some preachers they give little, to others more. In conversation with one of the members last week, I asked why the salaries were so variable. He replied in his usual terse way, that they were subject to the law of supply and demand. If a minister received a call with more money attached he was due for an increase, if he was not fortunate enough to be "called" he was handed out — well, I might as well say it—a decrease. Is it any wonder the labourers are few?

One of the most regrettable features in the development of Methodism is the dearth of young men entering the ministry. At the last session of the Montreal Conference there was not a single probationer, something which never happened before in the history of the church. For every effect there must be a cause; then where does the trouble lies?

In the first place, there is no use disguising the fact that there is an impatience of belief of wide extent among young men ;a feeling that less theology and more good, wholesome, rugged man is needed in the sermons. One sometimes has the feeling that the cemetery and tea-rooms of the Ladies' Aid Societies have most claims on the pastors. One is tempted to ask if he had ever been seen in the Young Men's Club or at a rugby game, completely unconscious of all dogmas and artificiality. It is this feeling that the pastors of some churches are not rugged men, who turn their faces in the direction of progress, that keeps many a good man from the church, and resolves many a young man into a scoffer. Young men are susceptible to a great degree of the appeal to the heroic. We do not need to lament the evils of our civilization, we need to concentrate every energy on the conflict with them. Using a rugby phrase, there is too much scrapping on the line and not enough concentration on the real point at issue, the salvation of men.

Then again, although we do not like to allude to it the second time, there is the question of remuneration which every young man must face in this intensely practical age. If there is one thing in which Methodists must experience a change of heart it is the matter of salaries paid their ministers, particularly those on the smaller circuits. Imagine a young man and his wife on one of our northern appointments subsisting on the princely allowance of $333 per annum. A good Methodist ought to blush that such things are allowed.

Comparisons, sometimes, are odious, but here is one which ought to cause any Methodist, who claims to be a progressive business man, to sit up and take notice. Two young men,

Doan's Kidney Pills

Are the Best Remedy In The World FOR BACKACHE.

Many people fail to understand the significance of a lame, weak, sore or aching back.

You overtax the kidneys—give them more work than they can possibly do—then they cry out in protest through the pain in the back.

Backache is simply kidneyache and the best remedy in the world for backache and all kidney troubles is Doan's Kidney Pills.

We have thousands of testimonials from all quarters of the globe to prove this. Here is one from a party who used them in England, but who is now a resident of Canada.

Mr. P. R. Glanville, Wycliffe, B.C., writes:—"When living in the 'Old Country,' three years ago, I suffered severely from pains in the back, and had to give up work. The pain was so bad that when I stooped down to pick anything up, I felt my back must break. I tried all sorts of remedies and several doctors, but all to no purpose. One day I read of Doan's Kidney Pills, and thought I might as well try them, and to my surprise, before I was half through one box the backache had entirely disappeared, and it has not caused me any trouble since. I always keep "Doan's" in the house and shall always recommend them to all sufferers."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

SATURDAY NIGHT EVENTS OF VARYING INTEREST

A Quota of Incidents as Seen by aa Examiner Representative---Number of Delinquents Spent Night in Cells

The passing of Saturday night was marked by a chapter of incidents, and to those who were compelled, by trend of circumstances, to accept the hospitality of Chief Thompson over Sunday, it will obtain as being a memorable one. Throughout the evening a vast crowd of people surged up and down the main thoroughfare. The moving picture shows and stores also harboured a goodly share of the populace.

A Fight.

An event of more than passing interest was a pugilistic encounter, which took place at the Chinese cafe about 8 o'clock. About two thousand hungry fight fans quickly gathered around the scene of hostilities, and threatened to tie up traffic. The participants in the scrap were two local men ,and a native of the Flowery Kingdom, in which the latter was badly worsted. P. C. Kidd and Detective Newhall's appearance on the scene put an end to the comedy, and the two local men banquished in the cells overnight. The Chinamen emergest from the fray in a badly battered condition, but still in the ring. The affair was aired in the Police Court this morning, particulars of which will be found elsewhere in these columns.

The Baggage Car Ahead.

Charles McCallum of Millbrook, fell a victim to the cup that cheers, and, as a result, he was transported back to his home town in the baggage car attached to the regular 9 o'clock train. P. C. Meagher and Detective Newhall's presence in the scene caused considerable consternation among McCallum's friends, who feared that he would be compelled to spend Sunday in town. They put up a strong plea for leniency, and promised to see him safely home. Beyond a few guttural sounds, which he uttered occasionally, attesting his ability as a bilingualist, the man was helpless.

Fire! Fire!

"Biega da fire, Reid street" came the startled cry over the 'phone, to the Fire Department on Saturday evening, about 10 o'clock. The firemen made a record run through the mud to 639 Reid street, laid a line of hose and tore around generally. The next stunt was to locate the fire, which later was found to be emitting from an overheated chimney. No damage was done.

A Runaway.

An exciting runaway occurred on Saturday evening, and several hairbreadth escapes resulted. The horse, which was attached to a light road waggon, took fright at a G. T. R. engine, near the station, and proceeded west, on Charlotte street, at a lively gait. The driver, who was a Cavan farmer, did the usual aeroplane stunt, and escaped injury. The horse was captured near the boundary, little the worse for its thrilling escapade.

Aqua Pura.

P. C. Kidd received a call to the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening, to remove a drunk, who had taken possession of the bath room. The man who hailed from the North Township, was apparently desirous of boosting the membership campaign of the institution. He wandered into the building during the afternoon, and refused to leave until the blue-coated guardian of the peace took a hand in the game.

"MISSIONARY WORK NOT A CHARITY BUT AN INVESTMENT"

Well-known Montreal Clergyman Addresses Large Congregations Yesterday.

FORCIBLE SPEAKER

Rev. Dr. Young of Montreal, formerly of the George Street Methodist church, addressed large audiences at both services at the Charlotte St. Methodist church, in connection with the missionary anniversary, yesterday. He is an eloquent and forcible speaker, and brings out clear cut and very interesting points. He was a college friend of Rev. G. W. Henderson, pastor of the Charlotte Street church, and his ministerial career has been a most brilliant and marked success, every evidence of which was exhibited in his addresses yesterday.

Rev. Dr. Young chose the text for his morning sermon from the 13th Chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, 2nd and 3rd verses: "As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said: Separate me, Barnabas and Saul, for the work whereunto I have called them, and when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away."

In explaining his text, the reverend speaker stat i that the scene was in Antioch, a city about 300 miles west of Jerusalem, and the third largest city in the Roman Empire of those days, and that was where the name of 'Christian' was first heard of. This city was founded about three hundred years B. C., and three hundred years A. D., became aChristianised city. Referring to the class of people, which inhabited the city, in their low, debased, degenerate condition, he asked the question: 'How came it that the name 'Christian' became known there first? How did a Christian develop out of a throng of heathens like the inhabitants of Antioch? There were a number of martyrs sacrificed about in the wilderness who travelled northward to Antioch, where the death of Stephen broke up a narrow channel, and gave the Gospel a chance to develop and travel. The killing of Stephen was an attempt to put out the religious fire, but it only made it burn more brightly. The martyrs, who travelled north, after the death of Stephen, were the seed of the church of Antioch. This church was the first and only church, which the Jews and Gentiles could both attend, and that fact was a remarkably strange thing for the people at that time. That church, where the name 'Christian' was formed, stood in the midst of a great commercial city on the border of the Roman empire. It was an ideal missionary church, and the city in which it stands to-day, is a fit home for such a church."

The evangelization of the city is the evangelization of the nation," said Rev. Dr. Young; "and this church was marked for trying to break away from the old methods and customs and modes of action, and that spirit invariably presented itself when there was any action on the part of the church to introduce any new methods of action."

"The missionary enthusiasm in our church to-day stands out in strong contrast with the church of past years," said the speaker. "You cannot intensify the membership without trying to extend the border of Christ's Kingdom—hence we have the all important message in the text: "Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." The Holy Ghost says: One feature of a truly religious spirit is to find out God's will. "Lord what wilt Thou have me do?" That question is never to be left unanswered. "Separate me for the work where unto I have been called, is the answer of the church of Antioch.

Missionary Movement.

There is a mighty wave of missionary enthusiasm going over all at the present time, said the reverend speaker. It has touched the preachers and the people in the pews. It has awakaned the church and the men. The voice of the Holy Ghost says: "Give me men and money to be dedicated to this purpose."

Referring to the case of Barnabas and Saul, the reverend speaker said that the Lord had chosen the two best men to carry the Gospel to the heathen, and the same could be applied to the condition of the present day.

"The best men the church can produce are required in the mission fields" continued the speaker; "men whose piety is of the deepest, and whose zeal is unquestionable are the ones. We should be careful in selecting our missionaries; we should be sure to select men with a true missionary zeal in order that they will sustain the work of the Holy Ghost. We should not regard the missionary work as a charity. We should regard it as an investment, just the same as if we started up a branch of our business out there. Then, suggesting that we regard it on business principles, should we send out the weakest men in our business, or should we send out men whom we know will be sure to make our branch thrive? The question requires no answer. The illustration should be amply sufficient."

In conclusion, the reverend speaker referred to the revolution in China. He said that some people regarded it as being an uprising against the Government, but it was the awakening of the country after centuries of slumber. The world will feel the result of that revolution, for it is the awakening of a great power, which, for centuries, has been harmlessly sleeping. There is a splendid chance for the church to-day to develop itself, but in order to do this it will be necessary to have strong men of ability, and not boys.

"We are all members of one family and we are all working for the same great result," was the concluding thought expressed by Rev. Dr. Young.

Special music of an appropriate character was rendered by the choir.

DR. BARCLAY AT KNOX

Eminent Montreal Divine Delivers Two Inspiring Addresses to Large Congregations

BUILDING FUND DONATIONS

"Life does not exist alone upon the events of the present, but largely upon the memories of the past, and the hopes and aspirations of the future."

This was the keynote of Rev. Dr. Barclay's inspiring message to the congregation of Knox church yesterday morning. The occasion marked the first anniversary of the church, and a large number turned out to hear the eminent divine. For so essentially gentle a personality, Dr. Barclay has an amazing spiritual force. He possesses calmness, simplicity and supple strength, talks simply, earnestly, with no gestures, but with a spiritual force which holds his congregation.

The speaker took for his text the 13th chapter of Exodus, 19th verse, "And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him; for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you." We are the result of civilization, or arduous struggles and the courageous conviction of those who came before us," declared Dr. Barclay.

The memory of the dead is one of the richest heirlooms of the living. We endure their living work, and reap the benefits accrued thereby. We get to-day the inspiration of those who were our teachers in the past. There was the deep prophetic foresight in Joseph's last request that his bones be carried with the Israelites on their march. He had given his life for them, and it was his desire that they should remember him in death, as in life. We are to-day benefitting by the rich inheritance of the truth, the fundamental principles of which were laid down by those who preceded us. We can't break the spiritual links that bind us to the past. The testimonies of the martyrs, the zeal of the reformers and the reverence of the holy dead, bring to us messages of uplift and courage to do the right. The great sympathetic, modern cry is "Back to Christ, and simplicity of faith." But we cry, show us the way. The true pathway carries us back through the intervening centuries of the ages. That the past is not dead is manifesting itself in a remarkable way to-day. The fundamental idea of Calvinism is re-asserting itself to-day, and in many other instances wonderful changes manifest themselves in no unmistakable manner. The God of all earnest aspirants to the faith to-day is not something new, but a brighter conception of the past, salvation through sacrifice, the dignity of labour and the true faith of Christ.

While we reverence the past, we should not forget that the idolatry of the past is detrimental to the present, and will not only prove fatal to personal conviction, but as a long and abiding influence. The church has been too lax in grasping the opportunities that are to be had by studying the past. Our faith is only strong when it is proved to be a spiritual power within ourselves. Whilst we hold the past in reverence we must be free toinvestigate any new truth that might arise, come from whatever source it may. Let it be our prayer and constant endeavour to live our life steadfast, wisely and righteously, so that those whom we leave behind, when we return to the dust, may turn away to the living life and say, "Oh, dead yet speaketh."

At the evening service, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Keith, stated that just one year ago, Knox church had been opened, and he was pleased to be able to state that the erection of the church had been justified by its success. Although considerable debt had been incurred by the building of the edifice, he was glad to be able to say that through the assistance of the congregation, and others, they had done exceedingly well towards the reduction of the debt.

He was also pleased to announce that Mrs. Waddell, and her son had to-day carried out the wish of the late Mr. Hugh Waddell by contributing $1,000 to the building fund. He and the congregation appreciated their goodness in doing so. Mr. Keith concluded by expressing the hope that the collections for the day would be liberal, thereby facilitating the reduction of the debt to a considerable extent.

The total contributions for the day amounted to approximately $2,100. This includes the gift of $1,000 given by Mr. Waddell.

WEDDING BELLS

SOUTHWELL—CAMPBELL.

A pretty, but quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Wm. Campbell, Bailieboro, on Dec. 6th, 1911, at 2 o'clock, when her only daughter, Alice, was united in the bonds of wedlock to Mr. Oscar Southwell of Whitby, Ont. The bride was given away by Mr. J. C. Campbell, and the young couple were unattended. The Rev. D. A. McKenzie of Centreville Presbyterian church, officiated, only the immediate friends being present. The bride received a handsome array of presents, showing the high esteem in which she was held by her friends. The young couple left on a trip to Toronto and points west and on their return will reside in Whitby.—Whitby papers please copy.

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

THE MODERN VIEW OF HEAVEN

Eloquent and Scholarly Sermon by Rev. J. R. Webb at Murray St. Baptist Church.

LARGE CONGREGATION

Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church, preached an eloquent and scholarly sermon to a large congregation in that church last evening on the subject "The Modern View of Heaven". Rev. Mr. Webb's remarks were followed with close attention, and the sermon was a source of help and comfort to all who heard it.

The text chosen was John 14, 1-2: "Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in Me, in my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you, I go to prepare a place for you.

He spoke of the hope and conviction which has always been in the breasts of men, that there is to be a future which will be better than this. "A newspaper man, said the preacher, asked me this week: "can there be a modern view of heaven?" My answer is that those who wrote this Scripture under the inspiration of God, used the very best terms possible for their age, but we have their record, together with the changes of nineteen hundred years, which makes it necessary that we should tell the same truth in terms which this age will understand. It was necessary that truths should be presented in material figures for the spiritual conception was new in those days. Christ was the apostle, and prophet of the spiritual age.

Mr. Webb outlined the theory of progress from the days when no organized life existed on this earth up to the present reign of man, then he asked the question. Is this the final period? Has God come to a standstill in his programme? Must I have the particular particles that compose this body to make a future of bliss? He thought not. It is impossible to convey to a creature in one stage the nature of the next in the upward progress. No idea of the barnyard can be conveyed to the chick in the shell, and no idea of the flower garden can be conveyed to the butterfly in the cocoon, and eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man the things that God hath laid up for him. But there is a higher stage. We have seen the type. Our future condition will be that which was Christ's when his earthwork was done. It will be such a body as will not be hindered by material obstructions—distance will be annihilated—pain will be impossible.

There was a time when there were no American Beauty roses, but when the first one was secured it was the prophecy of millions more. There was a time when there was no hope beyond this life, but when the type appeared in Christ it was a prophecy of a multitude, which no man can number. We will have in the future no more need for walls, gates, and streets than we will for suns and moons, and temples, and John said as the spiritual idea struggled with the physical: "There shall be no need of the sun, or the moon," and "there shall be no temple therein". We are tired of walls and gates, and in the future we will need them no more than the bird needs the shell when it has found its wings. What we will want and what we shall have is a liberty that the incumbrance of flesh denys—

When I lay down the judgeship he lent me—each faculty tasked,
I'll perceive Him and gain an abyss
—where a dewdrop was asked.

By the pain-throb triumphantly winning intensified bliss,
And the next world's reward and repose by the struggles of this.

OBITUARY

MRS. ADOLPHUS GUERIN.

The death occurred last evening of a very well-known resident of the city, in the person of Mrs. Adolphus Guerin of 116 Boundary Road.

The deceased had been ill for the space of only one week, and her end coming so suddenly, was a severe shock to her relatives and friends, of whom she was greatly beloved. She was in her 70th year.

Mrs. Guerin is survived by a sorrowing husband, three daughters, Mrs. Joseph Goulet, Toronto, Mrs. John Gibson of this city, and Mrs. William Brioux, of Toronto, and two sons, Messrs. Adolphe Guerin and Joseph G. Guerin, both of Toronto. Three brothers also lament her demise, in the persons of Messrs. Noah, J. E., and Thomas De Laplante, all of Peterborough, and two sisters, Mrs. Clement Gordon, and Mrs. Archie Le Tellier.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock, to the St. Peters cemetery, for interment.

WANTS TO MANAGE LOCAL TEAM IN THE CANADIAN LEAGUE

Wishes to Take Up Proposition With a Number of Peterborough Business Men Who Would Help to Finance Team.

HAS A GOOD RECORD

Sporting Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—As you undoubtedly know, the Canadian Baseball League will hold its meeting in Hamilton, on December 15th, to consider Ottawa's application for membership. It is probable that if Ottwa is admitted, Berlin will be dropped. Now, there is a likelihood that an eight-club league will materialise, if Kingston and Peterborough send representatives to this meeting. These cities, if admitted, would greatly help Ottawa, as the jump would not be nearly so great.

I would like very much to manage the Peterborough Club and if I am assured of financial backing by Peterborough business men, I would be glad to meet their representative in Hamilton on the day preceding the meeting, and help land a franchise for Peterborough on the day following. I have managed teams in Wilmington, (N.C.),; Ottamwau, (I.A.); Jamestown, (NY.); and Newport News, (Va.). I have won two pennants and only once finished lower than third.

I have played with Baltimore, St. Paul, and Mobile, and have a wide acquaintance amongst players and managers. I would be willing to come to Peterborough and assist in the organization of the Peterborough Baseball Association. If business men of Peterborough are anxious to have a professional baseball team (one of the greatest advertisements for a city) I would gladly meet their representative, providing they notify me by wire, or call me on the long-distance telephone, in time for me to make railroad connection for Hamilton.

Trusting that you will give this article some attention, and a write-up in your paper, I am, with best wishes,

Sincerely yours,
Hugh A. Shannon,
211 Oxford Ave., Buffalo, N.Y.
Bell Telephone, North 4223.

P.S.—My references are E. J. Cafferty, Mgr. Montreal Baseball Club; George Booker, owner Newport News (Va.) club; Carl W. Chester, Sec'y. Buffalo (Eastern League) Club.

PETE CAMPBELL CAPTAIN

Pete Campbell was elected captain of the Varsity rugby team for 1912, at a meeting after the picture of the 1911 Dominion champions had been taken on he steps of University College, where only championship teams are photographed, this morning. Campbell, who is an old T. C. S. and R. M. C. player, was the sensation of the season at quarter-back for the Blue and White. He is considered the brainiest player in the game today, and one of the greatest quarters the game ever produced.—Toronto News.

WAS TROUBLED WITH Headache AND Constipation.

After Suffering For Two Years Was Cured By BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Headache of whatever nature is nearly always symptomatic of other diseased conditions, rather than a disease itself, but in most cases a disordered stomach, constipation, or bad circulation is the chief source of the difficulty. Burdock Blood Bitters removes the cause of the trouble through its cleansing, strengthening and tonic action on the stomach, liver, bowels and blood. Mr. Wm. Redmond, Cardigan Bridge, P. E. I., writes:—"I have been troubled with headache and constipation for about two years. After trying every doctor I knew, a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I found myself, after using one bottle, getting much better, and after using three bottles I was completely cured.

"After then I was on a visit, and found my cousin very sick, and the doctor told her there was something wrong with her head. I told her to use Burdock Blood Bitters and she was cured in a short time. I can safely recommend it to all."

To Enter League

The annual meeting of the Trent Valley Hockey League will be held on Monday night, and it is altogether likely that there will be delegates present representing the local T. A. S. The League is to be thoroughly reorganized, with a new constitution put into force, and an effort will be made to form a group in this section with the T. A. S. and probably another local team. Norwood, Lakefield and Bobcaygeon in the running. Norwood has a team willing to join the local City League, but there is no doubt they would go into the Trent Valley if a strong group was formed. A further announcement will be made next week.

AS OTHERS SEE US

equally clever, leave college with degrees, one to be a preacher, the other a physician. The latter works up a successful practice, increasing it from one to ten thousand in many years; (though in some cases the specialists make much more), and with the rosiest prospects for the future. The other poor fellow starts in at about six or eight hundred and he may count himself lucky if he is getting twelve hundred in that time, with very dismal prospects for his declining years. Is it any wonder the average young man "cannot see his way clear" to enter the church?

One of the most important features in connection with the Methodist church is its mid-week prayer meeting. It has more than one distinct value. It ought to provide spiritual help to all who attend. It ought to be an educative force, making clear what true citizenship means, what Christian brotherhood implies, and above all the word of God should be a well-discussed text-book. In addition, the prayer meeting should be a social means of grace, as the Sunday services have become so formal there is scarcely any chance of the people becoming better acquainted. The more informal and the more homelike the meeting is, the more it will attract the ordinary Christian. The prayer-meeting shows pretty well just what amount of effort has been put into it. It will not run itself, it must be planned, prayed for, and toiled for. When the prayer-meeting languishes, someone has failed to do his work; it may be the preacher; it may be the man in the pew; but the lifeless prayer-meeting reveals only too plainly that someone has forgotten to do his part. It should be a meeting that will grip men; it can be made so.

Above all, the prayer meeting is the place where ambitious pastors should experiment on their flock (those whose faith is well grounded), with their new forms of theology, instead of airing them on Sunday before a mixed and perhaps incredulous congregation. Imagine, if you can, a large public service corporation trying out a new regulation on the people before instructing their employees in its merits. The thing would be an absurdity and would meet with failure from the start. A good Methodist should be well versed in his doctrines. The secret of the clear, unshaken hold of its own theology which Methodism has lies in the fact that theology is consistently kept in touch with human experience, and then tested and verified by that experience.

We hear a great deal lately of "Higher Criticism." In a sense we are all higher critics. No one ever believed, for example, that Moses wrote the account of his own funeral, which is found in the book of Deuteronomy. A more appropriate term, possibly, to apply to those who are accused of mutilating the scriptures would be "wilder critics.' 'I fancy I hear someone say the church should not be criticized. It ought to be criticized when it needs it. A certain amount of criticism is both necessary and wholesome. The church is in a world where everything has to be tested to prove its right to live. The church cannot afford to keep the blinds down and the doors locked. It must come out in the open; it must answer the challenge of those who criticize it with a better life and a higher and nobler service. This is the way it will turn its critics into its truest and best friends.

The Methodist church claims to be a living church in touch with the active life of the world; then, can it afford to spend all its time discussing sundryisms when things are out of joint in the world? Can it lock its doors, pull down the blinds and consume precious time over dogmas when the world outside is clamoring for someone to save it from the curse of strong drink; to rid it of those unscrupulous grafters that are swallowing up the people's rights, the people's heritage, who put the rule of gold as the law of life over against the golden rule.

The text was taken from Titus, 2:10: "That they may adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things." The theme of the discourse throughout was very apprporiately summed up at the close by the use of the quotation from Matthew: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." If the gospel of Christ be the doctrine of God it ought to show the attributes of God. In leading up to these he referred to the vastness of the gospel; the Bible being a book of mighty horizon, showing the plan of redemption of man from the foundation of the world, including the whole race, worked out through the ages to eternities beyond.

The purity of the gospel was shown by alluding to its remaining pure despite the corrupting influences of the nations of antiquity, and those of more modern times. So we look beyond our sinful environments to God through Christ, for that which is sweet and pure.

The love of the gospel was emphasized by comparing conditions where the influence of the gospel has not been felt. The nations of old knew nothing of sympathy, or charity. The ancient Roman knew nothing of love. Even coming down to times more modern, we find the Gentile against Jew, the white against negro and Chinaman. There is a narrowness to our thought just as we fix a boundary to our cities, to our systems of illumination, but the gospel knows no limitations, the whole earth is resplendent in its glory.

The power of the gospel, as exemplified in the tremendous forces of nature, all woven into a majestic perfection not found in the philosophies of man; with Paul we can say: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

The permanence of the gospel is shown by its reality. It is the only thing that persists. Nations may come and pass away, sciences may flourish for a time, but the record of revelation stands firm as a rock, notwithstanding its peculiarities as pointed out by finite man. This he illustrated by alluding to a little exclamation made by his son when two years old as they were standing in the garden watching the clouds passing swiftly by. Looking in the direction of the house the child cried: "Papa, the house is falling."

The gospel of Christ is not a speculation, it is intensely practical, being demonstrated daily in our characters, making us more like Him. The work of the Christian is to manifest the beauty of his faith and make it tangible. This was mad every clear by the use of three excellent illustrations, the first of which referred to the written manuscript of a composer. To those not familiar with music it would be confusing, well night unintelligible. Interpreted by the master musician it would represent harmonies which anyone could understand and appreciate. The musician had adorned the music of the composer.

RHEUMATISM IN THE SYSTEM

SIX YEARS CURED IN SIX DAYS

TO MFRS. "NERVILINE."

"The suffering I endured for six years with Rheumatism is beyond description. Every time I was exposed to cold or dampness meant that I had to go to bed. My muscles stiffened, my joints swelled, and any attempt at exertion brought on excruciating twinges. The pain shifted from one part to another and I was scarcely ever free from misery and sleeplessness. I took all kinds of liquid medicines, but they nearly all depressed my heart and I had to stop them. Then I was told of the wonderful power of Nerviline.

Nerviline

"If Nerviline had been made specially for my case it couldn't have been more successful. It sank right into the core of the painful part, gave me ease, allowed me to sleep, gave me the use of my arms and limbs—in fact, made a new man of me. I urge all Rheumatics to use 'Nerviline.'

A. E. TRAYONER.
"Justice of the Peace, Lancaster."

The most wonderful pain-subduing substances in the world are in Nerviline—that's why it penetrates so quickly, why it instantly cures pain that other remedies can't even relieve. You'll be surprised how quickly sciatica, lumbago, or rheumatism are cured by Nerviline—seems almost magical the way it will cure a cold or sore throat. When the chest is sore and it hurts to draw a long breath, one rubbing with Nerviline is sufficient. So highly valued is Nerviline by those who use it, that many families consider it quite as good as a doctor for aches, pains, and minor ailments of every kind. Large 25c bottles are sold by all dealers.

Mrs. H. Whitney Wood will receive on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 13th, at her residence, 320 Margaret avenue.

Hon. Mr. Justice and Mrs. Weir, of Montreal, are visiting their daughter, Mrs. H. Whitney Wood, 320 Margaret avenue.

Mrs. Austin, 548 Weller street, will not receive again until after the New Year, then on the second Tuesday of each month.

Mrs. Alex. J. Robertson, 174 Antrim street, will receive to-morrow (Tuesday) December 12th, and not again until the New Year.

The engagement is announced of Miss Edyth Marion Dawson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dawson, Lachine, Montreal, to Dr. J. Stewart Lloyd, professor in Alabama State University. The marriage will take place December 26th.

Society wended its way up on the hill yesterday, where Mrs. T. J. Taylor held her post-nuptial reception in her cozy home on Fifth avenue and Braemar street. The bride wore her pretty wedding gown of pailette satin and was assisted in receiving by her sister, Mrs. Wm. Crawford. Mrs. Carbert conducted the guests to the refreshment tables, where Mrs. Sissons poured the tea and Mrs. W. H. Turpin cut the ices. The young ladies assisting were Miss Olga Evans, Miss Etta Porter and Miss Hazel Carbert. Chrysanthemums and smilax, in many pretty combinations were used extensively in beautifying the rooms.—Medicine Hat News.

Mrs. Taylor was formerly Miss Laura M. Edwards of Peterborough.

ELEVATORS BURNED

Owen Sound Is the Scene of a Disastrous Conflagration

LOSS IS MILLION DOLLARS

Owen Sound, Dec. 12.—One of the most devastating fires that has ever visited the port of Owen Sound, took place last evening, resulting in the total destruction of the two big C.P.R. elevators with their contents, consisting of 867,000 bushels of grain, of which 129,000 bushels was wheat, the balance being principally oats and barley. The loss will run over one million dollars.

The fire, which broke out at 8.45 o'clock, is believed to have been caused by the dropping of a cigar or cigarette butt on the dock close to the elevating leg of No. 1, the southern of the two elevators. The capacity of this elevator is 250,000 bushels, and that of No. 2, the northern elevator, 800,000 bushels. It was discovered shortly after by Harbormaster Maclean and Wm. Hartford, who promptly turned in an alarm.

Like a lightning flash the flames sprang up the main elevating leg, which furnished a great draft for their progress, and quickly spread over the entire building.

Then by means of the grain-conveyor, they spread to the other elevator, 100 feet to the north, which was soon enveloped in flames.

Lords Accept Insurance Bill.

London, Dec. 12.—David Lloyd-George's national insurance bill passed its second reading in the House of Lords yesterday without division. Lord Lansdowne said that the choice lay between the bill with all its defects and two or three years distracting controversy between the two Houses and he had come to the conclusion that acceptance of the bill was the wiser course.

Lynchers Were Hypnotized.

London, Dec. 12.—Auto-suggestion was the defence accepted by the judges at Agram, in Hungary, yesterday, when they acquitted six peasants who had taken part in a brutal case of lynching.

The inhabitants of the Village of Bibnik, in Croatia, had been greatly excited by a number of cases of arson in the neighborhood, and as the authorities failed them, they organized a police force themselves.

Armed with scythes and shotguns, they finally seized an itinerant brushmaker. He was dragged before the assembled villagers and tortured until he made confession. Then more than a hundred men and women beat him to death with flails, chopped up the body with scythes, and burned the fragments in a heap of straw.

Though the public prosecutor asked for death sentences, defending counsel succeeded in persuading the judges that the peasants in the common excitement had, so to speak, mesmerized one another, and were therefore not responsible for their actions.

MAJORITY REDUCED

Sir James Whitney Goes Back With Eighty-two Seats

NEW LIBERAL ERA BEGINS

Toronto, Dec. 12.—The Government of Sir James Whitney has been given a four-year renewal of power. When the ballots had been counted last night Sir James and his Ministers had received, in the net loss of four supporters and the reduction of the majorities of his supporters nearly all along the line, an intimation that Liberalism in Ontario has started anew. The new Legislature will be composed of 82 Conservatives, 23 Liberals, one Labor member and one Independent Conservative. The Government will thus, after appointing a Speaker, have a majority of 59, instead of 68 as before.

Disorganized and disheartened as they were when Sir James Whitney precipitated an election upon a people already tired of politics, the Liberal forces made a splendid showing. Led by a man who, combined with singular uprightcousness of character, an ability to hit hard and often, they put up a remarkable fight.

The Conservatives made 7 gains, including North Renfrew, which went by acclamation. The Liberals made 11 gains.

Some of the Conservative members of the last Parliament who went down to defeat were: Phil Bowyer in East Kent, where local considerations entered largely into the fight; Charles Calder in South Ontario; A. Aubin in Sturgeon Falls, who was opposed by a very strong and popular man, Mageau, and where patronage did Mr. Aubin more harm than good; and Col. Craig in East Wellington, a valuable man.

On the other hand the Liberals lost such stalwarts as James McEwing, who was one of the strongest characters on the left hand side of the House; Daniel Reed, South Wentworth, and Valentine Stock of South Perth.

The bilingual question did not help the Conservatives much. In the French counties they lost Glengarry (formerly Scotch), Prescott and Sturgeon Falls, while on the other hand the Conservatives won in the French counties, Stormont and East Ottawa; the latter could be accounted for by the candidature of L. J. Kehoe, an Irish Roman Catholic, from whom the French expected little.

The majority of Leader Rowell is 58. This is a little better than the late member, Dr. Andrew McKay did in 1908.

The ex-Liberal leader, Mr. A. G. MacKay has over 700 majority over his old-time opponent, G. M. Boyd. This should be specially gratifying to his personal friends who believe that his character was traduced without just cause. For this litigation, it is said, Mr. MacKay holds the Conservatives of North Grey blameless. It seems to be a personal affair wholly apart from political considerations. At any rate Mr. MacKay has got his vindication.

Owing to some of the northern sections being almost inaccessible returns were unavailable last night, and it is possible that there may be a few changes in the summary given this morning when complete figures are in. For instance, at Sturgeon Falls, the election of Mr. Mageau, Liberal, is expected by a majority close to 100. A later despatch from North Bay states that the election is close.

The Conservative gains are: Stormont, East Ottawa, West Wellington, East Simcoe, South Wentworth, South Perth, and North Renfrew (acc.).—Total 7.

The Liberal gains are: Glengarry, South Ontario, Monck, North Wentworth, Sturgeon Falls, North Norfolk, Prescott, East Middlesex, East Kent, Centre Bruce, and East Wellington.—Total 11.

The old members defeated are—Liberals: James McEwing, West Wellington; Daniel Reed, South Wentworth; Valentine Stock, South Perth. Conservatives: Charles Calder, South Ontario; James A. Ross, Monck; A. A. Aubin, Sturgeon Falls; George Neely, East Middlesex; P. H. Bowyer, East Kent; Col. Craig, East Wellington.

The new members in the House are—Conservatives: W. D. Black, Addington; J. W. Westbrook, North Brant; C. W. Jarvis, Fort William; A. M. Rankin, Frontenac; Sandy Grant, East Hasting; Robert Cook, North Hastings; Dr. A. E. Ross, Kingston; N. Champagne, East Ottawa; J. A. Ellis, West Ottawa; J. Lennewess, South Perth; E. A. Peck, West Peterboro; Don. Hogarth, Port Arthur; E. A. Dunlop, North Renfrew; J. J. Hartt, East Simcoe; J. C. Mulligan, Stormont; C. McCrae, Sudbury; E. W. J. Owens, South Toronto; Dr. Vrooman, West Victoria; Col. Schofield, South Wellington; W. C. Chambers, West Welington; J. T. Regan, South Wentworth. Liberals: W. McDonald, Centre Bruce; H. Munro, Glengarry; Chris. Kohler, Haldimand; C. Ferguson, East Kent; R. Sutherland, East Middlesex; Thomas Marshall, Monck; Col. Atkinson, North Norfolk; W. E. Sinclair, South Ontario; N. J. Rowell, North Oxford; G. Evanturel, Prescott; J. Mageau, Sturgeon Falls; Udney Richardson, East Wellington; Dr. McQueen, North Wentworth.

Foy's election in North Toronto was the event which excited most of the interest last night.

At nine o'clock last night Hon. Mr. Foy's majority was given at 684, which is a slight gain over that accorded John Shaw, the Conservative candidate at the previous provincial election. Mr. Shaw's majority was 632.

The members of the new Legislature with their majorities as far as can at present be ascertained, are:—

PUBLICITY THE CURE.

U. S. Commission Reports Against Control of Railway Stock.

Washington, D.C., Dec. 12.—The railroad securities commission, headed by President A. T. Hadley of Yale, has reported that it would be practically impossible at this time to place issues of railroad securities under federal control. The commission recommends that enforced publicity for all railroad financing is the most effective weapon against stock watering which the Government has at its command.

The commission was created in 1910, when the Senate refused to accept a House amendment to the pending railroad bill, providing that all future issue of stocks of railroad securities be placed under the control of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The commission's report is distinctly adverse to the legislation proposed in the railroad bill and President Taft, in transmitting the report to Congress yesterday, declared that he heartily concurred in the recommendations.

The commission's principal conclusions are:

That any attempt by Congress to adopt the policy of the federal regulation to the exclusion of state regulation would be premature.

That for the present, state authorities should make a concerted effort to harmonize existing requirements.

That Congress should prepare for the future by giving consideration to a federal incorporation act which would permit the interstate railroads to exchange their state charters for national ones.

The commission takes the ground that constitutional questions involving the scope and extent of federal authority are unsettled and will remain so for some time; and that while such a condition exists to superimpose federal regulation upon state regulation would add to the conflicts and complexities, which in the public interest, should rather be diminished than increased.

Indictment and prosecution of railroads which fail to refund promptly manifest overcharges on the transportation of freight, hereafter will be requested by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Probing United Shoe Machinery.

Boston, Dec. 12.—The criminal pleadings in the Government's suit against the directors and officials of the United Shoe Machinery Co., were completed yesterday with the arrangement of George W. Brown of Boston, who was in South America when he and his fellow directors were indicted for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. Mr. Brown, who is a venerable-looking business man, pleaded not guilty in the United States court to the two indictments, and furnished $10,000 bail for his appearance at the trial, the date of which has not been fixed.

Boys Found Dynamite.

Los Angeles, Dec. 12.—A sack containing ten pounds of dynamite, about 200 feet of fuse and a number of triplex caps, was found early yesterday by two boys in a doorway leading to the engine-room of a laundry.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

—BY—

J. W. BROWETT

Optometrist

Q. Why is it that glasses are worn so much more now than years ago?

A. Years ago the science of optics or correcting errors of sight was not understood as it is to-day; only old persons or those near-sighted were Glasses. Now we correct with lenses all errors of sight.

Q. Why is it that cheap glasses do not give satisfaction?

A. Cheap glasses are so faulty in construction and are of such poor quality that they distort the vision and cause pain in the eyes. The optical glass used by us is brilliant, clear and perfect, insuring comfort and ease to the wearer.

Q. Can my headaches be relieved with glasses?

A. A personal visit will be necessary. Let us talk it over.

TRIAL WILL BE RESISTED.

Hebert's Counsel Will Object to Test of Legality.

Montreal, Dec. 12.—There will be opposition to any hearing of evidence on the legality of the nullity decree, or on the legality of the Hebert marriage when the case is called in Practice Court to-day for hearing of evidence on the inscription for judgment asked for by the attorneys for the wife, Marie Emma Cloutre.

This opposition is being raised by the legal firm of Beaudin, Loranger, St. Germain, Guerin and Raymond, who state they have been retained as counsel for L. J. Lefevbre attorney of record for the husband, and who has conducted the fight single-handed thus far.

These attorneys state that their client had announced his intention of withdrawing from the suit because he has not the funds to carry it on. This, the attorneys claim, Mrs. Hebert and her lawyers duly took cognizance of, and moved for formal declaration in their favor, and there was no question of legality or illegality of the marriage to be decided.

The recent request for a hearing of evidence on the legal aspect of the marriage, which is to be heard today is illegal, they say, for there is no argument to settle. The husband has by default desisted ,claiming his rights in the first judgment, annulling the marriage and that settled it, his attorneys claim.

If by any chance the witnesses are heard to-day, they will not take part in it, but will take steps to have the proceedings declared illegal in the higher courts.

"THE AVENGER"

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

"But that," he said, "has nothing to do with obeying your husband's directions about that packet."

She looked at him with tired eyes and changeless expression.

"Hasn't it?" she asked. "I am not so sure. You have explained about these letters. It is quite certain that my husband was killed by either the friends or the enemies of the woman who wrote these letters. I think that if I take this packet to the police it will help them to find the murderer!"

Her new attitude was a perplexing one. Wrayson glanced at the Baroness as though for counsel. She stepped forward and laid her hand upon the girl's shoulder.

"There is one thing which you must not forget, Mrs. Barnes," she said quietly. "Your husband knew that he was runnin ga great risk in keeping these letters and making a living out of them. His letter to you shows that he was perfectly aware of it. Of course, it is a very terrible, a very inexcusable thing that he should have been killed. But he knew perfectly well that he was in danger. Can't you sympathize a little with the poor woman whose life he made so miserable? Let her have her letters back. You will not find her ungrateful!"

The girl turned slowly round and faced the Baroness. They might indeed have represented the opposite poles in femininity. From the tips of her perfectly manicured fingers to the crown of her admirably coiffured hair, the Baroness stood for all that was elegant and refined in the innermost circles of her sex. Agnes would have looked more in place behind the refreshment bar from which Morris Barnes had brought her. Her dress of cheap shiny silk was ill-fitting and hopeless, her hat with its faded flowers and crushed shape an atrocity, boots and gloves, and brooch of artificial gems—all were shocking. Little was left of her pale-faced prettiness. The tragedy which had stolen into her life had changed all that. Yet she faced the Baroness without flinching. She seemed sustained by the suppressed emotion of the moment.

"He was my man," she said fiercely, "and no one had any right to take him away from me. He was my husband, and he was brutally murdered. You tell me that I must give up the letters for the sake of the woman who wrote them! What do I care about her? Is she as unhappy as I am, I wonder? I will not give up the letters," she added, clasping them in her hand, "except—on one condition."

"If it is a reasonable one," the Baroness said, smiling, "there will be no difficulty."

Agnes faced her a little defiantly.

"It depends upon what you call reasonable," she said. "Find out for me who it was that killed my husband, you or any one of you, and you shall have the letters."

Sydney Barnes smiled, and left off nervously tugging at his moustache. If this was not exactly according to his own ideas, it was, at any rate, a step in the right direction. Wrayson was evidently perplexed. The Baroness adopted a persuasive attitude.

"My dear girl," she said, "we don't any of us know who killed your husband. After all, what does it matter? It is terribly sad, of course, but he can't be brought back to life again. You have yourself to think of, and how you are to live in the future. Give me that packet. I will destroy it before your eyes, and I promise you that you shall have no more anxiety about your future."

The girl rose to her feet. The packet was already transferred to the bosom of her dress.

"I have told you my terms," she said. "Some of you know all about it, I dare say! Tell me the truth and you shall have the packet, any one of you."

Wrayson leaned forward.

"The truth is simple," he said earnestly. "We do not know. I can answer for myself. I think that I can answer for the others."

"Then the packet shall help me to find out," she declared.

The Baroness shook her head.

"It will not do, my dear girl," she said quietly. "The packet is not yours."

The girl faced her defiantly.

"Who says that it is not mine?" she demanded.

"I do," the Baroness replied.

"And I!" Wrayson echoed.

"And I say that it is hers—hers and mine," Sydney Barnes declared. "She shall do what she likes with it. She shall not be made to give it up."

"Mrs. Barnes," the Baroness declared briskly, "you must try to be reasonable. We will buy the packet from you."

Sydney Barnes nodded his head approvingly.

"That," he said, "is what I call talking commonsense."

"We will give you a thousand pounds for it," the Baroness continued.

"It's not enough, not near enough," Barnes called out hastily. "Don't you listen to them, Agnes."

"I shall not," she answered. "Ten thousand pounds would not buy it. I have said my last word. I am going now. In three days' time I shall return. I will give up the letters then her veil and her head had sunk a little.

"If I believed that there was anybody else," he continued, "I would go away and leave you alone. If I doubted for a single moment that I could make you happy, I would not trouble you any more. But you belong to me, Louise! You have taken up your place in my life, in my heart! I cannot live without you! I do not think that you can live without me! You mustn't try, dear! You mustn't!"

He held her unresisting hand, but her face was hidden from him.

"What it is that you fancy comes between us, I cannot tell," he continued, more gravely. "Only let me tell you this. We are no longer in any danger from Stephen Heneage. He has abandoned his quest altogether. He has told me so with his own lips."

"You are sure of that?" she asked softly

"Absolutely," he answered.

She hesitated for a moment. He remained purposely silent. He was anxious to try and comprehend the drift of her thoughts.

"Do you know why?" she asked. "Did he find the task too difficult—or did he relinquish it from any other motive?"

"I am not sure," Wrayson answered. "I met him the night before last. He was very much altered. He had the appearance of a man altogether unnerved. Perhaps it was my fancy, but I got the idea——"

"Well?" she demanded eagerly.

"That he had come across something in the course of his investigations which had given him a shock," he said. "He seemed all broken up. Of course, it may have been something else altogether. At any rate, I have his word for it. He has ceased his investigations altogether, and broken with Sydney Barnes."

The afternoon was warm, but she shivered as she rose a little abruptly to her feet. He laid his hand upon her arm.

"Not without my answer," he begged.

She shook her head sadly.

"My very dear friend," she said sadly, "you must always be. That is all!"

He took his place by her side.

"Your very dear friend," he repeated. "Well, it is a relationship I don't know much about. I haven't had many friendships amongst your sex. Tell me exactly what my privileges would be."

"You will learn that," she said. "in time."

He shook his head.

"I think not," he declared. "Friendship, to be frank with you, would not satisfy me in the least."

"Then I must lose you altogether," she murmured, in a low tone.

"I don't think so," he affirmed coolly. "I consider that you belong to me already. You are only postponing the time when I shall claim you."

"I think," he said, "that I should like to come in and see the Baroness."

"Not now," she begged. "We shall meet again at dinner-time."

"Where?" he asked eagerly.

"Madame desired me to ask you to join us at the Grosvenor," she answered, "at half-past eight."

"I shall be delighted," he answered, promptly. "You nearly forgot to tell me."

She shook her head.

"No! I didn't," she said. "I should not have let you go away without giving you her message."

"And you will let me bring you home afterwards?"

"We shall be delighted," she answered. "I shall be with Amy, of course."

He smiled as he raised his hat and let her pass in.

"The Baroness," he said, "is always kind."

He stood for a moment on the pavement. Then he glanced at his watch and hailed a cab.

"The Sheridan Club," he told the man. He had decided to appeal to the Colonel.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Wrayson was greeted enthusiastically, as he entered the club billiard room, by a little circle of friends, unbroken, except for the absence of Stephen Heneage. The Colonel came across and laid his hand affectionately on his arm.

"How goes it, Herbert?" he asked. "The sea breezes haven't tanned you much."

"I'm all right," Wrayson declared. "Had a capital time."

"You'll dine here to-night, Herbert?"

Wrayson shook his head.

"I meant to," he declared, "but another engagement's turned up. No! I don't want to play pool, Mason. Can't stop. Colonel, do me a favour."

The Colonel, who was always ready to do any one a favour, signified his willingness promptly enough. But even then, Wrayson hesitated.

"I want to talk to you for a few minutes," he said, "without all these fellows round. Should you mind coming down into the smoking-room?"

The Colonel rose promptly from his seat.

"Not a bit in the world," he declared. "We'll go into the smoking-room. Scarcely a soul there, Much cooler, too. Bring your drink. See you boys later."

They found two easy chairs in the smoking-room, of which they were the sole occupants. The Colonel cut off the end of his cigar and made himself comfortable.

"Now, my young friend," he said, "proceed"

Wrayson did not beat about the bush.

"It's about your daughter Louise, Colonel," he said. "She won't marry me!"

The Colonel pinched his cigar reflectively.

"She always was a most peculiar girl," he affirmed. "Does she give any reasons?"

"That's just what she won't do." Wrayson explained. "That's just why I've come to you. I—I—Colonel, I'm fond of her. I never expected to feel like it about any woman."

The Colonel nodded sympathetically.

"Well," he said, "then where's the trouble? You don't want my consent. You know that."

"Louise won't marry me," Wrayson repeated. "That's the trouble. She won't explain her attitude. She simply declares that marriage for her is an impossibility."

The Colonel sighed.

"I'm afraid," he murmured, regretfully, "that my daughter is a fool."

"She is anythnig but that," Wrayson declared. "She has somescruple. What it is I can't imagine. Of course, at first I thought it was because we were, both of us, involved in that Morris Barnes affair. But I know now that it isn't that. Heneage, who threatened me, and indirectly her, has chucked the whole business. Such danger as there was is over. I——"

"Interrupting you for one moment," the Colonel said quietly, "what has become of Heneage?"

"He's in a very queer way," Wrayson answered. "You know he started on hot to solve this Morris Barnes business. He warned us both to get out of the country. Well, I saw him last night, and he was a perfect wreck. He looked like a man just recovering from a bout of dissipation, or something of the sort."

"Did you speak to him?" the Colonel asked.

"I was with him some time," Wrayson answered. "His manner was just as changed as his appearance."

The Colonel was looking, for him, quite grave. His cigar had gone out, and he forgot to relight it.

"Dear me," he said. "I am sorry to hear this. Did he allude to the Morris Barnes affair at all?"

"He did," Wrayson answered. "He gave me to understand, in fact, that he had discovered a little more than he wanted to."

The Colonel stretched out his hand for a match, and relit his cigar.

"You believe, then," he said, "that Heneage has succeeded in solving the mystery of Barnes' murder, and is keeping the knowledge to himself?"

"That was the conclusion I came to," Wrayson admitted.

Salt Rheum of Ten Year's Standing Healed as if by Magic Hands Cracked so Could Not Work —Cures Effected by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

It does not take long for Dr. Chase's Ointment to prove its magic healing power. A single night is often sufficient to produce the most startling results.

Internal treatment for skin diseases is nearly always disappointing. By applying Dr. Chase's Ointment to the diseased parts relief is obtained almost immediately, and gradually the sores heal up and disappear. Here are two letters which will interest you:—

Mrs. Chas. Gilbert, Haystack, Placentia Bay, Nfld., writes:—"I was a sufferer from Salt Rheum for ten years, and had about despaired of ever being cured, so many treatments had failed. Reading of the wonderful cures effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment, I commenced using it, and was entirely cured by eight boxes. I want to express my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Ointment, and to recommend it to all sufferers."

Mr. Stanley Merrill, Delaware, Ont., writes:—"For years I was troubled with my hands cracking, often becoming so sore that I could hardly do any work. I got some of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and happily find that one or two applications of same to the affected parts make them well. I have had no trouble since using the ointment for sore hands."

MILD BLEND COFFEE

Drink Tea at Home and Coffee at the Hotels?

HERE IS THE ONLY SECRET OF GOOD COFFEE?

STRONG BLEND COFFEE

It is not because a French chef makes the coffee at the big hotels—nor only because they use expensive coffee—that it tastes so good. It IS because the chef makes the coffee the right way.

Boiling ruins coffee. Such coffee is always bitter and weedy, and the longer coffee is boiled, the less flavor it has. Boiling drives off the fine aroma and flavor and leaves in the grounds and woody fibre, which are responsible for so much indigestion among coffee drinkers.

Dalton's French Drip Coffee Pot means all the good of coffee and always good coffee—and it means that you can make a cup of delicious coffee with ⅓ less coffee.

We give this French Drip Coffee Pot absolutely free in order that you will be able to prepare

Dalton's French Drip Coffee

as it should be made. And Dalton's Coffee is worth making right. It is entirely different, and better,—a Coffee you can drink every day, as much as you like, without fear of the effects of ordinary Coffee. By our special processes of selecting the raw Coffee—in cleaning, blending, roasting and grinding it—we take out the bitter skin which lines the Coffee berry. It is this skin, roasted and ground up in ordinary Coffee, that produces the ill-effects so common to drinkers of ordinary Coffee.

When you make a cup of Dalton's French Drip Coffee, in a Dalton's French Drip Coffee Pot, you get the delights of the finest Coffees in the world—with none of the faults of ordinary Coffee.

This French Drip Coffee Pot Free with one tin each of Dalton's MILD and STRONG Coffee at 50c. a tin.

Dalton's Coffee is better, very much better, than ordinary Coffee and you can drink it for every meal, all the year round. Only—it should be made properly. This is why we make this special offer.

SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER

We feel so sure that you will find either Dalton's Mild Blend or Strong Blend French Drip Coffee just the Coffee that you have been looking for that we have authorized your Grocer to give you one of these handsome pots (worth $1.30) absolutely Free with the first purchase of a tin each of Mild and Strong Blend. You buy two 50c. tins of our Coffee—one of each blend—to give it a fair trial and we give you the means of testing it FREE, satisfied that you will use nothing but Dalton's French Drip Coffee thereafter.

PEACE IS THE THEME

Carnegie and Borden Guests at New York Banquet

EVERYTHING IS FRIENDLY

New York, Dec. 11.—Hon. Robert L. Borden, Premier of Canada, and Andrew Carnegie, were the guests at a dinner at the Hotel Astor Saturday night, given by the executive committee of the national committee for the celebration of the one-hundredth anniversary of peace among English-speaking people. The celebration is planned to take place in 1914-15. Mr. Carnegie is chairman of the national committee.

Speaking of Canada, Mr. Carnegie said that the greatest tribute that could be paid to ex-Premier Laurier was the fact that he, a Frenchman, had been able to govern the Scotch.

"The Frenchman that can do that," he said, "needs no other diploma. But now that Canada has a Scotch Premier I look for a great advance in that country. You, in Canada, and we in America, have grown closer to each other year by year, and that should be the way with the whole English-speaking race. I never did anything for the republic that I did not also do for Canada, both in the way of libraries and hero funds. I never found a man in Canada who was in favor of annexation to the United States, but I never found a man either who objected to Canada annexing the United States.

"When we were in trouble Canada sent us 40,000 men. If Canada is ever in trouble we will send you 400,000."

Here Mr. Carnegie, grasped Premier Borden's hand, and, holding it in his, nodded his head in emphasis of what he said. He added:

"Telegraph me when you want them. You know my address."

He closed by expressing a hope that the day would come when the whole world would be a brotherhood of man.

Mr. Borden talked of civil service reform in Canada.

"The example of the American civil service system," he said, "has been of great help to us. We intend to work from that plan in the establishment of our own civil service system. Canada and America will maintain the most friendly feelings for each other."

Oscar S. Straus was the only speaker who referred to the defeat of the reciprocity agreement by the Canadian people, which was the means of putting Premier Borden in office.

Mr. Straus said that the fact that the treaty did not go through would make no difference in the mutual feeling of good will between the two countries. He added that the laws which were bringing capital and labor together in Canada should be adopted by the United States, as they were fair all the way through.

John A. Stewart, chairman of the executive committee of the celebration, spoke of the plans for the coming observance. He said that the committee proposed to leave behind it as a memorial of the 100 years of peace, a building in this city dedicated to public uses and it was also proposed to erect a free memorial bridge over the Niagara River.

Before attending the dinner, Mr. Borden, in the afternoon, motored down to Oyster Bay as the guest of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, for luncheon. The Premier and the ex-President had a two-hour chat. It was their first meeting and both expressed considerable satisfaction at having met the other and expressed a hope of meeting soon again.

Mr. Borden, during his stay, also met Henry W. Taft, a brother of the President, with whom he had a pleasant interview.

Crushed Under Roof.

Hamilton, Dec. 11.—George McGregor, 61 years of age, and a lifetime resident of Watertown,, was crushed by the cave in of the roof of a building on which he was working Saturday afternoon, and died in the city hospital here shortly after being admitted to the institution. He was a brother of Dr. McGregor of Waterdown.

Neglected Colds Lead to Consumption

Unless a complete cure is effected the inflammation passes rapidly to the throat's bronchial tubes and then to the lungs.

You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or a new nose—hence consumption is practically incurable.

But Catarrh can be cured, except in its final and always fatal stage.

Catarrh sufferers, meaning those with colds, sore throat, bronchial trouble, etc., can all be cured right at home by inhaling "Catarrhozone."

In using Catarrhozone you don't take medicine into the stomach—you just breathe a healing piney vapor direct to the lungs and air passages.

Catarrhozone Guaranteed to Cure

The purest balsams and the greatest antiseptics are thus sent to every spot where catarrhal trouble exists—germs are killed, foul secretions are destroyed, nature is given a chance and cure comes quickly.

Colds and throat troubles can't last if the pure healing vapor of Catarrhozone is breathed—sneezing and coughing cease at once, because irritation is removed.

Use Catarrhozone to prevent—use it to cure your winter ills—it's pleasant, safe, and guaranteed in every case. 25c., 50c., and $1.00 sizes. Sold by all dealers. By mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

DON'T LET THAT COUGH ROB YOU OF SLEEP

You probably know all too well how it goes. Just as you doze off, the tickling starts in your throat. A gentle cough, still asleep. A harder cough, and then another. First thing you know, you're wide awake, coughing your head off.

A few nights of that and you're so worn out and weakened that the cough takes a tight grip on you.

But why endure it?

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne will soothe that exasperating tickling, loosen the phlegm and cure the inflammation of the mucous membrane. It not only stops the cough quickly, allowing you to get sound, refreshing sleep, but it goes to the root of the trouble and drives out the cold completely. Children willingly take Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne, because it tastes so good. Your Druggist has it or can quickly get it for you in 25c. and 50c. bottles. DISASTER IN MINE

Death List at Briceville, Tenn., Will Reach One Hundred

HEROIC RESCUE EFFORTS

Briceville, Tenn., Dec. 11.—Somewhere in the depths of the Cross Mountain Coal Mine probably 100 men lie dead to-day, while their sorrow-stricken families keep vigil at the mouth of their tomb, hoping against hope that their loved ones may be alive when rescuers reach them.

Eight torn and mangled bodies had been brought forth at nightfall when search was abandoned for the day. Outside of the immediate families of the entombed men; no one in this little mountain village believes that any living thing in the mine has survived the terrific explosion of coal dust that wrecked the workings Saturday morning.

Seven of those removed were identified yesterday as follows: Lee Polston, Eugene Ault, Taylor Ault, Roland Early, W. A. Farmer, Herman Sharp, James Foust.

The eighth was thought to be Alonzo Wood, a youth of 18 years, but his identity was not positively made.

For more than thirty-six hours every surviving miner in this region has toiled with no thought of food, sleep or pay, to remove the debris and force fresh air into the innermost recesses of the mine. Last night they practically had penetrated to the main entry head nearly three miles in. To-day they expect to be ready to work the cross-entries, in which the great mass of bodies undoubtedly were cast by the force of the blast.

Black-damp developed yesterday and ped progress for a time, but soon lent forces pushed dauntlessly on, some of them till they were carried out overcome by the noxious gases.

Thousands of the morbidly curious flocked into Briceville yesterday and crowded about the main entry of the mine. They saw nothing but the pitiable grief of the stricken families.

There is hardly a family in the entire Coal Creek Valley that has not felt the touch of death. The problem of caring for the widows and orphans will be a grave one, requiring immediate solution. Certainly Briceville will be unable to care for her living with most of her wage-earners numbered among the dead.

Last night food was scarce, but plentiful supplies are promised by tonight from Knoxville. So far there has been little physical suffering among families of those who lost their lives.

It has been impossible to get any authentic figures on the exact number of men in the mine when the explosion occurred. Mine officials have given out no statement, and it is impossible to get any check on the men who went to work Saturday morning. That it is more than a hundred it seems certain, and that all are dead seems almost as certain.

Work of rescue moved slowly yesterday, partly because most of the entombed men are believed to be two miles from the opening, and because of the deadly black-damp. The latter caused all work to be stopped for a time yesterday afternoon, but by nightfall it was resumed. Electrical devices for moving cars in the workings were shattered by the explosion, and debris cleared away in the tunnels is being hauled away by mule cars to the surface. Mine experts last night said it would be days before each lateral had been penetrated, and stating when all bodies would be found was but guesswork. It is in the laterals that the most bodies are expected to be found.

At least 10,000 persons visited this hamlet yesterday, and willing workers were many. George P. Chanler, president of the Tennessee Coal Co., is in charge of the relief work. He divided the men into gangs of fifty and sent each shift into the workings for two hours.

The throng of visitors is largely responsible for the exhaustion of food supplies in Briceville. All stores are bare of eatables and many went hungry last night. However, hunger will not be a long added horror to relatives of the victims, as Knoxville and other cities are rushing food supplies. All will be provided for by to-night.

Straining on the ropes that keep the throng back from the mine opening, are the relatives of the victims anxiously awaiting some word of life within the yawning mouth of the death trap. The situation becomes more tense as each car of debris is brought to the surface, for its driver might bring some word or with the debris might be a body of some loved one. The shrill whistle of the special train bringing coffins at two o'clock Sunday morning, brought another horror to the already dazed inhabitants of the little town. The special brought 175 boxes, and they were piled near the mouth of the mine. Only eight of these boxes were opened yesterday.

JOBS WERE ONLY MYTHS

Hon. Rudolphe Lemieux Testified in Fraud Trial

SAYS NAME WAS FORGED

Montreal, Dec. 11.—Sensational evidence was given by Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, K.C., ex-Postmaster-General and ex-Minister of Marine, in the police court before Judge Lanctot on Saturday, in the case of Lucien Jeannette and Felix Jette, who have been arrested charged with obtaining money under false pretences by selling Government positions at Ottawa.

Pierre Martel, 33 St. Ambroise street, St. Henri, appeared through his counsel, Severin Letourneau, K.C., against Jeannette and Jette.

Martel, in his disposition, states that he gave $115 to Jeannette and $145 to Jette, to purchase a good position in the Government at Ottawa.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, K.C., took the stand against the prisoners and was questioned by Mr. Letourneau. Mr. Lemieux swore that he did not know the prisoner, and so far as he knew, had received no letters from him. A number of telegrams produced were declared to be rank forgeries. The ex-Postmaster-General declared that they had neither been signed by him nor by any of his employes at Ottawa. The only persons authorized to sign correspondence, he said, were his private secretary, Mr. Evarette, and certain assistant secretaries in the Department.

Mr. Lemieux gave evidence to the effect that he had never authorized any party to offer positions under such circumstances.

The evidence showed that Martel got telegrams every few days from Ottawa, demanding money and assuring him that he would be placed by Mr. Lemieux in a short time.

Previous to the general elections, the telegrams were signed by Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Hon. R. Brodeur, Minister of Marine, and other Ministers, as well as two fictitious names, L. Anorle, K.C., and Albert Laurenrau. As soon as the new Ministers were sworn in, telegrams were received in Montreal from Ottawa, alleged to have been signed by Hon. Geo. E. Foster and others.

Mr. Lemieux stated that the swindle had been conducted on the wholesale plan, but that many dozen men who had been duped, had succeeded in getting their money back.

Owing to the absence of several important witness, the further hearing of the trial had to be postponed until Dec. 21.

IN PRISON CELLS.

McNamaras Are Initiated Into San Quentin Penitentiary.

San Quentin, Cal., Dec. 1.—The McNamaras yesterday entered San Quentin penitentiary, where James B. is condemned to spend the remainder of his life, for his confessed crime of murder, and John J., secretary of the International Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, is sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment for dynamiting.

Whirled from Los Angeles on a fast night train, the men were taken from it at sunrise yesterday, put on a little river steamer and landed two hours and a half later at San Quentin prison wharf on the shores of San Pablo bay. The shackles which bound them together on the boat were slipped off and they toiled up the prison hill beside Sheriff W. A. Hammel of Los Angeles county.

As the prison clock struck 10, John J. McNamara stepped over the threshold of the jail door, with his brother directly behind him. In five minutes James B. McNamara became convict No. 25,314 and John J. McNamara was No. 25,315. They were measured for jail clothing, photographed in two positions, given a carbolic tinctured bath, put into stripes, shavel and cropped and rephotographed within an hour, and turned over the John Murray, lieutenant of the yard, who took them to cell No. 18 in a stone tier looking out over the prison's upper yard, a great flower garden.

Keeping Pa on Hand.

"You may sit in the parlor to-night, pa."

"Isn't George coming to see Mary?"

"Yes, but it looks as though he's going to ask you to let him marry her, and we want to have you handy."

CONTRACTED HEAVY COLD

Was In Bed Two Months.

DOCTORS DID NOT SEEM TO DO HER ANY GOOD.

A cold, however slight, should never be neglected, for if it is not treated in time it will, in all possibility, lead to bronchitis, pneumonia, asthma, or some other serious throat or lung troubles.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains the lung healing virtues of the Norway Pine tree, which, combined with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines, makes it without a doubt the best remedy for all coughs and colds.

Miss N. McCumber, St. Martin's N.B., writes:—"In January last I contracted a heavy cold which kept me in bed nearly two months, and the doctors didn't seem to be able to do me any good. I tried several proprietary medicines, but all in vain. One day a friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and when I had taken three bottles I was completely cured, and I feel as well to-day as I ever did, and I am sure my lungs are once more sound, thanks to that wonderful remedy."

Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25 cents.

Two Minute Talks About PANDORA RANGE for Coal or Wood

How It Will Save Fuel For You

OF course the Pandora Range is a few dollars more than an ordinary range. But it will soon pay for itself in the fuel it will save for you.

The Pandora Flue System and Wide Fire Box, designed by our brainy stove experts, save about half a ton of coal per year, because they supply more air than the flue systems and fire boxes of ordinary ranges, causing better combustion of fuel.

The Steel Oven saves some more fuel, because it heats up more rapidly than a cast iron oven. The heavy Fire Clay Coating on the main bottom of range prevents any heat wasting towards the floor. It drives the heat back into the oven, and thus saves still more fuel.

But the big economizing feature is this: The draft for cooking on top of the range is also the draft for baking in the oven. The heat does double duty and your fuel bill is largely reduced.

Get the Pandora---the range that pays for itself. No other range is high-class enough for you.

SKOOG'S LAST BATTLE of WITS

A Secret Service Drama in Which a Counterfeiter Was Run Down and Made a Dramatic Exit

(Copyright, 1911, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

THE human wreck seated comfortably, but a trifle uneasily, near the door of the quick lunch room just off Fourteenth street, New York, had a curious look of avidity in his eyes, not for the apple pie he was munching, but for his fellow men. Plenty of this kind slipped into this particular lunch room during the course of the night, poor devils, hungry and chilled, who seemed to wonder the while they ate up their last fifteen cents whether, after all, they had not better have spent it for another drink.

It was, perhaps, because he looked at the rest of the customers so uneasily that Jimmy Brady, proudly in charge, kept a furtive but keen eye on him as he should slip away, forgetting what was due the house. Jimmy had no further intention than to collect the fifteen cents that was his right. He little suspected that, amidst his line of humdrum duty, he was becoming an actor in a United States Secret Service drama, one of those dramas of "trying to beat the law" which so often end in grimmest tragedy.

There were few customers in the place. Young Fry, of the medical college hard by, was there for his usual lunch with "Doc" Gibbons, his chief; there were one or two "droppers in" and at a stool at the counter was one of the "regulars," Mr. Brown, the photographer.

Brown seemed hungrier than usual that night and kept on ordering something more, and each time he did so the Derelict in the corner by the door seemed to become more and more impatient. But Brown was rich—at last, and so, apparently, was the Derelict, for just as Brown was climbing down from his stool the Derelict started shambling for the door.

Jimmy had him nailed in a moment.

"Fifteen cents," he said curtly but politely enough. There was just that hint of gruffness in the demand that showed Jimmy suspected there might be trouble.

The Derelict looked in a helpless sort of way at the rest of the customers who were eyeing him curiously, and tried once more to shuffle toward the door.

"Come on," said Jimmy, not very tenderly. "fifteen cents! Quit yer kiddin'."

"Fifteen cents for what?" said the man unsteadily, and tried to edge away.

Jimmy put his foot before the door.

"You know for what. We don't want no trouble. You had a cawfee, a egg sandwich and a hunk o' pie. Fifteen cents!"

"Where's the bill?" asked the man, at which "Doc" Gibbons laughed.

"Youse don't get no bill," said Jimmy. "Pay when y're served; them's the rules. Why can't you be a gentleman like anybody else?"

"Well, I want a receipt an' I'll pay," stammered the Derelict.

"You pay without no receipt, or I'll call a cop."

"Fetch your old cop," said the man, with a dash of something like defiance.

But Mr. Brown, the photographer, had not time to wait to see a drunken loafer thrown out of a lunch room, and so he pulled his meal ticket from his pocket and handed it to Jimmy to be punched. But before Jimmy could take it the Derelict, with a swiftness that might not have been expected from one so seedy and tired looking, snatched it from his hand.

"Thought you didn't give no receipts. What's this if it ain't a receipt?" he shouted, examining the ticket. "I'm as good as any one comes in here, and"——

But the rest of the remark was intercepted by the arrival of a policeman, who put his hand on the speaker's shoulder. The sight of the uniform seemed to take all the breath out of the man. He handed the ticket back and stood sullenly while Jimmy explained the trouble. While the explanation was going on the Derelict reached down in his pocket and threw a fifty cent piece on the counter. Jimmy, with his ruling commercial instinct, rang up the cash register and handed him thirty-five cents in change.

The accepted payment took the matter out of the policeman's hands temporarily, but the officer of the law turned to the man savagely.

"I ought to run you in for drunk and disorderly anyway," he said. "Don't you let me see you again. You've been loafing around here for the last ten days now. It's time to make yourself scarce."

The man, sulking, edged out of the door and shuffled along toward Fourteenth street, casting furtive glances over his shoulder. He went in the direction of the Bowery and kept moving until he disappeared in the side entrance of one of the dimly lighted buildings. Over the door was a sign, "Beds, 25 Cents."

"Here's for to-night," he said, throwing the quarter Jimmy had given him on the desk. "I'm goin' to get along."

The quarter was received without comment, so he continued his way to a room resembling one of the partitions set aside for bathers at the beach. Once inside, he picked up a threadbare satchel and took a small bundle and a bunch of keys from a secreted place in the mattress. Then he went out quietly so as not to disturb the snoring sleepers.

Out in the street again he looked around as if undecided where to go and turned his steps toward Sixth avenue. He drifted up town, passing policemen who eyed him suspiciously, especially as he neared the dwellings branching off to right and left. When he reached Thirty-first street he turned east. He got as far as Madison avenue, when he stopped and looked about him. There was not a soul in sight, so he cautiously slipped down into a basement. In the half light he drew out his keys and tried them one by one on the lock. He got the door opened just as he heard a step, and looking up saw a figure approaching through the darkness. It was the figure of a clean cut young man, fully dressed, except that his coat and collar were missing.

"That you, Joe?" said the man on the inside. "I've been watching for you. Follow me. It's a winding stair."

The two men closed the outside basement door and ascended quietly to the third floor, back, where the smell of tobacco smoke permeated the atmosphere and there was a dim light burning. Once inside, the man with the satchel threw off his coat and waistcoat and began getting rid of his other wearing apparel with a vengeance.

"We've got him, old man," he whispered excitedly. "He's known at the lunch room as Brown. I got a good look at his meal ticket."

"That clinches it, then," answered his companion. "Just as I thought—he's Brown the photographer."

"That explains everything. The rest ought to be easy. For heaven's sake give me a good cigar and get the tub ready. I've slept in these clothes for the last two weeks. I feel as if I never could get clean again. You slip out and notify the boss for me. There may be some important developments in the morning."

The following telegram was hurriedly written and despatched at the nearest station:—

"To Mr. John D. Kennedy,

"Shoreham Hotel, Washington, D. C.

"Arrived safely. Betty is better.

"GALBREATH."

The next morning two places at the breakfast table of Mrs. Henderson's boarding house in East Thirty-first street were occupied by Mr. James Saunders, an alert, interesting bond salesman, whose business kept him away so much, and Mr. Galbreath, his friend, who seemed to have arrived from nowhere. Mr. Galbreath had a very sore face from shaving. In reply to a casual inquiry from his neighbor, he said he was not a stranger in New York.

"Brown Is Skoog."

The telegram announcing the improvement in Betty's health was duly received by Mr. Kennedy at the Shoreham Hotel. Mr. Kennedy did not open it, much to the surprise of the boy who delivered it. He put it in his pocket and hurried down the street to Pennsylvania avenue, where, in the Treasury Department, basement lights were still burning. Here Mr. Kennedy delivered up the telegram which in turn was hurried to the top floor of the Treasury and into the hands of the Chief of the Secret Service who opened it hurriedly and at once compared it with a small code book he carried in his pocket.

Translated, the telegram read:—

"Brown is Skoog."

That was what "Betty is better" meant. The "arrived safely" was mere superfluity.

If Jimmy Brady, of the lunch room in New York, had seen the telegram he would not, even then, have known that the United States Secret Service had for some months been straining every nerve to get on the trail of "John Skoog," one of the most daring, skilful and successful of modern counterfeiters. All over the country there had been circulated a dangerous counterfeit $5 bill and an occassional 100 kroner (Swedish) bank note.

Investigation, by the elimination of all the well known counterfeiters who were out of prison, and by surveillance of those who had "done their time" and were not "working" at their old trade, had narrowed the suspicion down to John Skoog. Twelve years before Skoog had been arrested in Chicago for passing a counterfeit $20 bill which was so nearly perfect as to defy detection, until it fell under the eagle eye of Mr. W. H. Moran, the greatest of the Secret Service's corps of counterfeit money detectors.

There were peculiarities of workmanship about this bill that greatly interested Mr. Moran, but the Secret Service man had to let Skoog go on a legal technicality. Still, Mr. Moran had never forgotten the workmanship, and when, soon afterward, a new counterfeit $10 bill appeared in Denver, Moran promptly recognised, once more, the handiwork of John Skoog.

"That's Skoog's work," said Moran, decisively. "There's no doubt about it."

Detecting the Counterfeit.

It was easy to tell by comparison of the ten and twenty dollar notes that they were the work of the same artist in counterfeiting. They had the same almost perfect coloring, the same deceptive qualities and the minor, almost invisible, shortcomings that even the very best of counterfeiters cannot quite avoid. They were the product of expert photography.

"When there appears a good counterfeit, look for a good counterfeiter," is a watchword at the Secret Service offices which Mr. Moran translated into, "When you see a note like this look for John Skoog."

But Skoog had succeeded in dropping out of sight temporarily. For a time there was no further evidence of his work. Then counterfeit $5 bills bearing his unmistakable impress made their appearance in New York. At the same time there appeared counterfeit 100 kroner notes.

Skoog was a Swede, and from the lay of the land it appeared that he must be in New York. Warnings were sent out against the notes, and the most clever men in the Secret Service were sent out to "rope" or shadow Skoog. He had escaped vigilance for some time, until he was finally recognized and the work of keeping him shadowed at all hazards began. It was necessary to have legal proof that he was making or passing counterfeit money. The mere suspicion was not enough, and to make the job complete the Secret Service agents, under orders from Washington, were slowly, step by step, preparing their case against him.

The bond salesman at Mrs. Henderson's, who, apparently, was so busy selling bonds, was in reality sharing with other Secret Service men the task of keeping Skoog under constant surveillance. So far nothing tangible against him had been found except that he frequented the banking quarters of Swedes and the shops of money changers and that he seemed to spend a good deal of time in Brown's photograph establishment.

The alert bond salesman had seen him partake of a late bite several nights in succession at a certain dairy lunch room and buy a meal ticket there. It was at this point that the Secret Service man took up the trail.

It became the task of the apparent Derelict to keep in touch with Skoog and to learn all that could be gleaned from Brown's lunch room acquaintances. That was why the ragged, clean shaven young man disappeared from his usual haunts and became a Derelict, living in a cheap and dirty Bowery hotel, and loafing idly about without attracting any one's attention.

This watch on Skoog, alias Brown, had only begun when it was noticed that he was particularly friendly with Jimmy Brady (probably because he bought meal tickets) and that he was uncommunicative with others. The task of getting Jimmy to talk about his customer might arouse suspicion, especially if repeated to Skoog himself. Matters were at such a stage that the least mistake might warn the photographer he was watched. It was for this reason that the loafer had become disagreeable in the lunch room on that particular night, and that he had so timed his dispute that he would be arguing it out just as Skoog's meal ticket came up to be checked.

The idea was to get a look at the name. The name Brown on the ticket proved of the greatest immediate importance.

Here, then, was Skoog, an expert counterfeiter, parading under the name of Brown, and engaged in photographic work of some kind under this assumed name. Why did he find this necessary? Besides he slept a good part of the day and worked mostly at night time. Why? He was seen to visit money changers, though for some reason he could not be connected with giving them bad money. But why was he so interested in them and their business?

No one could be seen entering his shop to have pictures taken. Agents of the government who had visited Brown's establishment as customers never found Mr. Brown in, and when his office was not closed no one could be found to make arrangements for sittings. Evidently the taking of photographs was not the mainstay of the business.

But all these were not the kind of facts that the Secret Service wanted now. The question was to get some proof against Skoog, to catch him in the act of actually passing counterfeit money and finally get hold of his plant and supply. This was the task now being worked out by the Secret Service agents working in co-operation with young Mr. Saunders and his "friend," Mr. Galbreath, who were taking breakfast at Mrs. Henderson's boarding house.

Mr. Saunders, after breakfast had a very busy day ahead of him and soon found himself shadowing Skoog in the financial quarter. He saw Skoog enter the establishment of a Swedish banker and followed him in order to sell the Swede some bonds. He was in an adjoining room while "Mr. Brown" and the banker were engaged in a business conversation, and he could plainly see that a money transaction involving exchange if notes was in progress.

Peering over the top of a newspaper he saw his man put some United States notes into his pocket and prepare to leave. The time was surely ripe to strike, he thought, and he waited impatiently to have a few words with the Swedish banker. He saw the Swede suddenly become very busy over something and looking more closely guessed that the money changer was making a minute examination of the money he had received.

An excited cry from the room confirmed his suspicions. The Swede came bounding out holding a one hundred kroner note in his hand.

"Where's that man?" he cried.

Saunders felt for his revolver and followed along. In the street the crowd had swallowed Brown completely, and there was not trace of him. While the excitement increased Saunders felt a nudge at his side and saw Galbreath standing beside him.

"He's in there," he said, pointing to another money changer's across the street. "Are we all ready for the pinch?"

"We've got to be ready," yelled the transformed derelict. "That Swede money changer has given the cat's out of the bag."

It was the Secret Service men who had nearly defeated their own purpose, for it was their circular describing the counterfeit 100 kroner note that had warned the Swede banker that he had taken in a counterfeit and which caused him to yell out the alarm.

There lay the evidence that Brown, alias Skoog, had passed a counterfeit. It was, indeed, high time, as Galbreath said, "to make the pinch."

But the trail was ended. The drama in which Jimmy Brady of the lunch room had played so important a part, not knowing, was at an end. For even as Galbreath and the derelict rushed across the street to "get their man" there was a revolver shot, and when the Secret Service men got to the place John Skoog was dead, with a bullet through his head.

A few hours afterward the Chief in Washington received another mysterious telegram by the same circuitous route. It read:—

"Betty's dead. She killed herself to avoid arrest."

"Call the other men off on that Skoog case," was the order issued by the Chief. Galbreath and his partner, no longer either the derelict or the bond salesman, dropped into the lunch room near Fourteenth street that night.

"Where's that receipt for my bill?" asked Galbreath.

"I guess that rummy's in jail," said Jimmy Brady; "he hasn't been around since.

"He won't be," said the derelict, as they bade Jimmy goodby.

"I Ought to Run You in for Drunk and Disorderly, Anyway."

CHRISTMAS GREENS THAT CANT CATCH FIRE

Fireproofing Has Eliminated the Danger of Trees and Wreaths Being Ignited by Flaming Candles

SANTA CLAUS and New York's Board of Fire Underwriters had a set-to last Christmas, with the result that old St. Nick shoved a lot of his Christmas trees into his sack and stopped on the Jersey shore just long enough to glower at a city where sentiment was so far forgotten that a fire insurance policy could be cancelled if some fragrant spruce tree caught fire from flaring candle flames and destroyed property in its vicinity. There was, too, something of a sneer on his jolly face as he peered into the big shops and saw garlands of asbestos leaves, at forty cents the yard, trying to make things look like the woodland scenes of former Decembers.

This season the Bureau of Forestry will certify how many Christmas trees have been felled by the woodsman's axe, but—Santa having just sprung the surprise upon Father Knickerbocker—there isn't any bureau to enumerate the Christmas trees that, all redolent of balsam sap, come out of American factories, and so true to life that an Adirondack guide, even before he pulled the cork from his foot warming bottle, would swear he felt and saw a native grown spruce and nothing less.

How St. Nick conjured up this new Christmas tree nobody who has to do with arboriculture knows. To all appearances it is a well grown spruce, with needles that differ from those produced by nature only in the fact that they don't drop off and cannot be ignited. A blazing match held in a branch of the new Christmas tree will have no other effect than slightly to blacken the needles with smoke. They cannot be made to burn, even though real resin has been used to impart the true balsam aroma to the trees.

Germany is responsible for suggesting ideas by which a non-inflammable spruce tree could be made to order so that Santa Claus and the children might enjoy themselves without restrictions on the part of fire departments and insurance companies, but America has developed the ideas and invented the process of manufacture.

New York's Board of Fire Underwriters has examined the tree, felt its foliage and sniffed around its resinous branches. The underwriters have applied the torch—so to speak—satisfied themselves that the new American Christmas tree is all that a safe and sound festival tree should be, and signified their approval of its use.

The duties of the Board did not end here, however. There were all sorts of natural foliage to be submitted to fire tests and passed on as Christmas decorations. Box and beech, holly, laurel, ivy and other offerings of the forest to the holiday celebration now make the appearance after having undergone a treatment that has changed naught of their outward aspect and yet has rendered them fireproof. Old St. Nicholas will not jeer at New York's festoons and wreaths this season. His eyes will behold and his nostrils smell the familiar boughs of the forest in hues of midsummer green and autumnal scarlet and orange, while asbestos foliage will have rivals more nearly akin to nature and quite as safe from danger of fire.

For some seasons Germany has sent to us preserved plants that have been rendered non-inflammable by some process known abroad. Ever since the new fire and insurance laws went into operation nearly a year ago in New York experiments have been made in this country looking toward the preservation and fireproofing of native foliage and shrubs, so that none of the customary woods of the forest might be lost from holiday embellishments while these would comply with the requirements of the New York Fire Department. The result has been entirely satisfactory and consignments of thick ropes of box and holly are already being delivered to establishments that will sell them to householders to use as festoons for windows, mantels and doorways. Fastened in the holly foliage are bunches of artificial berries that vie with real berries in crimson beauty, while Christmas wreathes of holly come already made in different sizes, so that all one has to do is to add the customary scarlet bow and hang the wreath in its place.

Neither Fifth avenue nor Bronx flat has been forgotten in the preparation of bright Christmas adornments. Symmetrical crimson and bronze and green boughs of beeches from Maryland are preserved for decorating large spaces; in accord with a season when baskets will occupy a prominent place among decorations of every sort, there are to be had graceful baskets filled with gleaming holly and with big red bows on the tops of the handles.

grace of nature from basket and festoon; box, from New England, is tied in ropes to drape portal and window, an eloquent reminder of bygone Christmas Days and subtly suggestive of the presence of ancestral spirits. Laurel and pine, smilax and many another graceful vine, splashed with vivid crimson of poinsettias and the pure white of that snow flower known as the Christmas rose—these, and others have passed through that mysterious process which stays the ravages of time and fire and retains to branch and blossom its original color and form.

One particularly attractive ornament in which box and holly berries are show together consists of a ball shaped net, constructed in an open mesh of box foliage, sprinkled with holly berries. This fits over electric light globes of different sizes and permits the light to filter through in a glowing warmth of Christmas cheer.

The Fire Department of New York will breathe a sigh of relief as it sits back this season, undisturbed by the thought that at any moment men may be called to bear some hapless child from a flaming Christmas tree to a hospital ward or death chamber. The sight of visiting thousands, thronging the streets of New York to enjoy its wonderful festival display, will carry with it no haunting fear least overarching garlands might fall in a fiery heap upon panic stricken crowds.

The manufactured Christmas tree has come none too soon to suit the consumer and the fire department. Aside from the fact that the manufactured tree lasts from season to season, nearly every New York wholesale dealer in Christmas trees was short seven to eight thousand trees last season, and persons who demanded large trees generally had to be contented with smaller ones. The reason given for this shortage was that cutters had to go so far to obtain supplies.

The Christmas tree industry has gradually pushed up across the Canadian border, and for the last four years New York has brought its balsams from Canada—for New York city almost exclusively uses balsams—and distance from market makes the trees more expensive. Necessity is not the only motive for procuring Canadian trees; our neighbor's balsams have a deeper color and heavier foliage than our own.

Thirty-nine feet is the record height of a New York Christmas tree, but thirty-five feet is reckoned a big tree, and the favorite size in Manhattan is eight feet.

Just why New York should demand balsam and other towns take spruce is explained by dealers in the fancy of New York for the best, without respect to cost, while out-of-town places consider the price of a tree.

Associations for the conservation of forests in New York, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont have protested against the cutting of natural Christmas trees and welcome the artificial one with joy. They feel that as the industry of making trees to order grows forests will grow with it, undepleted by an annual removal of some four million balsams, firs and spruces, and with the preservation of natural boughs and shrubbery, and the possibility of using the same garlands over and over again, they can see a proportionate retention of undespoiled shrubbery.

Holly, too, has become very scarce, and laws regulating the cutting of it are stringent. New York gets its holly from North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware, and pays $10 to $12 a bundle for it, wholesale, while retailers receive, according to its thickness, from ten to twenty-five cents a yard for holly ropes.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

GOD'S WRATH ALIKE TO ALL SINNERS

Eternal Life Is Only For Those Who Obey the Heavenly Father.

Los Angeles, December 10th.—Pastor Russell preached twice here today. One of his discourses, on "The Wrath of God," was very different from what some of his hearers would have expected. Many of his great congregation were evidently convinced of the truth of his position.

The committee of seven (including Pastor Russell) appointed by the International Bible Students Association to investigate and report on missions in foreign lands, have reached here. Pastor Russell is the chairman of the Committee, which is to sail from San Francisco Wednesday next. Great interest is being manifested everywhere in this Committee and the honest report respecting foreign missions which its personnel guarantees. Reports from the missions have been so conflicting that the missionary funds have considerably fallin off, and those who give their dimes, as well as those who give their thousands, are awaiting the report with keen interest—hoping, of course, it may be every way favorable, yet perhaps fearing a little the reverse of this. Next to the Pastor in prominence on the Committee is General Hall, U.S.A. Besides, there are three merchants, one doctor, and Prof. Robison, Secretary.

His texts were, "The wrath of Gol is revealed from heaven against all unrighteousness"; "for all unrighteousness is sin." (Romans i, 18; I. John v, 17.) When the Pastor pointed out that his texts declare a present revelation of Divine wrath and not a future one, his audience "sat up and took notice." The wrath of God is revealed, the Pastor emphasized, and we see it all about us. Every cemetery witnesses to it, so does every coffin, every hearse, every piece of crepe, every doctor's sign. Pain, suffering, speaks of disease; disease of decay; decay of death working in the human family and bringing all, rich and poor, bond and free, to the grave, the great prison house, from which none can escape until the resurrection, at the coming of Messiah.

Death, the penalty of sin, the manifestation of God's wrath against sin, began to be revealed six thousand years ago when our first parents disobeyed the Divine command. Every day and every hour since, the world has been witnessing that God's wrath is against it, that the death penalty is being inflicted. As the Scriptures declare, the world has been under a Reign of Sin and Death. However sympathetic and loving the Heavenly Father has been, He has allowed stern Justice to mete out this penalty against every member of our race. He is thus giving us a great lesson on the exceeding sinfulness of sin—its pernicious, injurious influence and results under Divine Law. He wishes this lesson to be so thoroughly impressed upon our race that when in due time He shall bring in relief we will never forget the lesson, to all eternity, but will hate sin and dread it as our worst foe.

We may understand the Apostle to lay special emphasis upon the word "all" in our text—"The wrath of God is revealed against all unrighteousness"—not merely against great sins and gross violence, but against every form of sin—even the slightest. Thus the Scriptures declare that God's Law is one, and that a violation of it in one point means the violation of the entire Law. To break one command would be sin and merit the death penalty; and to break all the commandments would be sin and merit the death penalty. Eternal life is provided only for those who are perfect and who maintain that perfection and harmony with God by full obedience to the Divine Law in every particular.

Do not misunderstand me to teach that it makes no matter whether one be a gross sinner or only a minor offender. In one way it will matter, and in another way it will not. Adam's transgression was, in some respects, a minor one, as compared to that of his son Cain. Adam stole and ate a forbidden apple, and the penalty was death—the very strongest penalty of God's Law. If he had murdered his wife the penalty would have been the same—death—not eternal torment.

Whatever Adam's transgression, Divine Law would have hindered him from ever again coming back to God. It would have cut him off from everlasting life, and he would have need of a Saviour, just the same for one sin as for another. Murder would have been sin, and the disobedient eating of the apple was sin, and sin cannot be condoned by the Divine Law. It required a Redeemer, and to be the Redeemer He must suffer death, the penalty that was against Father Adam.

Now notice the case of Cain. He was shapen in iniquity; in sin did his mother conceive him; the condemnation upon our first parents extended to him; he was born with a fallen nature, he was born under the death sentence. The killing of his brother Abel did not increase the penalty, which stood the same—death—cutting off from life. "The wages of sin is death"; "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

There would have been no Message sent to mankind exhorting to righteousness and to turn from sin had God not intended to redeem man by the death of His Son; and redeeming them means to give each and all of the human family another opportunity, another trial, another judgment—to test their worthiness or unworthiness of everlasting life—to prove to what extent their acquaintance with sin and its penalty has taught them the great lesson respecting the sinfulness and undesirability of sin and the sureness of its penalty to death.

Aforetime, for four thousand years God sent no Message to the world in general—until Jesus came and died, the Just for the unjust, and thus made possible the release of mankind from the death sentence—a resurrection from the dead. The only exception to this rule was God's Covenant with Israel, under which they tried to gain eternal life by keeping the Law, and became a great example of the fallen man's inability and of the need of the Saviour.

For more than eighteen centuries this Message has been going forth—namely, that God has provided for the race a redemption from the original death sentence, and that there is to be a "resurrection of the dead, both of the Just and the unjust." All mankind who hear this Message are thereby warned that every act of the present life will have its weight, either in the uplifting or in the degrading of his own character, and thus have a bearing upon his future interests. It is in view of this future opportunity for life or death everlasting that our conduct in the present time has a bearing.

Those who have the hearing ear and the eyes of understanding opened, discern, as the Apostle says, that in God's estimation all unrighteousness is sin—however great or small Those who now accept God's invitation are informed that if they make a consecration of their lives to follow in Jesus' footsteps, God will deal with them as with new creatures, and no longer impute to them their share of Adam's condemnation, but treat them as having passed from death condemnation to life justification.

Moreover, their flesh will be reckoned as dead; full arrangements will be made for the covering over of all their unintentional weaknesses, and their judgment in God's sight will be according to their will or intention. If their intentions are perfect they will be counted as perfect through the merit of their Redeemer and Advocate. But St. Paul admonishes the Church, saying, "If we sin wilfully, after that we have received a knowledge of the truth," "and have tasted of the good Word of God and the powers of the Age to come and have been made partakers of the Holy Spirit, it is impossible to renew us again to repentance"—wilfulnessness in the matter would seal our case, however small the transgression—just as it sealed Adam's fate with his minor transgression.

But let us not forget that the Apostle limits this possibility of sin—the sin unto death—to the Church—to the Spirit begotten ones. These receiving their share of the great Atonement sacrifice of Jesus, and failing to conform to the Divine requirement, come under the Divine penalty a second time, and their will be the Second Death, from which there will be no resurrection, no recovery.—Compare Hebrews vi, 4-6 and x, 26-31.

It should be clear to us then that in harmony with our text, the whole world is now under the wrath of God, which came upon the race through the disobedience of our first parents; and the only ones who have escaped from that wrath and gotten back into harmony with God are the saintly few, begotten of the Holy Spirit. The escape of these from Divine wrath or the death sentence is not actual, but by faith. They reckon themselves as having passed "from death unto life."

As for the remainder of the world, they are not thus reckoned, for they are yet in their sins, still children of wrath and experiencing the penalty of sin. The world will continue under these conditions until the completion of the election of the Church, and then the Redeemer, who now occupies the position of Advocate toward the Church, will assume a new Office; He, with His Church associated with Him, will become the great Mediator between God and men. He will mediate for Israel and for all the families of the earth—appropriating the merit of His sacrifice for the sins of the whole world, even as in the beginning of this Age He imputed this merit to the Church for the covering of her sins.

Thenceforth, as soon as the great High Priest shall have sealed that New Covenant for the world, and the Father shall have accepted it the sins of the world will be cancelled. That is to say, death, the wrath of God revealed against all unrighteousness for six thousand years, will immediately be cancelled as respects all who will then avail themselves of the privilege and enter into the New Covenant relationship. The glorious Mediator of that New Covenant will bind Satan for a thousand years and scatter all the ignorance and superstition which now darken the human mind and cause misapprehensions of the Divine Word and character. Simultaneously He will let loose the blessed influences of truth and enlightenment and the "whole earth shall be filled with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God."

Thenceforth the wrath of God will no longer be revealed against any on account of Adam's transgression. It will no longer be necessary to be sick or in pain, or dying. On the contrary, all may be making good, rapid progress up, up, up out of weakness and dying conditions, back toward the full perfection of human nature which Adam had before he sinned, when he was in the image of his Creator. There will still be the marks of the wrath upon mankind, the weakness and imperfections of the human flesh. These marks will not be fully blotted out until toward the close of the thousand years of Messiah's reign. This agrees fully with St. Paul's words, "That your sins may be blotted out when times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord." (Acts iii, 19.) It is therefore one thing to have our sins forgiven and to realize that God is no longer angry with us but reconciled, and it is quite another thing to know our sins are blotted out.

The sins of the Church are forgiven the moment we are accepted of God through Christ and made partakers of the Holy Spirit and are styled children of God and heirs. But the marks the blemishes of sin, continue with us as long as we have our present, imperfect bodies. This to the Church will mean that the blotting out of their sins will be in death, because the Church will be awakened in the resurrection perfect, "spotless," "without blame," "irreprovable." The Apostle describes this resurrection as the Chief Resurrection, saying, "It is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown an animal body, it is raised a spiritual body."—I. Corinthians xv 44; Rev. xx, 6.

If we have seen what has constituted the Divine wrath as it has been revealed for six thousand years, we will be the better prepared to understand what to look for in respect to any future manifestations of Divine wrath—"wrath to come." We are to clearly distinguish between the wrath of a good man and the wrath of a bad man, and how these would manifest themselves; and, similarly, we should be able to discern between the wrath of God and the wrath of the devil. The wrath of God, as exhibited to us for six thousand years on the pages of history, has been a just dealing—the abandonment to destruction of those who are not worthy of everlasting life, by reason of disobedience to Divine Law.

The redemption accomplished for these through the death of Jesus will eventually be gloriously worked out, and give to every man a full opportunity of recovery, harmony with God and everlasting life. The reason why God makes this provision for redemption is because only one man sinned, wilfully and intelligently. All the remainder of his children were "born in sin" and under the death sentence. The redemption therefore is in order that every individual may have an opportunity for reaching a decision as to obedience or disobedience.

The lesson of sin and death is taught first, in the few years of the present life, and the marks of sin will go over till the next Age. Those marks will be deepened in proportion as any in the present life live below the plane of their knowledge of the Divine standard and in wilful opposition thereto. While being instructed respecting the other side of the question—the Divine requirements and the blessings attending them, mankind will be given an individual trial or test, to demonstrate whether the great lesson has been rightly learned. The willing and obedient will get the reward of eternal life, the unwilling and disobedient will receive the final penalty, the Second Death. It will be final in that God will make no provision for rescue from that Second Death. It will be "everlasting destruction."—II. Thess. i, 9.

As the wrath of the present time is the Divine death sentence upon the race, so "the wrath to come" will be the "second death" sentence, which will fall upon all who sin wilfully, after they have come to a knowledge of the truth. With this "wrath to come," in this complete sense, may be included inferior manifestations of Divine wrath; for instance, such as came upon the Jews in the end of their Age—destroying them as a nation—and such as is to come upon Christendom in the end of this Age.

Both of these are styled "days of wrath," "days of vengeance." The Divine vengeance which overthrew the Jewish polity took cognizance of the fact that as a nation they had enjoyed great privileges for centuries. It took note of the fact that they had not lived up to their light and privileges and were therefore deserving of a corresponding national chastisement, which was administered to them. Of that time our Lord declares, "These be the days of vengeance, that all things written in the Law and in the Prophets concerning them should be fulfilled." Justice owed them those experiences, and the account has been squared.

In the end of this Age the "wrath" will come upon Christendom, because Christendom in general has not appreciated and used, as it might have done, the wonderful privileges, blessings and enlightenments showered upon her. She has the more responsibility because of her great light and privileges, and so much the more will be the claim of Divine Justice against her, which will be settled in the great "time of trouble" with which this Age will end. (Daniel vi, 1.)

It was not until the year 340 that Pope Julius I. fixed Dec. 25 as Christmas day. Previous to that year many different days were observed, such as the 6th of January and the 19th of March.

An Innovation in Oil Heaters

The Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater, with its drums enameled in turquoise, is an ornament to any room, whether in the country or city home.

No home is quite complete without a Perfection Oil Heater. It is a necessity in the fall and spring, when it is too warm to start the regular heating apparatus, and too cool to be without heat. In the midst of winter it is often convenient as an auxiliary heater, as there are always some cold corners in a house.

The enameled heater always presents a nice appearance, as the enamel will not tarnish or burn off. It is not an "enamel paint," but it is the same as the enamel of your cooking utensils.

The Perfection is the most reliable and convenient portable heating device you can find. An automatically-locking flame spreader prevents turning the wick high enough to smoke.

TURNING OF THE TIDE

Liberals Will Revise Progressive Reforms and Sweep Country

PLEASED WITH MAJORITY

Woodstock, Dec. 12.—N. W. Rowell, K.C., the Liberal leader, gave a press representative the following statement at 9.30 o'clock last night: "I look upon the splendid majority given me by North Oxford—a majority larger than has been given even a local man in years—as a great compliment to me. I look upon it as an endorsement by the electors of North Oxford of myself as the leader of the Liberals of Ontario.

"The returns so far received indicate a substantial number of Liberal gains, but there will also be several severe losses, the apparent net result being a gain of a few seats to the Liberal party. The Liberal party went into the contest more or less demoralized after their defeat of Sept. 21, without organization and without literature.

"I take the result as a clear indication that the tide has turned, and, if we continue, as we will, our propaganda in the interests of progressive measures are expressive of the best sentiments of Liberalism, both in the Legislature and in the country during the next four years, we have every reason to expect that the country will by that time have wearied of the autocratic and unprogressive character of the present administration and will endorse our progressive policy.

"I believe we may look forward with confidence to a great revival in progressive reforms and that in the next four years the province will return the Liberal party to power, thus giving effect to these progressive measures. I deeply regret the loss from the Legislature of some of the best members of the Liberal contingent. On the other hand, we will welcome those strong men who have been elected to join the Liberal ranks."

He Appreciates It.

Toronto, Dec. 12.—Sir James Whitney, when asked last night to give an opinion on the election result, was in prime good humor. His brief statement was as follows:

"At this moment, it is difficult for me to choose proper language in which to express the heartfelt appreciation of my colleagues and myself, and our thanks for this magnificent endorsation by the people of Ontario of the course pursued by us. The endorsement is phenomenal indeed. It will certainly encourage the Government to continue its best efforts for the advancement and prosperity of the people of the province, who have given us such signal evidence of their confidence."

Dr. Pyne thanked his supporters for electing him to the Legislature for the fifth time.

"I am going to stick to you," he said, "because you have stuck to me. I hope we will never see a Liberal elected in Toronto. We did not get as large a vote as last time, but still there was a smaller vote polled, and the other fellows got almost nothing. In proportion this was just as great a victory as that of former elections. I thank you one and all for electing me, and I hope you won't regret it."

"I feel quite encouraged over the improvement of our fighting strength in the Legislature," said F. G. Inwood, provincial organizer, when asked for his opinion of the election results in the province. "The Liberals are now able to put up a better opposition than before," he continued. "Before we had only seventeen seats, to-night we are given twenty-two, with one Labor, Studholme of Hamilton. This will give us twelve more votes in the House, counting the Labor man, as a change either way counts two votes."

Studholme's Victory.

Hamilton, Dec. 12.—Allan Studholme (Labor), East Hamilton; Col. J. S. Hendrie (Conservative), West Hamilton; J. T. H. Regan (Conservative), South Wentworth, and Dr. McQueen (Liberal) North Wentworth, were the candidates elected in the County of Wentworth at yesterday's elections. Col. Hendrie is the only one of the four whose election was conceded before the polling yesterday.

The result in South Wentworth was a distinct surprise, as it was thought that Dan Reid, the Liberal candidate, would win out on account of the presence of Wm. Barrett, the Labor candidate, in the constituency.

The most important victory of the lot was, of course, that of Allan Studholme, the Labor man, who defeated Controller Cooper by a majority of 974. The Labor candidate had big majorities in three of the five wards.

The labor people were naturally elated over Studholme's splendid victory, and celebrated the event last night with a big parade through the principal streets of the city, led by the band of the 13th Regiment.

Dull in Toronto.

Toronto, Dec. 12.—Toronto yesterday refused to break through the hidebound conservatism with which she has clothed herself from infancy, and elected every candidate of the Whitney Government to the Legislature.

The election was remarkable only for one thing—its lack of interest, its apathy. Not one of the political organizers, who are in closer touch with conditions than anyone else, expected for one moment to get out a normal vote, because the indifference of the electorate was very marked from the beginning and until the close of the campaign. But when the dull, drizzling rain set in in the afternoon, to cap sheaf the whole affair, it was known the vote would be extremely light.

Germany's Spy Scare.

London, Dec. 12.—A special Berlin despatch to The Daily Express indicates that the trial of Max Schults at Leipsic, on the charge of obtaining information about German land and naval armaments for England, has caused a general scare throughout Germany.

The German newspapers bitterly comment on the liberal use of English gold to obtain coveted information.

It is reported that Germany has decided to establish a naval base at Emden, on the North Sea, and will build a harbor there for battleships and cruisers. It is said also that Germany is determined to establish a permanent garrison of 12,000 troops at Varley.

The Express correspondent says the German press is jubilant because, in the policy of fighting fire with fire, Germany has been able to obtain important information, but vigorously protests against members of English society taking part in spying, because their love of sport impels them to court danger.

The spy mania, however, is not confined to Germany; a constant watch is being kept by the British authorities on Germans in important English garrison towns and naval ports.

Palpitation of the Heart.

Nervous Prostration, Sleeplessness and Dizzy Spells.

A Long Standing Case Cured By MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn, and miserable, their nerves become unstrung, and they cannot sleep.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. Mr. Peter Halstad, Tilley, Alta., writes—"I take great pleasure in writing you a few lines to tell you what your Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had a long standing case of palpitation of the heart, nervous prostration, sleeplessness and dizzy spells. I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and they did me so much good I continued their use until I had used several boxes, and they restored me to health again. They are a great remedy, and I recommend them to all my friends."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Darrow Denies Bribery.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 12.—"Lockwood's testimony does not bring Clarence S. Darrow legally into the case," said District Attorney Fredericks. "It is hearsay and nothing more. We will proceed with prosecutions only on evidence which will stand in court of law."

"Will you say if you have such evidence?" he was asked.

"We have not," he said, and then corrected himself. "We have other evidence, but it is not sufficient," he said.

When apprised of the testimony in the Franklin hearing, Attorney Darrow said: "Whatever Franklin and Lockwood said, I know nothing at all about it. I had nothing to do with bribing any jurors in any way."

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Big receipts northwest, both sides of the International line, exerted pressure on-day on the market for wheat. Largely as a result the close was 2-8c to 3-8c under Saturday night. Corn showed a net loss of 2-8c to 1-2c, and oats a decline of 1-8c to 1-4c. At the end of the day hog products were down 5c to 10c to 12 1-2c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d higher to ⅝d lower than yesterday on wheat, and ¼d to ⅜d lower on corn. Buda Pest closed ½c higher on wheat, Paris ½c to ⅝c higher, Antwerp ⅝c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Dec. 11.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable was quiet and the prices bid in some cases were 1½d to 2d lower. The outside demand for corn and oats continues fairly good at steady prices. The local demand for flour was better, but the export trade is still very slow and the prices bid are away below millers' views. In mill feed an active business is doing. Cheese is firm and butter strong with a good demand. Eggs are active and firm. Barrelled pork has declined 50c to $1.50 per barrel and compound lard ½c per lb., while abattoir fresh killed hogs have advanced 25c per cwt.

Corn—American No. 2 yellow, 82c.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 48c to 48¼c; No. 3, 46¼c to 47c; extra No. 1 feed, 47c to 47¼c; No. 2 local white, 47c; No. 3 local white, 46c; No. 4 local white, 45c.

Buckwheat—No. 2, 62c to 63c.

Barley—Manitoba feed, 64c; malting, 90c to $1.

Hay—No. 2, per ton, car lots, $15 to $15.50.

Cheese—Finest westerns, 14½c to 14¾c; finest easterns, 14c to 14¼c.

Butter—Choicest creamery, 30½c to 31½c; seconds, 29c to 30c.

Eggs—Fresh, 40c; selected, 29c to 30c; No. 1 stock, 25c to 26c.

Potatoes—Per bag, car lots, $1.25 to $1.27½.

Hogs—Dressed, abattoir killed, $9.25 to $9.50; country, $8.25 to $8.75.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Dec. 11.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 233 cars, comprising 3492 cattle, 2078 hogs, 3166 sheep and lambs, 63 calves and 28 horses.

Exporters.

E. L. Woodward bought 150 export steers, 1175 to 1280 lbs. each, at $6.15 to $6.20 per cwt.

Butchers.

Xmas cattle sold from $6 to $7; good, $5.75 to $6; medium, $5.25 to $5.70; common, $4.50 to $5.15; cows, $3 to $5.25; canners, $1.75 to $2.25.

Milkers and Springers.

Milkers and springers sold at steady prices at $40 to $75 each.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves sold from $4 to $8 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep sold from $3 to $3.75 with a few at $4; lambs, at $5 to $5.35.

Hogs.

Hogs, fed and watered, sold at $6.60 per cwt.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Dec. 11.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Dec. 9, were 1980 cattle, 1950 sheep and lambs, 2400 hogs and 250 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale were 1000 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 1100 hogs and 100 calves.

Altho the supply of cattle was larger than a week ago by 200 to 300 head, yet a stronger feeling prevailed in the market and prices for butchers' stock showed an advance of 25c per cwt. This was attributed to the scarcity of really choice steers and heifers, there abing none on the market. There was a good enquiry and $5.35 to $5.50 per cwt. could have been easily realised for the same, as $5.25 to $5 was paid for good cattle and the supply of this grade was none too plentiful.

Common and inferior stock was abundant and prices for such were easier, with the demand limited, owing to the unfavorable weather prevailing for this season of the year and the fact that canners are well supplied for the present.

There were a few very good bulls on the market, which weighed from 1500 to 1800 lbs., and they sold for $4.75 to $5, and lighter ones of good quality brought $4.75 to $4.50. A feature of the trade was the demand from Quebec, which bought several carloads of cows and bulls, mixed, at $4.50 to $4.75 per cwt. The gathering of buyers was fairly large and, considering the unseasonable weather a very fair trade was done.

A strong feeling continues to prevail in the market for hogs and prices since this day week show a further advance of 25c to 15c per cwt., on account of the small supplies coming forward, for which the demand is good from packers and higher prices are anticipated in the near future. Sales of selected lots were made at $6.65 to $6.80 per cwt., weighed off the cars, and heavy fat and sows sold for $1 per cwt. less.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for sheep or lambs, the undertone being strong on account of the continued good demand from butchers for supplies and the falling off in receipts. Calves of good to choice quality were very scarce, for which there is considerable enquiry and good prices would be paid for the same.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $5.25 to $5.35; medium, $5 to $5; common, $3.50 to $4.50; canners, $3.50 to $3; choice cows, $5.25 to $5.50; medium, $4.50 to $5; bulls, $5.25 to $5. $5.50; medium, $4.50 to $5; bulls, $5.25 to $5. Milkers, choice, each, $75; common and medium, $50 to $60; springers, $50 to $60. Sheep, ewes, $3.75 to $4; bucks and culls, $3.25 to $3.50; lambs, $5.75 to $6. Hogs, f.o.b., $6.65 to $6.80. Calves, $3 to $12.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Dec. 11.—Cattle—Receipts, 9700 head; fairly active; good to choice 10c to 15c higher; common to medium steady; prime steers, $6 to $6.50; shipping, $5.25 to $7.50; butchers, $5 to $7; heifers, $3.75 to $6.50; cows, $3 to $5.50; bulls, $4.50 to $6.40; stockers and feeders, $3.50 to $5.15; stock heifers, $2.25 to $3.50; fresh cows and springers steady to easy, $30 to $60.

Hogs—Receipts, 19,500; fairly active and steady; heavy and mixed, $6.35 to $6.40; yorkers, $6.30 to $6.35; pigs, $6.75 to $6.85; roughs, $5.65 to $5.75; stags, $4.50 to $5.50; dairies, $6 to $6.25.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 25,000; sheep fairly active and steady; lambs slow, 15c lower; lambs, $3.50 to $6.25; a few, $6.40; yearlings, $4.50 to $5; wethers, $4.75 to $4; ewes, $2.25 to $3.50; sheep, mixed, $3.50 to $6.25.

PETERBOROUGH TUESDAY DECEMBER 12 1911

CASE WAS DISMISSED

Mrs. Darke Lost Her Action Against the Canadian General Electric Company on Saturday

JUDGMENT GIVEN

In the case of Mrs. Darke vs. the Canadian General Electric Co., the plaintiff's action was dismissed without costs.

On Saturday this action was brought by Mrs. Darke, widow, and administrators of the late Hugh Darke against the Canadian General Electric Co., claiming $10,000 damages fr the death of her husband by accident whilst in the employ of the company. The action was brought before Chief Justice Sir William Mulock and a jury at the Fall Assizes at Peterborough. A number of questions were submitted to the jury and answered by them. The Chief Justice reserved his judgment on the jury's answers and on Saturay last delivered judgment, dismissing the plaintiff's action without costs. The following is an extract from his judgment:

"There is no evidence to support the jury's answers to question nine that Thompson had entrusted to him any superintendence over Darke. Therefore there is no liability under Sec. 3, S.S. 2 of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

"Nor is there any evidence to support the jury's findings that Darke was acting under the orders of his foreman, Jeffrys, when endeavouring to secure the machine, so there is no liability under S.S. 3.

"The evidence shows Darke was to do nothing until after the machine was set in motion and that he knew that Anson and Jeffrys had carefully examined the condition of the machine and pronounced it satisfactory, and that in consequence he was removed from the job but by some mistake of judgment of his own omission, perhaps encouraged by the opinion of Thmpson, who had no authority over him, undertook to further secure the machine and, so engaged, met with the accident.

"Under the circumstances I fail to see where the defendant company is liable and I think the action should be dismissed. It is not a case for giving costs, stay 30 days."

Messrs. O'Connell and Gordon appeared for the plaintiff, and Messrs. Hall, Hayes & Hall for the defendants.

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

"Something Just As Good"

A discovery can be made but once. After that all similar acts become emulation, imitation or an attempt at substitution.

Newbro's Herpicide is a discovery. It was the first remedy ever given to science to kill the dandruff germ. Other preparations have since been offered to the public, some similar in appearance, some in odour, but all bringing the daring promise of doing the same things that Herpicide has been doing for years.

Every article of this kind is merely one more instance of vicious emulation, vile imitation or a base attempt at substitution.

The "something just as good" story is old, why give it a thought? Herpicide is the Original Remedy. It kills the dandruff germ and prevents the hair from falling. Itching of the scalp stops almost with the first application.

Don't be deceived by "Something just as good." If your own druggist does not keep the genuine dandruff germ destroyer, Newbro's Herpicide, go to one who does.

One dollar size bottles are sold under absolute guarantee.

Send 10c. in postage for sample and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich. Applications may be obtained at good barber shops.

McKenna Dismissed

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, DEC. 12.—Speaking last night, Lord Charles Beresford stated that Mr. McKenna is practically dismissed from the post of First Lord of Admiralty, because of his grotesque antics during the Moroccan crisis. Lord Beresford intimated that he expected Churchill would be a great improvement in that important position.

Explosion On Orion

PORTSMOUTH, DEC. 12. —Commander Herbert Garnett and fifteen of the crew of the Dreadnought Orion, were seriously injured this morning in an explosion of an oil tank on the vessel, which is built to burn both coal and oil fuel.

WEST PETERBOROUGH IN CONSERVATIVE COLUMN

E. A. Peck Elected by About 600 Majority Over R. R. Hall, the City Going Strongly Conservative, while the Country Remained True to its Liberal Allegiance—Jas. Thompson, M.P.P., Was Re-elected in the East Riding.

After one of the quietest elections in the history of the constituency, E. A. Peck, Conservative, was yesterday elected over R. R. Hall, Liberal, by over 600 majority, as representative of West Peterborough to the Ontario Legislature. The figures give Mr. Peck 633 majority, with two polls to hear from, which will not materially effect plurality. As usual, the City of Peterborough went Conservative yesterday, giving Mr. Peck a majority of 762, while the country districts went Liberal, with the exception of North Monaghan, which gave Mr. Peck 19. Ennismore presented Mr. Hall with a 77 majority. Smith gave him 19, Harvey contributed 14, and Galway 39. The Cavendish figures were not available today, but they are not expected to change the total very much.

The general apathy of the electorate in the election was augmented yesterday by the inclement weather. The heavy rain and muddy roads interefered considerably in getting out the vote, especially in the country, and this naturally had its effect upon making the best showing. Farmers did not care to drive miles through the mud to register their votes, and the figures in the rural portion of the riding show this decisively.

The total vote did not come up to that cast in the last Dominion election. In the first place, the manhood suffrage registration was over three hundred short, and only about three-quarters of the vote recorded at the September elections was polled yesterday.

There was not the usual interest in the election results. The Review and Examiner had special telegraphic services and flashed the results on screens, but the returns were received quietly. After the local results were known and it was seen that there was not going to be a marked turn over in the Province, the interest died out. The night was a disagreeable one to begin with, and as the provincial results were about as expected, there was little to lead the crowd to get noisy.

At the Liberal Committee Rooms.

Every eye was upon him as he made his way to the platform, but those who looked for bowed head and drooping shoulders, were disappointed. Had he been returning in triumph, he could not have held himself more erect. Nor could the message which he had to impart to the friends who had sworn fealty to him in the fight, have been more buoyant and optimistic had he been the victor in the political fight just concluded. Such was the attitude of Mr. Hall, and the tone of his address, as he faced a large body of his friends in the committee rooms last night.

Mr. U. J. Hartley, President of the W. P. L. A., occupied the chair. He said that the Liberals of West Peterborough had put up a good fight, a clean fight, a fight they were not ashamed of, and though they had been defeated, they were not discouraged. "The good Liberals of West Peterborough will stand yet, and the day is not far distant when the Liberal standard will again fly over West Peterborough and the province." Mr. Rowell had been elected by a big majority, Whitney's majority was less than it was, and the Opposition would be stronger and better than it was in last parliament. Behind the clouds the sun is still shining, and as every party has its dark and cloudy weather, we can take defeat with as good grace as our opponents had to take their for some long years, so we can take ours.

Mr. Hall.

In his opening remarks Mr. Hall thanked his many friends for the loyal support they had given him. He had never been concerned in any election in which he had received such splendid assistance from his supporters as on this occasion. He had been defeated through force of circumstances, a defeat which had been general throughout Ontario, and was not of local concern alone. The country was emerging from fifteen years of Liberal regime, years that had been full of prosperity and hope for Canada, and now, from a natural trend of events, a reaction was setting in. You might as well try to turn back the tide, as to stem the process of reaction. The closing days of the John A. Macdonald administration was illustrative of the reaction in question. It was marked by the entry into power of the Liberal government. At this period, the state of the country was at a low ebb ,and there was general depression of business.

"I took a strong attitude in favour of the working men," declared Mr. Hall. He also expressed the hope that the Whitney government would do something to help the working men who had expressed their indifference to a Compensation Act. He also hoped that the criticism that the Whitney government had received during the campaign would serve as an incentive for them to do better. If we have done no other good than wake them up from their Rip Van Winkle slumbers we have accomplished something for the general good. It was a matter of indifference from a personal standpoint, whether he was elected or not. He was perfectly willing to help Peterborough advance, and perfectly satisfied if Mr. Peck would do something to prevent the Whitney government from receding. Whitney measured well in bringing on the elections at this time. There were instances in Harvey and Cavendish, where the electors were compelled to drive ten and thirteen miles to vote. Mr. Peck had also succeeded in having the polling sub-divisions changed, so as to make it difficult for them.

In conclusion the speaker said: "We have fallen in a high and honourable cause, but we still stand by the principles which we fought for. We have lost, but our cause shall prevail."

He thanked this friends individually and collectively for their hearty support. (Applause.)

Mr. Stratton said that Mr. Hall's speech had the right ring about it. It showed that the principles he was fighting for were not beaten, but only temporarily overcome. The electors of Peterborough evidently felt that it was better to send a supporter of the Government, which had a good prospect of being returned; but others thought that it would be a better thing to have a good live Opposition —one that would be able to probe matters that required investigation in the public interests, but unfortunately they were in the minority. The majority of the electors thought differently, and their verdict was accepted. Mr. Hall put up a splendid campaign, full of energy and good policy. He showed that the annual expenditure was growing too rapidly for the results obtained; he showed that the direct and indirect liabilities of the Province were increasing enormously; he showed that our educational system, as administered by Dr. Pyne, was not suitable to the wants and requirements of the province; he showed that the licensing system was sunk deeper into partizan politics than ever before in the history of the province; and so far as this riding was concerned, perhaps more absolutely ineffective and defective than in any other. He showed in word that stagnation and routine, had taken the place of vigorous and progressive administration and that legislation in the public interests was neglected, and the rights of the people ignored. Mr. Hall's arguments had not been met by fair discussion. Attacks on his reputation and low-down insinuations, false statements, were made and exploded, and disproved slanders were revived and revamped for the purpose of injuring him personally; there was nothing more contemptible and inexcusable than the false and libellous statements made on the eve of the election in one of the newspapers opposing him. Nothing was said by Mr. Hall on the public platform that was not legitimate and fair discussion. But attacks on his professional reputation and his business methods were made with a viciousness that no partizan zeal could excuse.

Evidently the workingmen of Peterborough do not wish to have a proper and easily applied Workingman's Compensation Act. The temperance people don't want any improvement in temperance legislation; those engaged in factories are evidently satisfied with the enforcement of the Factories' Act, and the kind of inspection provided by the present government. The electors of the city do not seem to think that the expenses of the Province, twice as large as a few years ago, are not too great. In a word, they seem to be satisfied with the Whitney Government, and blind to all its short comings. If they are satisfied they are the ones to be pleased.

Other addresses were delivered and the meeting closed with cheers for the King, Mr. Hall and Mr. Rowell.

The returns for the Province were received at the rooms, and showed on the whole that the Liberal Opposition would be stronger in numbers and fighting quality in the new Legislature than in the last.

The Conservatives had a procession from the committee room to the Opera House, when the new member, Ald Bradburn, Ald. Buller ,Percy G. S. Webb, W. S. Robinson, and others, addressed the gathering.

EAST RIDING.

There was a three-cornered fight in the East Riding, with Edward Hawthorne, Liberal, Jas. Thompson, M. P. P., Conservative, and David Andrews, Independent, in the field. Although four polls are to be heard from, Mr. Thompson's re-election by over 450 is conceded. The figures, at press time, give him a majority of 481 over Mr. Hawthorne. The electors, apparently, did not view Mr. Andrews' candidature seriously, and he polled somewhat under 200 votes. Mr. Hawthorne made a splendid stand, considering that he is a new man in the field and made inroads on Mr. Thompson's majorities in several sections. However, Havelock and Belmont went strongly in favour of the sitting member, and the big vote he piled up there gave him a big advantage. In many places, Andrews failed to get a vote at all.

Following are figures as far as completed:

Their Majesties King George and Queen Mary Are Officially Crowned Emperor and Empress of India Amid a Scene of Unparalelled Splendour.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

DELHI, INDIA, DEC. 12.—This was the crowning day of the great Durbar and from now on their Majesties George and Mary are officially Emperor and Empress of India. All the great Princes of India were there to give homage and to assist in the ceremony, and their wives witnessed it in a gallery screened from the public eye as is the custom of all women of high caste in India. The Empress Mary's dress was of white satin, embroidered with a design of roses, thistles and shamrock. Her principal ornament was a beautifully jewelled insigne order star of India. After the ceremony she spent the day with the Indian Princesses. It was undoubtedly the most impressive ceremony of modern times. In connection with the function it was announced that His Majesty had given large sums from his private purse for the education of the Hindus and the amelioration of distress, The British government will supplement this and it will doubtless become popular.

One hundred thousand people were present and cheered themselves hoarse when the crowning took place. It was also announced that a large number of political prisoners were pardoned and a total of two million dollars was available immediately for educative and charitable object mentioned.

LEADER ROWELL THINKS LIBERAL TIDE HAS TURNED

Mr. Rowell, Liberal leader, speaking at Woodstock on election night, said:

"The returns so far received show that the Liberals have made substantial gains throughout the province, but unfortunately they have suffered some serious losses. The net result appears to be the gain of a few seats by the Liberal party. This, I consider most gratifying, in view of the conditions under which the Liberal party entered the contest. The election was brought on at a time when the Liberal party was suffering from the disaster of September 21st, and the feeling of the Liberal party with reference to the provincial contest was no doubt correctly expressed by Mr. Kemp in an address at Toronto about the time the elections were announced, when he intimated that the Liberals would not have two seats left after the provincial contest.

AGAINST LONG ODDS

"The Liberal party entered the fight without organization, without literature, and in a great many constituencies without candidates. It was impossible in view of of the condition in which the party found itself after the election of September 21 in the short time at our disposal to perfect our organization, to secure the necessary campaign literature, and to carry on a campaign throughout the whole province such as would normally be carried on by either political party in a general election. On the other hand, the Government was strongly entrenched in power, had ample time to prepare for the election, and went into the campaign with unlimited resources at its disposal, with a body of office-holders backing it throughout the whole province and with the prestige of the election of September 21 to support it.

THE TIDE HAS TURNED

"My own opinion was that if, under these conditions, and thus handicapped, we could hold our own in the present contest against the Government, it would really mean that we were making substantial gains, and the fact that we have more than held our own, and that we have gained several seats, and in many parts of the province have substantially reduced the Government majorities, is the best evidence that the tide has turned and that the Liberal party of this province will from this time on make rapid strides. There was neither time nor opportunity to fairly present our progressive platform to the people. The better the people understand it the more thoroughly will it be appreciated. I feel that we have made an excellent start and that during the next four years, if we continue to sow the seed of good Liberal principles, and make our policy thoroughly known to the electors, the autocratic and unprogressive administration of Sir James Whitney will be turned out of power, and progressive Liberalism will receive the opportunity at the hands of the electors to enact legislation in the interest of the masses of the people of the province.

GONE DOWN IN THE FIGHT

"I truly regret the loss of a number of able members of the late House. The country can ill afford to part with their services. We have, however, elected a number of strong Liberals in Conservative seats and the party will return to the House strengthened in numbers and in spirit by its progressive policy and determined to do battle for Liberalism in the Legislature as well as in the country during the ensuing Legislative term. I am personally gratified that Mr. A. G. MacKay has been elected with such a handsome majority. It shows, as I anticipated, that he possesses the confidence of those who know him best. His presence in the Legislature will be a great help to the party and the province. The Liberal party and this province is under a great obligation to Hon W. L. Mackenzie King and the other Liberal speakers throughout the province who contributed so largely towards the success which has attended our campaign at the present time, and also to the splendid fight put up by the Liberal candidates throughout he province against the Government in the face of almost overwhelming odds."

Federal Conservatives Have Decided to Set Aside the Understanding Between Parties

MALLON TO RUN

Ottawa, Dec. 11.—On orders from the Conservative Federal leaders here, it has been definitely decided to oppose the election of Hon. George P. Graham in South Renfrew. The clear understanding between the parties in the riding as to the election of both Messrs. McGarry and Graham by acclamation is to be set aside, and Dr. Maloney, the unsuccessful Conservative candidate against Mr. Law at the last election will be nominated by the local organization to contest the bye-election against Mr. Graham. Mr. Law had a majority of 610.

YOUR GRAY HAIRS QUICKLY VANISH

A Harmless Remedy, Made From Garden Sage, Restores Colour to Gray Hair

A feeling of sadness accompanies the discovery of the first gray hairs, which, unfortunately, are looked upon as heralds of advancing age. Gray hairs, however, are not always an indication of advancing age, for many people have gray hairs quite early in life. Of course, it is unnatural, and indicates that there is something wrong with the individual and that Nature needs assistance in correcting the trouble. The same is true of hair that is constantly falling out and becoming thinner every day. If everything is right with Nature, the hair, even in comparatively elderly people, should be long, thick and glossy, without even a streak of gray.

The ideal assistant to Nature in restoring and preserving the hair is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a clean and wholesome dressing for daily use. It not only removes dandruff, but strengthens weak, thin and falling hair and promotes its growth. A few applications will restore faded or gray hair to its natural colour.

Get a bottle to-day, and let it do for you what it has done for thousands of others.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.—Special agents, Warne Drug Co.

LEADERS ON RESULT

"Too Soon to Discuss New Policies" Remarks Premier—Rowell Ready For Work

SITUATION TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, DEC. 12.—"It's too soon to discuss the new policies," said Sir James Whitney this morning when asked if he had anything to add to his message of last night regarding the result of the elections. The Premier was rather tired and will probably take some days' rest before talking much about his future actions.

Leader Newton Wesley Rowell returned from Woodstock this morning. He says he is ready to get to work as the leader of the Opposition. He remarked that it was very gratifying considering the fact that while the Liberals only took thirteen seats in Ontario on September twenty-first, they should take twenty-two yesterday. Belated returns, while altering the size of the majorities in many cases, do not affect the government's majority in the house, which will be a clear one of sixty, including J. A. Mathieu, independent, of Rainy River.

Mr. Wm. Wood, who resided near Carmel, about four miles south of Millbrook, was found dead in bed this morning by his wife. Heart failure is supposed to be the cause.

THE ELECTION RESULTS.

The election in West Peterborough yesterday resulted in the return of Mr. Peck by a large majority. Mr. Hall, after a plucky and energetic fight, in itself a guarantee of energetic representation in case he had been elected, entered the contest with a desire and belief that if given the opportunity he could be of service to the constituency. This was a laudable ambition. It goes without saying that the platform and principles he advocated and represented as a candidate, were more in the interests of the peole and the Province than those of his opponent. Even some of those opposing him admit this. Yet, party fealty was stronger in its appeal than the welfare of the people, and the good of the province. He was beaten by a combination of elements among the electorate that are naturally opposed, with on common bond but party, and prospect of party and material advantage. Mr. Hall stood especially the champion of the city electors, but they, for some reason, preferred to ignore the platform he presented in their interests in favour of a candidate, who, no matter how personally estimable he is, was the supporter of a government that has shown a heartless neglect of, and on principle is opposed to, the promotion of the interests involved. In the country he achieved a substantial majority, but on the whole the combination of influences adverse to dispassionate consideration of the claims of a candidate prevailed. Though Mr. Hall is personally defeated, and the principles and platform he advocated have, for the moment, failed of recognition, he has done much to show that the Liberal party and Liberal principles are in the interests of the people and will ultimately prevail.

In East Peterborough, Mr. Edward Hawthorne, the Liberal candidate, made a splendid fight, though he fell somewhat considerably short of the point of success. It is no small triumph that he succeeded in materially reducing the majority secured by his opponent in the last election—721—by about one-fifth. His platform being the Liberal platform, was sound, and his personal claims, as a framer, who has for years done excellent work, in various ways, in the interests of the chief industry of a farming constituency, were important factors. He made an excellent run, and the result shows that the Whitney Government is not considered indispensable, by a very respectable minority of the electors of East Peterborough.

The result throughout the Province, though not as good as the friends of good government expected, places the Liberal party in the Legislature in a considerably better fighting condition than it occupied in the last Legislature. Mr. Rowell, the new Liberal leader, has in the short campaign, made an excellent impression upon the country, and considering the circumstances, has done remarkably well. He has been elected with a good majority, and has behind him a considerably strengthened following, which headed by Mr. MacKay, his chief lieutenant, will be a much stronger factor in promoting the cause of good government than its numbers would indicate. It has the strength of the sound principles upon which it is founded, and will prove a disturbing buffer against the reactionary principles that mark the Whitney Government. It will tend to bring the people to see more clearly and intelligently that the party now so strongly entrenched in power is not progressive and enterprising; that it lacks wholesome initiative, that the Province of Ontario, with its large possibilities, in the way of natural resources, the enterprising character of its citizenship, and its importance in the confederation sisterhood, needs something better than a mere routine administrative machine, needs a live, aggressive and progressive government.

THE NAVAL PLEBISCITE.

If, as Sir Wilfrid says, a referendum on the navy question is unconstitutional, what about his plebiscite on the prohibition question? That was essentially a referendum. Was it also unconstitutional?—Hamilton Herald.

The reference made by the Herald is not very comforting to those who want progress made in naval defence. Whether the plebiscite on prohibition was constitutional or not, it was of no value in advancing the cause of prohibition. No doubt Sir Wilfrid Laurier would admit frankly that his Cabinet was not a unit in favour of prohibtion. When the plebiscite was taken it was no more united than before, and nothing was done. The plebiscite on prohibition was a mistake. The event proved that it was useless.

This experience strengthens the argument against a plebiscite on the navy. After the plebiscite is taken the Government will know no more than it knows to-day—that there is a division of public opinion on the question; that a majority of the people are in favour of doing something, but are divided as to what should be done. Knowing this, the Government should go ahead and frame and carry out its policy. That is what a Government is for—to find means of carrying the popular will into effect; accepting the people's will as to the general principle, but not expecting the people to design the plan.

If the Government submits three or four plans for the people to choose from, the answers will be confusing. What will it do, for instance, if each of these plans is favourred by about one-third of the people?

If the Government submits only one plan that plan may be defeated, not because the people are against naval defence, but because they do not like the particular plan submitted. Some Conservatives say to-day that they are in favour of naval defence, but do not like the Laurier plan. Similarly, a body of electors may say that they favour naval defence, but do not like the Borden-Monk plan. Thus, when the returns come in, the Government may be as much in the dark as ever.

All this shows that the constitutional objection to a plebiscite is also a practical objection. Responsible government has its defects, but it works. The plebiscite, or rather the attempt to mix plebiscite and responsible government, does not work. It produces confusion and delay. The only use it serves to-day is to enable men of diametrically opposite opinions to hold office together.

CARNEGIE'S MILLIONS

Some time ago Mr. Andrew Carnegie is stated to have said that it was a disgrace to die rich. To avoid such fate he has given munificently to worthy objects amounting to over $200,000,000, and yet he is still considered one of the richest men in the world.

The Emperor Augustus is the only man who surpassed Mr. Carnegie in public donations. We are inclined to think that if the great steel magnate desires to escape the dreaded disgrace he must die soon or some people may believe that his purse posseses the same charm as that associated with the oil flask mentioned in the Scriptures.

Opinions may differ concerning a social system that enables one man to accumulate such a vast amount of wealth in a life time. It is certain, however, that anyone who gives millions of dollars to institutions that have for their objects the propagation of the public good is entitled to a place in the memory and esteem of his fellowmen.

Here is an authentic list of Mr. Carnegie's gifts up to the present time:

Libraries	$51,000,000
Carnegie Institute, Pittsburg	16,000,000
Carnegie Tech. School, Pittsburg	7,500,000
Pensions for College Professors	21,000,000
Carnegie Institute, Washington	22,000,000
Scotch Universities	10,000,000
United States Hero Fund	5,000,000
Dumfermline Hero Fund	1,250,000
German Hero Fund	1,250,000
French Hero Fund	1,000,000
Danish Hero Fund	100,000
Steel Coy's Employees	5,000,000
Dumferline Endowments	6,250,000
Hague Peace Temple	1,750,000
Peace Fund	10,000,000
Allied Engineers' Society	1,500,000
Bureau of American Republics	850,000
Gifts to the United States, small colleges	20,000,000
Miscellaneous gifts in United States	20,000,000
Miscellaneous gifts in Europe	2,500,000
Approximate total	$205,450,000

It is very generous for Mr. Carnegie to so generally distribute other people's money. Many hold that it is not his money but the money of the people whose labour created it. Either the workmen who produced the steel, whose sale resulted in the accumulation of 200 millions, were, it is argued, generally underpaid, or a vicious fiscal system contributed to inordinate profit at the expense of the people. It seems inconceivable that steel manufactured, at a fair rate of wages, and sold at a fair profit, could realize so much. If the workmen whose labour alone produced the new wealth, had had the chance they would have preferred to distribute the wealth among themselves and their families. Whether or not such a view is economically sound, it is evident there has been injustice somewhere, and that somebody has got more than his share.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Sam Clarke, the veteran of West Northumberland, is improving. Yesterday he doubled his majority of 1908—increased it from 205 to 500.

The Labour men of Hamilton stood by their cause better than the labour men of Peterborough. Allan Studholme, the Labour candidate for East Hamilton, was elected by 500 majority, though Premier Whitney made a specific visit to Hamilton to crush the labour candidate; but the workmen stood by themselves and their candidate.

Hon. A. G. MacKay, former Liberal leader, made a big sweep in North Grey. He was returned yesterday by a majority of 999. His majority in 1908 was 71. This is not doing bad for a man that was practically lied and blackmailed out of the leadership. A bold attempt was made to rob him of his seat by the same tactics, and his sweeping majority yesterday was a vindication that a public man may be well proud of.

Hon. Dr. Reaume, Minister of Public Works in the Whitney Government, had a "close call" in North Essex, his majority of 1908 in 1908, having been reduced to twenty in yesterday's voting. And he had the advantage of having two candidates against him, thus dividing the opposing vote and allowing him to slip in. A recount may yet settle the Minister of Public Works.

The majority of the Whitney government in the present election is 56 over all. Dr. McGarry who was allowed by the Liberals to be elected by acclamation in South Renfrew on condition that Hon. G. P. Graham should be allowed to take a seat unopposed, certainly would not, otherwise, have been elected; for the Liberal, Mr. Low, won the seat in the Dominion election by 619.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

ONE of the most pathetic figures at Christmas time to me, is the child who has nothing to give.

We are always having our sympathies appealed to, for the child who has little or nothing given to it at Christmas, but who ever says anything about the youngster who has little or nothing to give?

And yet, isn't he also deserving of sympathy?

Don't you get as much pleasure out of what you give at Christmas as what you receive?

More? I thought so. Very well then. Aren't you denying a child a great deal when you fail to make it possible for him to give, as well as to receive at Chirstmas time?

I believe that every parent's Christmas duty is to make it possible for his children to give at Christmas time. And mind you, I don't mean to make this possible by giving the children a few dollars outright "to buy your Christmas presents with." Even a very young child can appreciated the farce of having father give him some money, with which he will later buy father a Christmas present. How much of the glorious gladness of giving is he likely to get under such circumstances—how much of the "It is more blessed to give than to receive" spirit?

No, every child should be given a chance to EARN or SAVE his Christmas money. Of course, the child who has an allowance can save it from that, and I wish all children were included in this category. But unfortunately they are not.

What about the others, then? Well, in the name of the joy you yourself take in giving, for the sake of the unselfishness you hope to see your children develop, give them a chance to earn a little money somehow or other.

Let them go without candy, cake butter or some luxury from now until Christmas, and give them an equivalent in money.

Reward them by an unexpected nickel, dime or quarter for some kind or thoughtful deed. Please observe that this is quite different from bribing them to be good—a practice of which I most heartily disapprove.

Invent errands and tasks if necessary. Offer the little daughter a quarter a week, if she will darn the stockings or wash all the dishes. Let the little son help you about the furnace.

It is easier to do this work yourself than to oversee them, you say. Perhaps so. And perhaps you can ill spare the extra two or three dollars that all this means. But remember, my friend, the cause for which you are giving it. If necessary try to save it from your own Christmas list. Even make son or daughter a little less expensive Christmas present.

Maybe you think I'm foolishly emphatic about all this, but I don't believe I am. I can remember that one of the happiest Christmases of my own childhood, was the year when, by taking care of a neighbour's cat all summer, I earned enough to give each of my family no foolish makeshift gift, but something they really wanted. Christmas that year meant not merely opening my own gifts, but watching others open theirs from me, with a delighted anticipation of their pleasure.

Again, I heard a girl who last year passed her first Christmas as a wage earner say, "It's splendid to be earning money and to be independent all the time, but Christmas is the best of all. To really have some money that you earned yourself and not have father and mother give you money to buy presents with—why it's glorious. I hardly knew what Christmas meant before."

To be always receiving and never giving is a bad position even for a child. If he accepts it indifferently, he is developing selfishness. If he rebels against it, he suffers.

Once more in the name of the joy you yourself take in giving, for the sake of the unselfishness you want your children to develop, give them a chance to really give, as well as receive this Christmas.

EXAMINER'S CHRISTMAS NUMBER

Saturday's Edition Was Replete With Good Advice for Shoppers

SOME LESSONS

It's a far cry back from Saturday's Christmas Number of the Examiner to the first one published by this paper. That edition, surely looks poor as it lies before us today.

It was, however, a start—a big step in advance of anything of the kind attempted in Peterborough before. In relation to the papers of those days it was perhaps as much a leader as today's edition is among the papers of today.

The purpose of these Examiner Christmas Numbers has been to help shoppers to answer these puzzling questions in relation to Christmas buying—

WHAT?
WHERE?

The object is, frankly, through the news columns and the advertising columns—to give Christmas hints—helpful ideas of what to buy and where to buy it.

Another object of The Examiner Christmas Number is to answer the other puzzling question—

WHEN?

Over and over again we have answered it, but always in the same way—Early in the Season and Early in the Day.

Perhaps our preaching has become monotonous. It has been effective. The date of publication of this Christmas Number has been moved back a week in the last few years. It will probably have to be moved back another week next year.

What does this signify?

That Peterborough people are making their Christmas purchases earlier each season.

That Peterborough people are appreciating the fact that Christmas shopping can be better done early in December, or in November even, than during the last week before Christmas Day.

That they are realizing that early buying means buying under more comfortable conditions—giving greater opportunity for choice.

That they are realizing that early buying means better conditions for salespeople and delivery men and managers in the stores.

But there is another point on which a great deal of education is needed.

Christmas shopping should not only be early in the day.

Peterborough shoppers are prone to be afternoon shoppers, yet the service in Peterborough stores is better in the morning than it is in the afternoon.

Even when shoppers come down in the morning for a special purpose, they are inclined to go home and return in the afternoon for the bulk of their buying.

This means that in the afternoon our stores are more crowded than they would be if the buying were spread more over the whole day.

In the morning the air in the stores is better, the sales people are not so rushed.

There is more time to pick and choose—you can be surer of getting what you want.

In this season of charity and goodwill, shoppers should show the greatest consideration for those who serve them so well, the employees in the stores.

There is just one further thought in connection with Christmas shopping.

That is that Peterborough people should buy AT HOME—in our own city.

The stores of this city are large and varied in their stocks. They can supply all your Christmas needs, giving a wide variety to choose from and prices which compare with those in any other city.

For these reasons alone Christmas buying of Peterborough people should be done in Peterborough.

But there is a further reason. Every dollar you spend in Peterborough is a dollar which circulates among our own people here, adding to the wealth of the community and the prosperity of all our varied business interests.

A dollar sent away is a dollar which goes to enrich some other community and which impoverishes this city to the same extent.

In the pages of Saturday's Christmas Number will be found the announcements of practically everyone of Peterborough's leading stores.

It is a larger, more varied and more complete lot of business announcements than will be printed again this year.

At this season of the year the advertising columns of The Examiner are particularly worthy of careful perusal. They bear many a story helpful to the Christmas shopper.

Annual Meeting Of St. Paul's W. F. M. S. Reports Are Presented

The 35th annual meeting of St. Paul's W. F. M. S. Auxiliary was held on Friday afternoon, Dec. 8th, in the schoolroom of the church, where 196 ladies had assembled.

The President, Miss Dickson, occupied the chair, and after the opening exercises and prayer by Miss Dickson, the different reports were presented.

The Secretary's report by Miss Harstone. The financial statement which was presented by Mrs. McKee, treasurer, shows the total receipts to be $873.23, of which $29.42 was used for bale of supplies for boarding school at Mound Lake in the Northwest.

Miss Aleitha Davidson read the report of the Fraser Mission Band, which closes the year with a balance of $98.65.

The report of the Faithful Workers' Mission Band was given by Miss Georgia Davidson and showed a balance of $76.10.

The adoption of these reports was seconded by Mrs. Mowat.

Mrs. Donald McGillivray, whose husband, Dr. McGillivray represents the Canadian church in Shanghai, being connected with the Christian Literature Society of China, gave a very interesting account of her labours among the natives of that city, and in relating her different experiences, emphasized the marked contrast between Christian China and Heathen China.

Rev. D. A. McDonald, who has been assigned as St. Paul's missionary to Korea, then addressed the meeting, explaining the work he soon expects to engage in, and by means of a map showed the part of Korea where he will labour.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered these speakers by Mrs. W. H. Hill seconded by Mrs. Munro.

While the offering was being taker a solo was sung by Miss Chalmers.

The dedicatory prayer was offered by Mrs. Roger, and Rev. Mr. Pogue pronounced the benediction.

The officers for 1912 were announced by the secretary as follows:

President—Miss. Dickson.
Hon. Vice-President—Mrs. Robert Innes.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Roger.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Pogue.
Secretary—Mrs. Harstone.
Treasurer—Mrs. McKee.
Lit. Secretary—Miss Laidlaw.
Asst.-Secretary—Miss Hamilton.
Librarian—Miss Stewart.
Organist—Mrs. Logan.
Executive—Mrs. Robert Hall, Mrs Turner, Mrs. Mowat, Mrs. Ferguson Mrs. Shook, Mrs. Buchanan, Mrs. Madill, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Adam Hall Mrs. R. R. Hall.

The Secretary's annual report of St Paul's W. F. M. S. Auxiliary for 1911: To the President and Members of St Paul's W.F.M.S. Auxiliary,—

In reviewing the years' work in the 35th annual report of this society, we are pleased to record substantial growth and earnest effort and for the measure of success that has crowned our efforts, we give to Him in whose service we have been privileged to labour ,our grateful praise.

In presenting this report we necessarily bring before you old things as well as new, for each year carries with it a record similar in its outlines to the preceding years.

Meetings have been held regularly throughout the year, with the exception of August. The attendance has been fairly good, but the average, which is 55, is slightly less than last year.

The "Day of Prayer" arranged by the Board of our General Society was observed in January and is found to be a time of helpfulness and inspiration. A spirit of definite, earnest prayer is being cultivated, and the value and privilege of intercessory prayer is being realized.

At our June meeting, Mrs. Adam Hall gave a most complete report of the Presbyterial meeting held at Cobourg June 6th and 7th and the evening meeting held at same date was fully reported by Mrs. Roger and Miss Martha Dickson.

It was our privilege at our annual meeting last December to have with us one of our foreign missionaries, Mrs. Mitchell of Honan, China. Meeting our missionaries from time to time and hearing the story of their labours in these far-away fields, brings us face to face with the work and gives us a more intelligent idea of what is being accomplished.

The appeal for the usual bale of supplies for the Northwest met with a hearty response ,and during the summer a bale valued at $64.43 (this includes $5.55 in money for the purchase of shoes) and containing an outfit for a girl eighteen years of age, as well as other supplies, was forwarded to the boarding school at Mound Lake.

The prescribed book on missions, "Western women in eastern lands" has formed the basis of study and has been profitably used throughout the year. This book traces the growth of the "Woman's work for woman" from its very beginning up to the broad national organization to which we now belong. Many excellent papers have been prepared by the members on the topics from month to month and by this means all are enabled to take part from time to time, and by increasing the knowledge, there is a corresponding increase of interest.

The Literature secretary reports the distribution of 101 tidings, about the same number as last year. Cannot this list be increased next year. This little magazine gives full information from month to month regarding the work of our missionaries both at home and abroad.

The Interior was again sent to our missionaries in India and the Mission Review taken for the use of members of the Auxiliary."

The Thanksgiving meeting, which was held in October, is looked upon as an important factor in our work, when Thanksgiving and Thank offering bring home to all the abundant blessings bestowed upon us, and the need of sharing these blessings with those less favoured. Mrs. Rollins gave a most inspiring and timely address, taking as her theme "The Prayer Spirit," impressing all present with the great necessity of a more earnest waiting on God in prayer, which is the secret of the true consecration of every heart, and the source of efficient service. We are pleased to report that the offering has again grown this year, the amount being $710.20. Your officers are especially proud of the loyal liberality of the women this year, notwithstanding the face of the recent canvass in our congregation, resulting in a substantial increase of the general missionary funds of the church.

We are also much gratified at being able to report an increase of membership, which now numbers 123, seventeen names having been added this year. While we rejoice at the progress made and feel greatly encouraged, we must not be satisfied with present attainments. The present is fraught with tremendous possibilities, the church having taken the whole world literally into its plan of evangelization. Our watchword then must be "Forward," but we ask how can we go forward and obey this summons to larger efficiency unless we enlist the sympathy and hearty co-operation of every woman in this congregation. May this appeal solemnly impress the minds of the younger members so that hey may realize not only the urgency of the work, but also their responsibility in regard to it.

Year by year we have to record the passing from our ranks of faithful and valued members, and we extend our sincere sympathy to those who have been thus bereaved. With great sorrow we record this year the death of three of our members, and of Miss Hilton, who passed away last March. Although not a member of our society, she had its interests at heart, which was evidenced by a legacy of $300 given to the General Society. Mrs. Alexander, who was called away last February, was a member since the organization of the society, also a life member. Although laid aside form active work of late years, she always manifested a deep interest in missions. Mrs. Garvin, whose death occurred last May, was a devoted and faithful co-worker in this auxiliary, also a life member for many years, and always gave of her time and her abilities willingly for the furtherance of the work. We also mourn the loss of another Auxiliary worker, the late Mrs. Denison.

As we stand at the threshold of a New Year and review the work of the year just closed, we should so look back that the lessons and teachings of the past reach into and serve as a guide for the future, and as we look forward, may we open our eyes and get a larger vision of the magnitude of the work, and thus be enabled to realize our personal responsibility and grasp more perfectly the urgent need of women and children in heathen lands, which must be met by Christian women. Let us remember the words of our Master, who said to His disciples: "I am among you as He that serveth," and may faithfulness in service be the keynote as we take up the work for another year.

"Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves."

P. HARSTONE, Sec.

OBITUARY

DR. BRERETON.

The sad news reached here this morning of the death of Dr. Brereton of Bethany. The deceased physician was well and favourably known among the people with whom he laboured, pandering to their ills at all times, whether late or early. He was a resident of the place for over twenty years, originally coming to Bethany from West Toronto, where he was born. The deceased gentleman had not been in good health since the fire, which devastated the town, having apparently contracted a cold on that eventful night. About one week ago the deceased was stricken down by a stroke of paralysis, from which he rallied, to be followed by a more severe one Sunday at 2 o'clock, the latter ending fatally.

A wife, two sons and one daughter survive. Both boys are attending Toronto colleges, one of the young men being a student in medicine.

The funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon from the family residence. Interment at St. Mary's cemetery, Lifford.—Lindsay Warder.

CHRISTOPHER ARMSTRONG.

The death occurred on Friday last of Mr. Christopher Armstrong of Janetville, aged 86 years.

The deceased was born in the County of Cavan, Ireland, and came to Canada at the age of 21 years, settling in Manvers township. He has lived in the vicinity of Janetville for over 60 years.

Three sons and five daughters survive, namely: Messrs. James, Christopher and John at Janetville; Mrs. John Ingram, of Lindsay; Mrs. W. Anderson, of Peterborough; Mrs. Jas. Nasmyth, of Lindsay, and Margaret at home. A sister, Mrs. McCullough, resides in Ireland.

The funeral took place in Janetville on Saturday last.

ARE YOU A KNOCKER OR A BOOSTER?

For the Health Association—If the Latter Buy Some Calendars and Stamps

The pretty calendars and attractive stamps issued by the Peterborough Health Association are now on sale in the city drug stores, the city banks and also with several of the merchants. The proceeds from the sale of the above are to be used in the fight against tuberculosis, which the doctors tell us is quite prevalent in our midst. Those who have been ill themselves or had illness in their homes (no matter of what kind) never turn a deaf ear to the needs of the poor sick, but sometimes the strong and healthy ones do not stop to think of the helplessness and suffering of those who are poor and have not the means to procure medical attention and advice, and often "knock" things which well meanig people undertake to alleviate the sufferings of more unfortunate ones. Are you going to be a "booster" or a "knocker"?. If the former, buy some of the stamps and calendars and help on a good cause. Don't knock the Peterborough Health Association. It is but "a child in the cradle." Help to put it on its feet and give it a chance. Give it a smile and a "pat on the back" even if you can only buy a few stamps. It will help to fight the good fight against the white scourge.

Hurled From His Buggy In Collision

Information was gathered this morning to the effect that a most disastrous runaway occurred about half a mile west of the city on the gravel road.

A team of horses attached to a heavy waggon, running from the direction of the city, smashed into and upset a buggy, in which rode a man named Johnston, supposed to live eight or nine miles west of the city. Although Mr. Johnston was thrown several feet, he escaped with a baly sprained ankle.

The horses, in their mad race, appeared to swerve in passing the buggy, so that the front wheel of the waggon locked the rear wheel of the buggy, with the result that the buggy wheel was broken off and the buggy turned upside down and badly damaged. The team went straight forward, with renewed speed, and before Mr. Johnston could gather himself up, his own horse broke away from the buggy and started off in pursuit at a terrific pace.

The Examiner's informant was an eyewitness of the affair, and escaped getting his own team into collision with the runaway, only by driving into a lane-way. He stated that he yelled at Mr. Johnston and tried to warn him of his danger, but he did not understand the signal until it was too late.

Sudden Death At Bailieboro

Mr. James Wood, Well Known Resident, Passes Away

Tragic in its suddenness was the death of Mr. James Wood of Bailieboro this morning. He voted as usual yesterday and retired last night apparently in usual health. About 5 o'clock this morning his wife heard some unusual sounds, and called her son. Approaching the bedside, he was horrified to find his father in a dying condition. Mr. Wood died two minutes later.

The deceased, was the third son of the late Mr. James Wood, who passed away some years ago. He was born in an old homestead in Banan, near Bailieboro, 52 years ago, and was engged in the farming industry, in which he became exceedingly prosperous. A very large circle of friends lament his demise, for he was universally well known throughout the country. He had, by his genial manner, rendered himself most popular, and leaves behind him a memory of sterling citizenship. Some years ago Mr. Wood spent two or three years in the kl country.

The deceased gentleman was married to Miss Mary Bowel of Buffalo, N.Y., who survives him, as also do two children, Arthur D. Wood of Peterborough and Miss Ethel, at home. Three brothers also mourn his passing in the persons of William, temporarily of Alameda, Sask., Robert and Thomas, at home, and three sisters, Mrs. Robert Hutchinson of Huntsville, Mrs. Dr. Fisher of Bailieboro and Miss Sarah Wood, nurse at the Nicholls Hospital.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been definitely decided upon, but it is generally accepted that the funeral will be held on Thursday at St. Paul's Church Cemetery near Bailieboro.

WOODMEN OF THE WORLD

The regular monthly meeting of Sherwood Foresters' Camp of the Woodmen of the World was held last night in their lodge rooms in the Sons of England Hall, when the annual election of officers took place.

This was a long-to-be-remembered meeting, because of the attendance of two hundred members and the initiation of fifty-five members.

It may be added that since the 1st of November, 1911, one hundred and forty new members have been added to this camp and there are enough in consideration now to make this number come to at least two hundred (200) by the end of December.

The following officers were elected and this was, in each case, a promotion from the station below to a higher office, with the exception of Con-Com. Graham, who retired to the Past Con's chair.

Past Con-Commander—A. Graham.
Con-Com.—J. Vallery.
Adv.-Lieut.—F. Dummitt.
Banker—J. Kyle.
Clerk—A. A. Haskill.
Escort—J. Bath.
Watchman—G. Grange.
Sentry—Harold Hicks.
Managers—William Gibbs, R. Waram, R. Carr.
Delegate to the Head Camp—A. A. Haskill.

After the election of officers several of the members were called upon for speeches and among them G. N. Gordon addressed the Lodge on the subject of co-operation with the officers and the obtaining of new members and it was resolved with Mr. Gordon's suggestion that each member bring in at least one new member during the winter which will make the camp's membership extend over one thousand (1000.)

Mr. D. C. Dawe also addressed the camp along the same lines and as the Camp is composed of young men almost entirely it was felt that by the middle of March a membership of at least one thousand could be attained.

It was clearly indicated by the addresses given that Past Con.-Com. Graham and Clerk Haskill were most truly instrumental in increasing the membership so rapidly and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to these officers, besides the assistance the other officers of the lodge had given in the campaign for increased membership.

This Camp now bears the enviable reputation of being the largest lodge of any fraternal society in the Midland district of the Province of Ontario.

Conference At Orillia

An Older Boys' Conference is to discuss "the boy problem," at Orillia on the last three days of the year Friday, Saturday and Sunday, December 29, 30 and 31. The Conference, is to be held under the joint auspices of the Ontario Sunday School Association and the Provincial Young Men's Christian Association. It is expected that there will be three hundred delegates in attendance, for whom the people of Orillia have undertaken to provide hospitality. Each Sunday school and each Troop of Boy Scouts or High School Club is entitled to two delegates, and each Y.M.C.A. to five. A strong programme has been prepared, including such speakers as Albert E. Roberts ,of the International Committee of the Y.M.C.A., New York; F. A. Crosby, Boys' Work Director of the Chicago Y.M.C.A.; E. W. Halpenny ,Secretary of Ontario Sunday School Association ;G. A. Warburton, General Secretary Toronto Y.M.C.A.; Frank Yeigh, Mrs. Jean Blewett, and others. Orillia is a particularly interesting town to visit at the present juncture, nearly half a million dollars worth of building having been done there during the past season. Among the buildings erected is an addition to the Y.M.C.A., which is now said to be the best association building in any town on the continent. It will be one of the buildings used for the Conference, the new $20,000 Methodist Sunday school being another. Orillia's population has been growing so fast of late that the available accommodation is taxed to the uttermost, but the townspeople have opened their homes to provide for the delegates. Full particulars as to credentials, programmes, railway fares, etc., can be secured on application to the Secretary, Mr. Taylor Statten, 15 Toronto street, Toronto.

Result Of The Fowl Supper

As the proceeds of St. Luke's fowl supper, held a short time ago in the Market Hall, a cheque for $220 was placed upon the offertory plate of St. Luke's church yesterday morning. This is the largest sum that has been realized by St. Luke's on an occasion of this kind. It is estimated that almost a thousand people attended the supper, and the ladies are to be congratulated upon the success of their efforts. Special praise is due to Mrs. William Gibbs, the President of the Ladies' Aid, upon whom fell the main responsibility for the arrangements for the supper.

Prof. Doyle At St. John's

At St. John's church Sunday, the preacher was the Rev. Prof. H. T. Doyle, D.D., of the University of Toronto, who preached two eloquent sermons, the evening one to young men being particularly striking. Canon Davidson was officiating in Toronto. Dr. Doyle was the guest of Dr. W. T. Holloway

HIGHER CRITICS

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I thought that I had written my last article on this subject, but it appears that the end is not yet.

We must not allow the higher critics to draw down the blinds to weaken our faith in the Word of God, and to hide from our vision the real truths of the Bible. I do not mind holding the candle to any man who is seeking after truth, but it is another thing when he is seeking after error, and especially when it relates to the Word of God. The minister of our church recently proclaimed before young and old, saint and sinners, that the first and second chapters of Genesis did not agree, and that it contained a contradiction, and advised the people to go home, and read for themselves, with the hope, I suppose, that what he said was true. But I am one who does not believe his statement. I have read and re-read, but have not found the contradiction, with all my experience with the Old Book. I find the theme, the thought, the language in the second chapter differing from the first, but no contradiction.

As I am a man that claims no relation to those who profess to be the fathers of modern thought, clearer visions and broader views, than the sages of the past, I thought it wise to consult commentators, to see if there was any contradiction expressed, or implied, in their expositions of Divine truth, but I found none. Then I called up Professor James Orr, D.D., of the United Free Church College of Glasgow, Scotland—a man of experience, education, and piety; a man whose fame is in all the churches as a Bible student and authority. What does he say respecting the first and second chapters of the Book of Genises? He says: "However it go there, this chapter manifestly stands in its fit place as the introduction to all that follows. Where is there anything like it in all literature? There is nothing, and where in Babylonian legend, or anywhere else. You ask, perhaps, what interest has religious faith in the doctrine of education in any theory or speculation on how the world came to be? I answer, it has the very deepest interest. The interest of religion in the doctrine of creation, is that this doctrine is our guarantee for the dependence of all things on God—the ground of our assurance that everything in nature and Providence is at His disposal. "My help cometh from the Lord, who made heaven and earth." This is sometimes spoken of as a second narrative of creation, and is often said to contradict the first. But this is a mistake. As the critic, Dellmann, points out, this second narrative is not a history of creation, in the same sense of the first, at all. It has nothing to say of the creation of earth, or heaven, or either of the heavenly bodies of the general world of vegetation. It deals simply with men and God's dealings with man when first created. And everything in the narrative is regarded and grouped from this point of view. This being the clear and plain statement of such a man as Dr. Orr, we are satisfied that there is no contradiction in these chapters. I regard it as a serious thing for a minister of the Gospel to proclaim the Word of God to be false before a public congregation. I do not think that Satan has any more useful agents to day in his service than the men who are doing their best to belittle and falsify the Word of God. For my own part, I would rather remain at home with my Bible for my companion than listen to much I have heard of late from the Christian pulpit. But no one need do that. There are churches open where the Gospel is earnestly and faithfully preached.

Y.M.C.A. Campaign

Last call for the Y.M.C.A. open-night.

This evening, now, the Y.M.C.A. is open.

Anyone that likes can go anywhere they like and do anything they like as long as they don't damage furniture or somebody else's anatomy.

It's just this way. Half the young fellows round the town don't know what the Y. is like. They don't know what they are missing in not being members.

So here's your chance. If you don't like the Y. you don't have to join. But, come and see for yourself.

The Y. officials will treat you white. The boys will welcome you heartily.

A last call. Come along.

HASTINGS ITEMS OF INTEREST

Examiner Special.

HASTINGS, DEC. 11. Mr. Harry Peters is receiving the congratulations of his friends on the occasion of his marriage to Miss Pearson of Peterborough. After a short honeymoon trip the young couple will take up residence on Mr. Peter's farm, near Hastings. Mr. and Mrs. Peters have a host of friends who join in wishing them a long and prosperous wedded life.

A number from town went to Campbellford on Thursday to attend the district convention of Epworth Leaguers and Sunday Schools. There were two sessions, afternoon and evening.

The annual meeting of the patrons of Ormonde cheese factory was held last week for the winding up of business of the season, and appointing officers for the ensuing year. A prosperous year is reported.

Mrs. Orr is still in a critical condition. On Friday last she was removed to Picton, where she will visit friends for a season.

Miss Jennie Johnson of Campbellford, has been the guest of her friend Miss E. Tyler.

Miss Stella Armstrong of Havelock has been visiting friends in town.

The Bible Society held its annual meeting on Monday night in the Anglican Church, which was addressed by Rev. Mr. French of Fenelon Falls, who presented the claims of the Society in a very able manner. A collection was taken to aid the good work.

Mr. Wills is confined to his home through illness, but report says that his condition is somewhat improved.

The pulpit of the Methodist church was occupied on Sunday evening by Mr. A. Cunningham of Peterborough, who spoke very ably on the benefits to be derived from a local option by-law. This by-law is to be presented to the citizens of Hastings on the first day of January next.

Mr. Atkinson of Dartford was in town on Thursday.

Quite a number from this vicinity attended the nominations this week, some going to Norwood and some to Warkworth.

Mr. Valleau was in Picton last week.

Mr. R. Mellville of Seymour, gave us a call through the week.

Mr. Richard Walsh, of town, has purchased from Mr. J. Trotter, the farm on which he is residing.

Miss Carrie Doxsee took a trip to Campbellford on Thursday.

A large number attended the "Flower Fete" under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Anglican church on Friday last.

Men's Bill Books, Bill Folds, Card Cases and Letter Cases

We are showing a splendid line of these goods.

Apart from the safety and tidiness they ensure to the man who must carry any considerable amount of cash about him, being "Julian Sale" made goods you are guaranteed the quality of them, and that means a lot to you, even so small things as these are.

Most any man would appreciate having one or another of these pocket conveniences, whether he has to buy it himself or receives it as a gift from someone. You can buy them at almost any price from a half-dollar and up.

ARE YOU FOND OF MUSIC?

Then why not make the Christmas gift for your own family such a present as will appeal to your musical taste? Why not get a Victor Victrola Hornless Gram-o-phone or one of the famous Victor Gram-o-phones for Christmas? The prices of these instruments vary from $20.00 to $250.00, and they may be bought on easy payments if desired. With the list of five thousand famous Victor Records, you can bring before you, evening after evening, the best music of the world's greatest composers, lively marches and those good old patriotic songs that makes the blood tingle and the pulses jump, the newest sentimental ballads, the latest popular airs of the day and the dear old melodies that will live forever. The greatest singers of the world, including Caruso, Melba, etc., sing exclusively for Victor Records.

ABOUT HORSES

THE STUMBLING HORSE

Some horses are naturally addicted to stumbling, others acquire the fault and still others have it thrust upon them by the carelessness or ignorance of the owners.

A STUMBLING COLT INCURABLE

The horse that stumbles when a colt is almost incurable. His manner of travelling may be improved to some extent with careful driving with a tight rein and the moderately high checking, but a born stumbler is a hard care to deal with.

Many horses are made to stumble by wrong shoeing. If shod heavily in front and light behind they are almost certain to acquire the habit.

Weak joints or imperfectly formed legs are also causes of stumbling. Some colts are born with marked evidence of weak knees. We know of some cases where colts at three years that have never been driven were perceptibly knee-sprung. Such an animal can never be cured of this stumbling habit.

AVOID A SLACK REIN

Driving with a slack rein is another cause of stumbling and very often the sole cause. If a horse becomes fatigued it should be kept well up on the rein if driven over rough roads. No good horseman will ever take chances of allowing his horse to fall down by driving with a slovenly rein.

Stumbling often causes bad accidents, not only to the horse, but to the occupants of the vehicle he is drawing. We once saw a fine looking carriage horse who was being driven by a woman who allowed the reins to dangle loosely in her hands fall. He stumbled for more than 15 feet before he finally fell. He overturned the carriage in his struggles and when he was assisted to his feet it was found that both knees were broken and he was rendered useless for life.

A GYPSY FUNERAL

A gypsy funeral, with all the weird rites, the barbaric colour and bizarre ceremonies of the east, was the strange sight witnessed at the quiet little village of Mitcham, Surrey, England, the other day. There had been a camp of Galician gypsies near Mitcham for some weeks, and during their stay there, Sophia, aged twenty-seven, a daughter of the chief, fell ill, and died of pneumonia.

The funeral was made the occasion for a display of all the tribal wealth of jewels and gaudy attire. Three new dresses, the outer one of scarlet, the ancient colour of mourning, were put upon the dead woman herself. A silver girdle was round her body. Strings of red coral and rows of gold coins were displayed about her corsage. There were rings on her fingers, gold earrings in her ears, a necklace of twelve 100 pieces around her neck. Many jewels were woven into her hair. Soap and a comb were put into the coffin in order that she might have the wherewithal to make her toilette before entering into the celestial kingdom, and over all was thrown a cover of fine lace.

Silently, behind the hearse, which carried the body from the hospital, formed up the men of the tribe. They wore heavily braided coats of bright blue cloth, with four rows of large and ornate silver buttons, some of them jewelled with turquoises and red coral. Two or three waistcoats, breeched trousers of dark cloth, down the sides of which were strips of green and scarlet, and top boots embroidered with fantastic stitching, completed their attire. Bareheaded, the aged, mourning chief, a gold chain across his breast, walked in front. They marched to the encampment, maintaining as they went a loud chorus of lamentation. "Oh, God, what have you sent to us?" wailed the chief in his strange language. "Have mercy on her soul," cried his followers. "Oh, God, have mercy," said the chief, and again came the deep chorus from the men, "Oh, God, what have you sent to us?"

THE HIRED MAN

The Alberta Homestead, of Edmonton, puts up a case for the hired man in the following trite fashion. There are, perhaps, few farmers, even in the West, who would take advantage of the hired man as the Homestead indicates, yet there are some who do not hesitate to get a chance, and for those the Homestead's neat bill of sarpsaw may be beneficial.

"The hired man will soon be with you for the harvest. He can have his sleeping quarters in the hay loft or the caboose, as he ought to want nothing better.

"Should he show unusual readiness for work, this is a quality which should be encouraged and 18 hours should be got out of him a day.

"Set him to work right after each meal, as a hired man has no business to fear indigestion, and he can get his rest at night.

"If he's inexperienced at farming, an occasional sneer when he makes a mistake will brace him up, and prevent him from repeating the blunder.

"Give him as many chores to do as possible, especially on Sundays, as he might get into idle ways.

"Try and prevent him from running off to town on Saturday nights, where habits of dissipation might get hold of him. A couple of hours' relaxation with the bucksaw will soon stop this.

"A policy of this kind will soon put any hired man in love with farming and with you, too."

16 Ounces of Unequaled Cough Syrup for 50c

The Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy You Ever Used, or Money Refunded. Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly.

You may not need the $2 which a 50-cent bottle of Pinex saves you, but you do need the wonderful effectiveness of this famous cough remedy. It will usually stop the most obstinate deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours, and has no equal for whooping cough.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, mixed with home-made sugar syrup, gives you 16 ounces—a family supply of the most pleasant and effective cough remedy you ever used. Easily prepared in five minutes—directions in package.

The way this takes hold of a cough and gives instant relief will make you regret that you never tried it before. Stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative and tastes good—children take it willingly. It has a wonderful record in cases of incipient lung trouble and is splendid for croup, asthma, bronchitis, throat trouble, etc.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-ounce bottle, and it is ready for use. Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

CANADIAN CLUB

The next meeting of the Canadian Club will take place in the Oriental hotel on Thursday the 21st, at 8 p.m. and the meeting will be addressed by Dr. W. Peterson of McGill University, on the subject of "Our English Speech." The executive of the Club are most fortunate in being able to arrange to have Dr. Peterson here and the meeting promises to be one of the largest in the history of the club.

Members who have not already paid their annual fees are requested to hand same to the treasurer at the Bank of Ottawa before the next meeting.

Quaker Oats Company Is Not Affected

The C.P.R. elevators at Owen Sound were totally destroyed by fire on Monday evening. These elevators, which were large and filled with grain, will be a serious loss to Owen Sound , as it is questionable whether the C.P.R. will rebuild at Owen Sound, as their new port, Port McNichol, is looked upon as a superior port for haulage.

The Quaker Oats Company at Peterborough had a large quantity of wheat and oats in storage in these elevators, which is a total loss, but Mr. T. H. G. Denne, of the Quaker Oats Company, informs the Examiner that the loss will not affect the company in any way. The grain is covered by insurance and they have sufficient grain in other elevators to keep them running.

WEDDING BELLS

SOUTHWELL—CAMPBELL

The home of Mrs. Wm. Campbell, Baillieboro, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, December 6, when her only daughter, Miss Alice, was united in wedlock to Mr. Oscar Southwell, Whitby, Ont. The bride was given away by Mr. H. Campbell and the young couple were unattended. The Rev. D. A. McKenzie of Centreville Presbyterian Church, officiated, only the immediate friends being present. The bride received a handsome array of presents, showing the high esteem in which she is held by her friends. The young couple left on a trip to Toronto and points west and on their return will reside in Whitby.

A CHRISTMAS PRESENT FOR THE WHOLE WORLD

Think of having given to you or think of being able to give a Christmas present that is genuine joy to the giver or receiver for three hundred and sixty-five days in each twelvemonth! Such a gift is the Victor Victrola Hornless Gram-o-phone. These instruments reproduce the voices of the world's greatest singers so perfectly that one would almost think the living singer was actually before him in person. Moreover, through the famous Victor Records you always have at your command the priceless voices of the world's greatest singers, famoues bands and orchestras, the latest popular hits of the day, the dear old songs of long ago, as well as all the popular music hall hits. When the family gathers around the hearth, all the great entertainers of the world can be with them to enliven the evening, if they possess one of these matchless instruments.

FOR BEAUTIFUL HAIR AND LOVELY SKIN

("Parisienne" in Women's Journal)

"Long, abundant and glossy hair is often the result of dry shampooing. Soap and water 'take the life out' and leave it brittle and colourless. For a dry shampoo mix four ounces of therox with four ounces of corn meal or with four ounces of powdered orris root. Sprinkle a tablespoonful on the head and brush it out and the scalp and hair will be clean, wavy and lustrous.

"To have a clear, velvety complexion, massage the face, neck and arms daily with a solution made by dissolving an original package of mayatone in eight ounces of witch hazel. It make the skin lovely and soft."

THE WINTRY COUNTRY

All lonesome sleeps the country-side
Its lavish harvests gathered in;
The corn is husked, the pumpkins housed
Within the red barns' teeming bin

The leaden clouds hang heavily
Along the lake rim's marshy sedge;
The black brook murmurs mid the rocks
Outlined by snowdrifts on its edge.

The ancient woodland, fire-scarred,
In which the sugar-maples grew,
Lifts high its gaunt arms through the snow
Where soft, leaf-stirring breezes blew.

The creek from foothills of the north
Flows seething, all awash with ice;
It plays with plectrum, forged of frost
Its cheerless song on reeds of rice.

As over heaven's dark-ning arch
Creeps sober twilight toward the west
Drifts shrill the lonely heron's cry,
Lamenting o'er his frost-fringed nest.

The slate-gray snowbirds, black of bill,
With gleaming pinions take their flight
Like war'ring lines of vanquished troops,
Toward the mansions of the night.

Shall come n more the golden days?
Must darkling winter shadow all?
Shall gleam no more the evening star,
Nor music of dear voices call?

Renew, O God, the springs of youth,
Nor let the cherished voices die;
Let life and light return, when blooms
The red rose of the summer sky.

TO BANISH NIGHT-MADE WRINKLES

(Susie Prim in Town Talk)

When one gets up in the morning after a troublesome, sleepless night, haggard and worn, with the tell-tale lines and wrinkles and dark circles under the eyes, here's the thing to quickly make her normal looking and presentable. Let her bathe her face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half pint of witch hasel. Immediately there is a wonderful transformation. One effect is to tighten the skin and obliterate the wrinkles and lines, likewise puffiness under the eyes, etc. The face looksand feels—bright and refreshed, as though insomnia's victim had just awakened from a beauty sleep.

It is a good idea to have a little saxolite and witch hasel on hand for emergency use, the ingredients, which any druggist can supply, being inexpensive and entirely harmless.

DID YOU EVER HEAR CARUSO?

No doubt if you did, you paid a stiff price for your seat. But think what it would mean if you could have Caruso sing for you every evening in the whole year. And think, more, what it would mean if you could have, not only Caruso, but Melba, Sembrich, Eames, Scotti, Schumann-Heink, and a multitude of others all bringing their matchless voices into your own home to entertain you and your friends. You can have all these brought to you—all the best that the world of music affords in song and entertainment, from Caruso to Harry Lauder, from the latest airs of the day to the dear old songs of long ago, from Sousa's Band to perfect dance music. They are all to be found in Berliner Gram-o-phone Company's matchless list of five thousand Victor Records, each of which is the most perfect of its kind.

The Victor Victrola Hornless Gram-o-phone or the famous Victor Gram-o-phone can be bought at prices ranging from only $20.00 to $250.00, and may be had on easy payments if desired. Such instruments as these represent a vast educational influence on the home and offers Christmas gifts that are ever new throughout the whole year. As you listen to these wonderful instruments rendering melodies from flute, violin, or cello, or to the low toned shading of some great singer's voice, you soon come to marvel at the delicacy of the tone quality and the faultless technique. There is no inflection of voice or instrument too fine or soft for these instruments to reproduce perfectly.

These instruments are on sale by dealers everywhere.

LORD KITCHENER'S FRENCH SERVICE

Lord Kitchener is to receive the war medal for having served with the French army in 1870; but though the fact of this service has often been asserted by the French, "K. of K." himself has never either "admitted or denied," remarks the London Chronicle. During the war he was a Woolwich cadet, and in the long vacation he joined his family at Dinan, in Brittany, to rub up his French. Nearest the truth, perhaps, is the writer who says: "Lord Kitchener's first experience of war was under the French flag. In 1870 he enlisted as a private in a mobile battalion under General Chanzy. He saw no fighting, but assisted in some balloon ascents that ended in a chill and an attack of pneumonia."

House of Lords Throws Out the Naval Prize Bill

TREATY IS NOW HELD UP

London, Dec. 13.—The House of Lords last night rejected the naval prize bill by a vote of 145 to 53. The Earl of Selbourne, in moving the rejection, objected to the constitution of the proposed international prize court, pointing out that it gave the British Empire only the same representation as that accorded to petty Central American republics. Furthermore, he said, the bill permitted an appeal from the British Privy Council to the prize court, but no corresponding appeal from the United States Supreme Court, the representatives of the United States having discovered that under their constitution it is impossible to carry an appeal from their supreme court to any international tribunal. It was, therefore, possible, Lord Selbourne argued, to get two sets of conflicting judgments.

The naval prize bill passed its third reading in the House of Commons on Dec. 7, a motion for its rejection being defeated by 172 to 125. Its rejection by the House of Lords had been predicted. The passage of the naval prize bill would be tantamount to approval of the Declaration of London, the international agreement respecting prizes in naval warfare.

According to The London Daily Telegraph, the rejection of the naval prize bill was determined upon by the House of Lords in order to prevent the Government from ratifying the Declaration of London. This procedure will delay the passage of the prize bill for two years, and the Declaration of London cannot be ratified until the prize bill has received the royal assent.

The Prime Minister, however, last June made it plain in the House of Commons that the British Government intended, despite all protests from British admirals, ship owners and chambers of commerce, to force through the ratification of the Declaration of London, which had been approved by the Government after the fullest possible deliberation.

More Suffragettes Sentenced.

London, Dec. 13.—Twenty-two suffragettes, arrested with 200 companions in connection with the demonstration at the House of Commons on Nov. 21, were indicted at the London sessions yesterday. About 200 had been summarily sentenced by the police magistrate at Bow street police court on minor charges.

The accused who appeared yesterday had on their first appearance been committed for trial at the sessions and now had to answer more serious charges of maliciously damaging property.

All the prisoners pleaded not guilty. They were brought in in batches of four. The first group when found guilty refused to undertake to refrain from similar lawlessness in the future and were sentenced to two months in jail.

C.N.R. President Leaves For France.

Montreal, Dec. 13.—Sir Wm. Mackenzie arrived in Montreal yesterday and left at noon for Halifax, on his way to France, to spend Christmas with his son-in-law and daughter, the Count and Countess de Lesseps. He was accompanied by D. B. Hanna, vice-president and general manager, Canadian Northern Railway, who is going to England on business.

Sir William said that he would have no announcement to make regarding the plans of the C.N.R. terminals in Montreal until his return, early in the new year. His representatives in this city, he said, were still hard at work on the scheme, and Col. Davidson, the company's land commissioner, had come down from Toronto yesterday to personally settle up the land end of the scheme.

RULERS ARE PROCLAIMED

Their Majesties George and Mary Are Emperor and Empress

WAS A GORGEOUS PAGEANT

Delhi, Dec. 13.—King George V. and consort, Queen Mary, were proclaimed Emperor and Empress of India yesterday. The culminating act of the monarch's accession to the throne of his vast Indian Dominions took place amid a scene which for richness of color and magnificence of decorations has probably never been surpassed in modern times.

The crowning was followed by an act of generosity on the King-Emperor's part, of which a slight hint had already been given. The viceroy proclaimed that the King-Emperor was to donate a large sum of money to promote the public education, and that further handsome gifts would be made.

The huge amphitheatre, which had been erected in the Durbar camp was thronged with people from an early hour. The bright tissues and sparkling gems of the many Indian princes and the smart uniforms of the soldiers contrasted strongly with the white dress of the European ladies and the sober garb of civilian officials.

The great feudatory princes and rulers of India, with the leading British officials occupied seats of honor near the pavilion located in the centre. Screened from the gaze of the curious by a lattice framework, a number Maharanis and other Indian ladies of high rank occupied two sections of the front galleries.

The interval of waiting was beguiled by the playing of military music. The soldiers played a large part in the Durbar and a guard of honor composed of 100 picked men was drawn up before the central pavilion.

Cheers, mingled with sobs, heralded a little body of veterans, the survivors of the armies which had made the present Durbar possible. The old fighters in their weather-beaten uniforms strove to keep up a show of military formation as they marched to the privileged place allotted them, but generally it was impossible, and many of them limped to their seats.

Almost immediately the vice-regal procession came into view. Escorted by a brilliantly-uniformed native bodyguard, the Viceroy and Lady Hardinge sat in their state carriage, drawn by blooded horses, with outriders uniformed in scarlet and gold.

Carriage after carriage with members o fthe suite followed the imperial pair. The guard presented arms and the bands burst into the royal anthem.

When this gorgeously uniformed line had filed past the imperial and vice-regal parties appeared before the vast assemblage in the Durbar amphitheatre. When they took their seats on the crimson dais the strains of the National Anthem were heard and the people rose as one person and stood in profound silence. It was a pretty group around the four thrones of the Emperor, the Empress, the viceroy and the vicereine at the back of which the imperial and vice-regal staffs and the Imperial Cadet Corps, composed entirely of youthful princes and scions of princely families formed in rank.

The first formal act of the ceremony was performed by the Foreign Secretary, who advanced to the dais and asked permission of the Emperor to open the Durbar. At his signal a long roll from the drums and a thrilling call from the bugles were sounded followed by a triumphant peal of music from the bands. Then a note from the heralds' silver trumpets rang over the plain.

At that moment appeared the striking figure of the imperial herald mounted on a jet black charger and blazing in his brilliant uniform of gold and purple. Behind him were a drummer and sixteen trumpeters, eight British and eight natives. Halting for an instant they sounded another blast and then rode slowly toward the dais where they gave a third call before saluting.

The Emperor then commanded the heralds to read the proclamation announcing the coronation. The herald wheeled his charger round and read aloud so that all could hear that George had been crowned King-Emperor. At that moment the Royal Standard was unfurled from the tall flagstaff in the centre of the arena. The National Anthem was played by the massed bands and as the last notes of the music died away, 101 guns boomed the tidings of the proclamation.

Along the never-ending line of infantry rattled out a continuous firing of blank cartridges.

The herald retired to the entrance of the arena, sounded a further flourish, and the Emperor arose from his throne and bowed to all sides. He sat down once more, the herald called for three cheers for the Emperor, and a mighty roar burst from over 100,000 throats. Natives vied with the British in their acclamations and the cheers within the arena were continued by the troops outside until they extended to the horizon.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, Lord Hardinge announced that the King had resolved to devote immediately fifty lakhs of rupees (about $1,660,000) to the promotion of popular education in India, and that further generous gifts will be made for the same purpose.

He also announced that half a month's pay would be granted to the non-commissioned officers and the men as well as to the reservists of the British army in India, and that officers and men of the native army in India would be eligible hereafter to be awarded the Victoria Cross for bravery on the field of battle. A half month's pay was also granted to subordinate civil servants and certain classes of prisoners were released from jail.

Another important change announced by Lord Hardinge was that the seat of Government was in the future to be transferred from Calcutta to Delhi.

The greatest of Durbars ever held in India then came to an end with the National Anthem and a final burst from the silver trumpets.

As the King-Emperor and Queen-Empress, accompanied by Lord and Lady Hardinge and their suites, left the amphitheatre they were cheered time and again by the crowd until they reached their tents.

Calcutta has been the capital of India since 1773. No intimation had been given out that King George was considering changing the seat of Government. No ancient emperor of India ever dreamed of the magnificence and splendor which yesterday marked the formal proclamation of King George and Queen Mary as Emperor and Empress.

King George is the first reigning British Sovereign to visit the Far East, and native potentates and British officials eclipsed themselves in the grandeur of the setting for the ceremony. Gems of fabulous value gleamed on the 150 native potentates, but their brilliancy was dimmed by the crown of Queen Mary, from which sparkled the famous Koh-i-noor diamond, for ages the choicest possession of the native emperors, and hundreds of other glittering jewels. King George's crown was equally magnificent. It had been made especially for the ceremony, and no inkling of its design had been given the public. In the centre was a 34-karat Indian emerald, surrounded by 6,170 magnificent diamonds.

Changes In Paris.

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—The decision of the Dominion Government, reached within the last few days, to consolidate the various branches of the Canadian service in Paris, means that Mr. Anatole Poindron, trade commissioner, will cease to hold office. The trade and commerce and immigration offices are to be placed under one roof, and Canada is to get more advertising in Paris than has obtained under the old system.

Mr. Poindron was appointed by the late Premier and his work, it is alleged, has not been satisfactory. Under the centralization scheme the Paris offices will, it is expected, be conducted at an annual outlay of $12,000 instead of $30,000, the old figures.

REAUME'S CLOSE CALL

Minister of Public Works Has Only Seventeen Votes

NO PROTESTS AS YET

Toronto, Dec. 13.—Neither W. J. Carstairs, nor F. G. Inwood, the party organizers, have received notification yet that any election in the province will be protested, and it is believed that everything will stand as at present. "It would take several days before anything of this nature would develop," said Mr. Inwood last night, "as any parties wanting to contest an election would make pretty sure of their evidence before they would so so."

Sir James Whitney was quite cheerful but a little tired yesterday. He had nothing to say for publication regarding the election beyond what he said Monday night.

The result in Rainy River is still in doubt. One report has W. A. Preston, the former member re-elected, and another has it that an Independent Conservative was chosen. Sir James has wired for particulars.

Col. Hon. A. J. Matheson, Hon. J. S. Duff and Hon. Dr. Pyne were at the Parliament Buildings yesterday and spent the forenoon talking over the situation with the Prime Minister. The other members of the Cabinet are expected in town by to-night.

When Dame Toronto, Monday, again put on her old Conservative bonnet with the Whitney ribbon on it, which she has worn with few alterations for the past generation, but little surprise was occasioned. A. H. Birmingham, the local Conservative organizer, takes the sweeping victory as a matter of course, and has nothing to say of the result. Mr. Carstairs, the Conservative provincial organizer, experiences no especial elation over the vote in the province, as the net result was, of cours, a foregone conclusion.

Studholme Is Happy.

Hamilton, Dec. 13.—Although greatly fatigued by his strenuous campaign, Allan Studholme was the happiest man in Hamilton yesterday as the result of his decisive victory at the poll over Controller W. H. Cooper, the Conservative candidate. The "old man" was not vainly pulled up, but gave the credit for his magnificent victory to those who had helped in the campaign.

Correct returns as given out yesterday, place Studholme's majority at 668 votes, his total vote being 3,525, while Cooper received 2,857. The vote cast in East Hamilton Monday was little more than 65 per cent. of the strength of the constituency. In the west riding, where interest in the election was not so keen, only a bare 50 per cent. of the vote was polled.

Reaume's Close Call.

Windsor, Dec. 13.—Revised returns show Hon. Dr. Reaume, Conservative, leading by 17. The election is in doubt and is claimed by both sides. A recount will likely be asked for.

C.N.R. Issue Fell Flat.

London, Dec. 13.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The issue of $35,000,000 of C.N.R. stock by Lazars closed early, the underwriter getting 90 per cent. The result shows its unpopularity at the present time considering the unfavorable condition of the market. The issue was of 3 1-2 per cent. 50-year stock at 93, guaranteed by the Dominion Government.

Where Tail Wags the Dog.

Washington, Dec. 13.—Railroad stock juggling, exemplified by the "tail wagging the dog," in the case of the Bessemer and Lake Erie Railroad, over 200 miles long, was discussed at yesterday's session of the house "steel trust" investigating committee. The short-line road is owned absolutely by the U. S. Steel Corporation, which also owns 51 per cent. of the stock of the longer road.

F. C. Baird, general freight agent of the short-line, was a witness. Chairman Stanley brought out that the shorter road's rental of the longer one netted the latter's stockholders about three per cent. a year profits, while the shorter road paid annual dividends of 334 per cent.

Assailant May Be Insane.

Chatham, Dec. 13.—George Senior, the young English immigrant charged with a brutal assault upon his employer, J. W. Robertson of Harwich was remanded yesterday by Magistrate Stanworth for examination by alienists to determine his sanity. If the doctors pronounce Senior to be in his right mind, he will be tried for attempted murder.

Senior was infatuated with his employer's wife and said he tried to kill Robertson because he hated to see him have her. He knocked Robertson down with a spade and was attacking him with a knife when neighbors pulled him off.

Looking Into Intercolonial.

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—Owing to many complaints received by the Government about the management of the Intercolonial Railway, it has been decided to fully investigate conditions on that road.

As a means of investigation, Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways, has appointed Emile Jolly of Quebec, and James A. Macdonald, commissioners, to look into the charges of partisanship and neglect of duty preferred against some high officials of that company.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED
—BY—
J. W. BROWETT
Optometrist

Q. Why is it that glasses are worn so much more now than years ago?

A. Years ago the science of optics or correcting errors of sight was not understood as it is to-day; only old persons or those near-sighted wore Glasses. Now we correct with lenses all errors of sight.

Q. Why is it that cheap glasses do not give satisfaction?

A. Cheap glasses are so faulty in construction and are of such poor quality that they distort the vision and cause pain in the eyes. The optical glass used by us is brilliant, clear and perfect, insuring comfort and ease to the wearer.

Q. Can my headaches be relieved with glasses?

A. A personal visit will be necessary. Let us talk it over.

Walked Out of Court.

Montreal, Dec. 13.—Walking out of the court in the middle of the proceedings, Eugene Hebert's lawyers protested yesterday morning against the re-opening of the famous Hebert marriage case. Despite these protests, however, Mr. Justice Charbonneau supported the lawyers for the wife in the case to the extent of agreeing to hear evidence and legal argument on the merits of the whole case involving the marriage of Roman Catholics by a Protestant minister.

Two witnesses were called by Mrs. Hebert's lawyers. One was Rev. Father Callahan, who was asked to produce a copy of the Ne Temere decree forbidding the marriage of Catholics by Protestant clergy. The decree now becomes a court record, known as exhibit H. 2, and its text was examined with considerable interest by Judge Charbonneau.

Rev. Wm. Timberlake, the Methodist minister who married Eugene Hebert and Emma Clouatre, was also called to produce a copy of the marriage license.

Emphasis was laid on this production of a marriage license because it is in reality issued by the Lieutenant-Governor and empowers the clergyman before whom it is presented to solemnize the marriage.

Swift Plant in Montreal.

Montreal, Dec. 13.—Messrs. Swift & Co., meat packers, of Chicago, are to locate in Montreal and will erect a big storage plant here for the sale and distribution of their products, according to the statement of John J. Murphy, their representative, who is in Montreal to-day.

AFTER 7 YEARS SUFFERING

I Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Waurika, Okla.—"I had female troubles for seven years, was all run down, and so nervous I could not do anything. The doctors treated me for different things but did me no good. I got so bad that I could not sleep day or night. While in this condition I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and began its use and wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. In a short time I had gained my average weight and am now strong and well."—Mrs. SALLIE STEVENS, R. F. D. No. 2, Box 31, Waurika, Okla.

Another Grateful Woman

London, Ont.—I feel as if I could not tell others enough about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was so weak and tired that I could not rest nights. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I know other women who have taken it for the same purpose and they join me in praising it.—Mrs. WM. A. BUFFY, 905 Dame St., London, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has surely cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, and nervous prostration.

"THE AVENGER"

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

The Colonel smoked for a moment or two in thoughtful silence.

"Well," he said, "it isn't like Heneage. I always looked upon him as a man without nerves, a man who would carry thorugh any purpose he set himself to, without going to pieces about it. Shows how difficult it is to understand the most obvious of us."

Wrayson nodded.

"But, after all," he said, "it was not to talk about Heneage that I brought you down here. What I want to know, Colonel, is if you can help me at all with Louise?"

The Colonel's forehead was furrowed with perplexity.

"My dear Herbert," he declared, "there is no man in the world I would sooner have for a son-in-law. But what can I do? Louise won't listen to me in any case. I haven't any authority or any influence over her. I say it to my sorrow, but it's the truth. If it were my little girl down at home, now, it would be a different matter. But Louise has taken her life into her own hands. She has not spoken to me for years. She certainly would not listen to my advice."

"Then if you cannot help me directly, Colonel," Wrayson continued, "can you help me indirectly? I have asked you a question something like this before, but I want to repeat it. I have told you that Louise refuses to marry me. She has something on her mind, some scruple, some fear. Can you form any idea as to what it may be?"

The Colonel was silent for an unusually long time. He was leaning back in his chair, looking up through the cloud of blue tobacco smoke, to the ceiling. In reflection his features seemed to have assumed a graver and somewhat weary expression.

"Yes," he said at last, "I think that I can."

Wrayson felt his heart jump. His eyes were brighter. An influx of new life seemed to have come to him. He leaned forward eagerly.

"You will tell me what it is, Colonel?" he begged.

The Colonel looked at him with a queer little smile.

"I am not sure that I can do that, Herbert" he said. "I am not sure that it would help you if I did. And you are asking me rather more than you know."

Wrayson felt a little chill of disappointment.

"Colonel,' he said, "I am in your hands. But I love your daughter, and I swear that I would make her happy."

The Colonel looked at his watch.

"Do you know where Louise is?" he asked quietly.

No. 17, Frederic Mansions, Battersea," Wrayson answered.

The Colonel rose to his feet.

"I will go down and see her," he said simply. "You had better wait here for me. I will come straight back."

"Colonel—you're a brick," Wrayson declared walking with him towards the door.

"I'll do my best, Herbert," he answered quietly, "but I can't promise. I can't promise anything."

Wrayson watched him leave the club and step into a hansom. He walked a little more slowly than usual, his head was a little bent, and he passed a club acquaintance in the hall without his customary greeting. Wrayson retraced his steps and ascended towards the billiard room with his first enthusiasm a little damped. Was his errand, he wondered, so grievously distasteful to his old friend, or was the Colonel losing at last the magnificent elasticity and vigour which had kept him so long independent of the years?

There were others besides Wrayson who noticed a slight alteration in the Colonel when he re-entered the billiard room an hour or so later. His usual greeting was unspoken, he sank a little heavily into a chair, and he called for a drink without waiting for some one to share it with him. They gathered around him sympathetically.

"Feling the heat a bit, Colonel?"

"Anything wrong downstairs?"

The Colonel recovered himself promptly. He beamed upon them all affectionately and set down an empty tumbler with a little sigh of satisfaction.

"I'm all right, boys,' he declared. "I couldn't find a cab—had to walk further than I meant ,and I wanted a drink badly. Wrayson, come over here. I want to talk to you.'

Wrayson sat down by his side.

"I've done the best I could," the Colonel said. "Things may not come all right for you quite at once, but within a week I fancy it'll be all squared up . I've found out why she refused to marry you, and you can take my word for it that within a week the cause will be removed."

"You're a brick, Colonel," Wrayson declared heartily. "There's only one thing more I'd love to have you to tell me."

"I'm afraid——" the Colonel began.

"That you and Louise were reconciled," Wrayson declared. "Colonel, there can't be anything between you two, of all the people in the world, there can't be anything sufficient to keep you and her, father and daughter, completely apart."

"You are quite right, Wrayson," the Colonel assented, a little more cheerfully. "Well, you may find that all will come right very soon. By-the-bye, I've been talking to the Baroness. I want you to let me be at your rooms to-morrow night."

Wrayson hesitated for a moment.

"You know how we stand?" he asked.

"Exactly," the Colonel answered. "I only wish that I had known before. You will have no objection to my coming, I suppose?"

"None at all," Wrayson declared. "But, Colonel! There is one question more that I must ask you. Did Louise speak to you about her brother?"

The Colonel nodded.

"She blamed me, of course," he said slowly, "because I had never told her. It was his own desire, and I think that he was right. I have telegraphed for him to come over. He will here to-night or to-morrow."

Wrayson left the club, feeling almost light-hearted. It was the old story over again—the Colonel to the rescue!

CHAPTER XL.

Sydney Barnes staggered into his apartment with a little exclamation of relief which was almost a groan. He slammed the door and sank into an easy chair. With both his hands he was grasping it so that his fingers were hot and wet with perspiration. At last he had obtained his soul's desire!

He sat there for several minutes without moving. The blinds were close drawn and the room was in darkness. Gradually he began to be afraid . He rose, and with trembling fingers struck a match. On the corner of the table—fortunately he knew exactly where to find it—was a candle. He lit it, and holding it over his head, peered fearfully around. Convinced at last that he was alone he set it down again, wiped the perspiration from his forehead, and opening a cupboard in the chiffonier, produced a bottle and a glass.

He poured out some spirit and drank it. Then, after rummaging for several moments in his coat pocket, he produced several crumpled cigarettes of a cheap variety. One of these he proceeded to smoke, whilst with trembling fingers, he undid the packet which he had been carrying, and began a painstaking study of its contents.

A delicate perfume stole out into the room from those closely pressed sheets, so eagerly clutched in his yellow-stained fingers. A little bunch of crushed violets slipped to the floor unheeded. Ghoul-like he bent over the pages of delicate writing, the intimate, passionate cry of a soul seeking for its mate. They were no ordinary love letters. Mostly they were beyond the comprehension of the creature who spelt them out word for word, seeking all the time to appraise their exact monetary value to himself. But for what he had heard he would have found them disappointing. As it was, he gloated over them. Two thousand pounds a year his clever brother had earned by merely possessing them! He looked at them almost reverently. Then he suddenly remembered what else his brother had earned by their possession, and he shivered. A moment later the electric bell outside pealed, and there came a soft knocking at the door.

A little cry—half stifled—broke from his lips. With numbed and trembling fingers he began tying up the letters. The perspiration had broken out upon his forehead. Some one to see him! Who could it be? He was quite determined not to go to the door. He would let no one in. Again the bell! Soon they would get tired of ringing and go away. He was quite safe so long as he remained quiet. Quite safe, he told himself feverishly. Then his pulses seemed to stop beating. There was a rush of blood to his head. He clutched at the sides of his chair, but to rise was a sheer impossibility.

The thing which was terrifying him was a small thing in itself—the turning of a latchkey in the door. Before him was his own—he knew of no other! Yet some one was opening. had opened his front door! He sprang to his feet at last with something which was almost a shriek. The door of the room in which he was, was slowly being pushed open. By the dim candlelight he could distinguish the figure of his visitor standing upon the threshold and peering into the room.

His impulse was, without doubt, one of relief. The figure was the figure of a complete stranger. Nor was there anything the least threatening about his appearance. He saw a tall, white-haired gentleman, carefully dressed with military exactitude, regarding him with a benevolent and apologetic smile.

"I really must apologise," he said, "for such an unceremonious entrance. I felt sure that you were in, but I am a trifle deaf, and I could not be sure whether or not the bell was ringing. So I ventured to use my own latchkey—with, as you are doubtless observing—complete success."

"Who are you, and what do you want?" Barnes asked, finding his voice at last.

"My name is Colonel Fitzmaurice," was the courteous reply. "You will allow me to sit down? I have the pleasure of conversing, I believe, with Mr. Sydney Barnes?"

"That's my name," Barnes answered. "What do you want with me?"

Despite his visitor's urbanity, he was still a little nervous. The Colonel had a somewhat purposeful air, and he had seated himself directly in front of the door.

"I want," the Colonel said calmly, "that packet which you have just stolen from Mrs. Morris Barnes, and which you have in your pocket there!"

Barnes rose at once, trembling, to his feet. His bead-like eyes were bright and venomous. He was terrified, but he had the courage of despair.

"I have stolen nothing," he declared. "I don't know what you're talking about. I won't listen to you. You have no right to force your way into my flat. Colonel or no colonel, I won't have it. I'll send for the police."

The Colonel smiled.

"No," he said, "don't do that. Besides, I know what I'm talking about. I mean the packet which I think I can see sticking out of your coat pocket. You have just stolen that from Mrs. Barnes' tin trunk, you know."

"I have stolen nothing," the young man declared, "nothing at all. I am not a thief. I am not afraid of the police!"

The Colonel smiled tolerantly.

"That is good," he said. "I hate cowards. But I am going to make you very much afraid of me—unless you are wise and give me that packet."

Barnes breathed thickly for a moment. Coward he knew that he was to the marrow of his bones, but other of the evil passions were stirring in him then. His narrow eyes were alight with greed. He had the animal courage of vermin hard pressed.

"The packet is mine," he said fiercely. "It's nothing to do with you. Get out of my room."

He rose to his feet. The Colonel awaited him with equable countenance. He made, however, no advance.

"Young man," the Colonel said quietly, "do you know what happened to your brother?"

Sydney Barnes stood still and shivered. He could say nothing. His tongue seemd to cleave to the roof of his mouth.

"Your brother was another of your breed," the Colonel coninued. "A blackmailer! A low-living, evil-minded brute. Do you know how he came by those letters?"

"I don't know and I don't care," Barnes answered with a weak attempt at bluster. "They're mine now, and I'm going to stick to them."

The Colonel shook his head.

"He broke his trust to a dying man," he said softly—"to a man who lay on the veldt at Colenso with three great wounds in his body, and his life's blood staining the ground. He had carried those letters into action with him, because they were precious to him. His last thought was that they should be destroyed. Your brother swore to do this. He broke his word. He turned blackmailer!"

"You're very fond of that word," Barnes muttered. "How do you know so much?"

"The soldier was my son," the Colonel answered, "and he did not die. You see I have a right to those letters. Will you give them to me?"

Give them up! Give up all his hopes of affluence, his dreams of an easy life, of the cheap luxuries and riches which formed the Heaven of his desire! No! He was not coward enough for that. He did not believe that this mild-looking old gentleman would use force. Besides, he could not be very strong. He ought to be able to push him over and escape!

"No-" he answered bluntly, "I won't!"

The Colonel looked thoughtful.

"It is a pity," he said quietly. "I am sorry to hear you say that. Your brother—when I asked him, made the same reply."

Barnes felt himself suddenly grow hot and then cold. The perspiration stood out upon his forehead.

"I called upon your brother a few days before his death," the Colonel continued calmly. "I explained my claim to the letters and I asked him for them. He too refused! Do you remember, by-the-by, what happened to your brother?"

Sydney Barnes did not answer, but his cheeks were like chalk. His mouth was a little open, disclosing his yellow teeth. He stared at the Colonel with frightened, fascinated eyes.

"I can see," the Colonel continued, "that you remember, Young man," he added, with a curious alteration in his tone, "be wiser than your brother! Give me the packet!"

"You killed him," the young man gasped. "It was you who killed Morris."

The Colonel nodded gravely.

"He had his chance," he said "even as you have it."

There was a dead silence. The Colonel was waiting. Sydney Barnes was breathing hard. He was alone, then, with a murderer. He tried to speak, but found a difficulty in using his voice. It was a situation which might have abashed a bolder ruffian.

The Colonel rose to his feet.

"I am sorry to hurry you," he said "but we are already late for our appointment with Wrayson and his friends."

Sydney Barnes snatched up the packet and retreated behind the table. The Colonel leaned forward and blew out the candle.

"I can see better in the dark," he remarked calmly. "You are a very foolish young man!"

CHAPTER XLI.

Wrayson glanced at the clock for the twentieth time.

"I am afraid," he said gravely, "that Mr. Sydney Barnes has been one too many for us."

"Do you think," Louise asked "that he has persuaded the girl to give him the packet?"

"It looks like it," Wrayson confessed.

Louise frowned.

"Of course," she said, "I think that you were mad to let her go before . She had the letters here in the room. You would have been perfectly justified in taking them from her.'

"I suppose so," Wrayson assented, doubtfully. "Somehow, she seemed to get the upper hand of us towards the end. I think she suspected that some of us knew more than we cared to tell her about her husband's death."

Louise shivered a little and remained silent. Wrayson walked to the window and back.

"To tell you the truth," he said, "I expected someone else here to night who has failed to turn up."

"Who is that?" the Baroness asked.

Wrayson hesitated for a moment, and glanced towards Louise.

"Colonel Fitzmaurice," he said.

Louise seemed to turn suddenly rigid She looked at him steadfastly for a moment without speaking.

"My father," she murmured at last.

Wrayson nodded.

"Yes!" he said.

"But—what has he to do with this?" Louise asked, with her eyes fixed anxiously, almost fearfully, upon his.

"I went to him for advice," Wrayson said quietly. "He has been always very kind, and I thought it possible that he might be able to help us. He promised to be here at the same hour as the others. Listen! There is the bell at last."

The Colonel entered the room. Louise half rose to her feet. Wrayson hastened to meet him.

"Herbert," he said, with an affectionate smile, "forgive me for being a little late. Baroness, I am delighted to see you—and Louise."

The Baroness held out both her hands, which the Colonel raised gallantly to his lips. Louise he greeted with a fatherly and unembarrassed smile.

"I must apoologize to all of you," he said, "but perhaps this will be my best excuse."

Fearful Headaches
Stomach Bad, No Appetite, Was Losing Weight and Strength
Wonderful Change When Health Was Restored by
DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD
Headache is a symptom and not a disease in itself. It acts as a danger signal to warn you of serious trouble.
By reading Mr. Donneral's letter you wil be satisfied that there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a means of building up the system and removing the cause of headaches, sleeplessness and indigestion.
Mr. Charles Donneral, Kleinburg, Ont., writes: "I wish to communicate to you the great cure which I received from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food For over two years I suffered from fearful headaches, my appetite was always poor, and the stomach bad. I took medicines from physicians, but the headaches persisted, and I was rarely free from them.
"Reading about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I began using it, with little idea that I would be benefitted. I had become thin and weak, but the very first box helped me, and with continued treatment I have been cured and feel like a new man. The headaches have disappeared, y appetite is good and digestion excellent. I write this letter in hope that other sufferers from headache may use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and be cured."

DOMESTIC HINTS

The following recipes will produce results which are both delicious and wholesome. Most of them are simple to make and none of them is very expensive.

CHOCOLATE CARAMELS

Mix one-quarter of a pound of grated chocolate (unsweetened), a pound of brown sugar, four tablespoonfuls of butter, half a cupful of cream and half a cupful of molasses. Place over a slow fire, stirring until the ingredients are thoroughly melted and mixed. Do not stir again; but boil the mixture until it is brittle when a few drops are placed in ice water for half a minute. Remove from the fire and add a teaspoonful of vanilla; pour the candy into a thoroughly-greased, shallow pan and allow it to cool. When nearly cold, cut into squares with a greased sharp knife; then cool further, and when hard, wrap each square separately in waxed paper and put it in a dry place. It is best not to try to make caramels in damp or rainy weather.

Should you prefer vanilla caramels, substitute vanilla for the chocolate flavouring.

CRYSTALIZED POPCORN

Take enough kernels to make three quarts of popcorn when finished. Put them into a popper and, shaking the popper up and down, hold it under the cold water faucet until all of the kernels are thoroughly saturated. Place it on the back of the range to dry, after which you can pop it in the regular manner over a hot fire, shaking the popper all the time. This method of treatment will prevent the usual hard centres in the kernels.

To crystallise the popcorn, mix a cupful of granulated sugar, one tablespoonful of butter and three tablespoonfuls of water; boil until it candies. Then stir in the three quarts of popcorn and mix until all of the corn is well covered. Pour on sheets of buttered paper to cool.

FROSTED FUDGE

Mix three cupfuls of sugar, a cupful of milk, two squares of chocolate and one tablespoonful of butter; bring slowly to a boil. Then boil hard for about five minutes. Remove from the stove; add a teaspoonful of vanilla and beat until thick and creamy. The secret of good fudge lies in the beating. Some cooks boil longer and beat less; but the better plan by far is to boil as little as possible (usually only until the mixture in the pot will follow the spoon) and then to beat regularly in the same direction until the mixture is of sufficient consistency. When this stage has been reached, turn the fudge into a buttered, shallow pan and place it just outside the oven.

Now boil one-half cupful of milk and two cupfuls of sugar. After six minutes remove from the fire; add two teaspoonfuls of butter and one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat this, too, until it is creamy, and pour it over the chocolate fudge already in the pan. Set it away to cool; when nearly hard, cut it into squares.

MARSHMALLOW FUDGE CAKES

Make a potful of chocolate fudge according to the directions in the first part of the previous recipe; but do not pour it into the pan as stated. Instead, grease a number of muffin pans, or line them with waxed paper. This last will be found to be the more satisfactory, because if the paper extends somewhat over the edge of the dish, the individual cakes can be lifted out and the paper simply peeled off, thus avoiding the risk of breaking the edges of the cakes by digging them out of the pan. Pour the fudge into these little pans to the depth of three-fourths of an inch. Into the centre of each cake press a marshmallow and allow the cakes to harden. Six or eight marshmallows dropped into the fudge during the beating process will make it richer and tastier. These fudge cakes are a most attractive form in which to serve fudge.

PECAN KISSES

Combine the whites of six eggs with fifteen more than level tablespoonfuls of white sugar, and beat thoroughly until of sufficient consistency to stand alone. Beat lightly into this a small cupful of pecan kernels. Drop on greased brown paper and bake in a moderate oven. Take care not to burn.

MAPLE PUFFS

To one pound of maple sugar and one cupful of brown sugar add a cupfull of water and boil without stirring until it reaches the firm, ball stage. Cut one dozen marshmallows into pieces, and add them to the mixture in the saucepan, which has been removed from the fire; cover and let stand for five minutes. Mix the syrup well again, and pour slowly over the well-beaten whites of two eggs. Beat the mixture all the time, and when it begins to harden so that it will hold its shape, stir into it one-half cupful of candied cherries cut fine, one cupful of chopped English walnuts, and one-half cupful of candied pineapple. Mold into small cakes and lay on waxed paper; then place a cherry on top of each, and set away to get hard.

CANDIED NUTS

Into a saucepan put one cup of brown sugar, one-third cup of corn syrup, one teaspoonful of vinegar, one teaspoonful of glycerine and one-half cupful of water. Boil without stirring until it is brittle, when put into ice-water; then remove from the fire and let stand for three minutes until the syrup ceases to boil. Place the nuts to be candied, carefully shelled, on a shallow, buttered pan; pour the syrup over them, and set the nuts away to cool.

NUT BARS

Prepare nuts of any kind—almonds, walnuts, peanuts, etc.—by removing the inner skins and chopping them. Spread the nuts evenly in a broad, shallow pan, the sides and bottom of which have been greased with fresh butter. In another pot mix one pound of granulated sugar with half a cupful of water; add a pinch of cream of tartar, and boil without stirring until the mixture is thick without being very brittle. Pour this syrup over the chopped nuts and set the candy in a cool place to get hard. When it begins to get stiff, cut it into bars with a sharp, greased knife. If allowed to stand for a few days, the candy will become soft and acquire a delicious flavour.

COATED TONGUE HEADACHE DIZZY SPELLS

Your overworked stomach is on strike. It refuses to secrete pepsin enough to act upon the food. Refuses also to secrete acid enough to enable the peptic secretion to do its work.

What's the result?—dyspepsia, headache, sick all over.

Give to the stomach the assistance it requires—or in other words try Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which cure more weak stomachs than any other medicine you know of.

Dr Hamilton's Pills put the kind of life into a weak stomach that enables it to digest and assimilate all kinds of food.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills

Cured Mr. William Martin, a Well-Known Lumberman in Parry Sound.

"... consider that Dr. Hamilton's Pills make the best all round medicine. My stomach got disordered and all kinds of complications set in. My blood grew thin, my color got pale, and I had the worst kind of headaches. The food I ate all disagreed with me and I was constantly bilious and suffering from acute dyspepsia. A wonderful change took place when I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they gave me appetite and strong digestion. I had no more bad dreams, no sick stomach or headache. I was in fact like a new man, and will always recommend and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills are sure to benefit at once. Try them. 25c per box, at all dealers, and insist on having only Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. In yellow boxes only.

SLUMBER

Sweet slumber, kiss my eyelids
And lull me into rest;
So many weary hours have passed
Since I with sleep was blest.
At thought of the day approaching
My soul is sore possessed.

I am longing, oh so fervently!
For that oblivion deep
That wraps one about so tenderly
In a sweet and dreamless sleep,
While over the tired sleeper
Angels their vigils keep.

Sleep—what a boon to the weary!
When night steals o'er the plain
And Nature, with loving fingers,
Unknots the tangled skein,
And we lose for awhile our troubles,
Until morning dawns again!

THE TELL-TALE HEART

A Cambridge doctor declares that one can tell a woman's age by feeling her pulse.—News Item.

He thought his Chloe's face was fair,
Until he felt her pulse;
Eternal faith he oft would swear,
Until he felt her pulse.
Her girlish freshness he would praise,
He liked her coy and youthful ways,
But, oh, he fled in sad amaze,
When once he felt her pulse.

"Be still, my beating heart!" said Chloe,
And hide the tell-tale pulse,
For all my ardent swains will go
Enlightened by my pulse!"
What use are Psyches, puffs or "rats,"
Imported gowns or picture hats,
Or even confidential chats:—
I can't massage my pulse—

So now when Chloe entertains,
She's mindful of her pulse
And always artfully refrains
From sleeves that show her pulse.
Her strategy is better planned,
The lights are soft, the sofa manned—
But no one holds sweet Chloe's hand.
It's much too near her pulse.

THE CAVE DWELLERS OF DIEPPE

Most of us who have strained our eyes for the first glimpse of the French shore when crossing the channel from Newhaven to Dieppe will have noticed a number of black holes which honeycomb the rocks. At first they are mere specks, like the pips on a domino, but as we draw near to the harbour they present an appearance of romance and mystery—dark, yawning chasms, the ideal homes of pirates and smugglers.

Few travellers trouble to visit them, though they are easy of access—indeed, little more than a stone's throw on either side of the popular little bathing resort. Nor do the good people of Dieppe take the slightest interest in the strange troglodyte habitations which have existed for centuries at their very gates. Ask a tradesman or a coffee house waiter, and he will shrug his shoulders with a contemptuous smile over the proverbial madness of inquisitive foreigners. He believes there are some caverns, but caverns are not unusual in rocks. Inhabited? Oh, yes, perhaps, but only by a few fisher-folk or vagabonds who will not work. Far better be content to seek your diversion at the Casino.

Now, I happen to have taken an interest in troglodytes for a very long time. I have sought them out in remote parts of Tunisia; I have explored them among the fastnesses of the Sierra Nevada; I am always excited by the rumour of gnome-like beings who dwell underground. So it was not long before I made a pilgrimage to the shrines of the cave-dwellers of Dieppe.

Their metropolis, or palace, consists of two lofty halls, approached by huge triangular apertures, like the tent-doors of some spirit of the mountains. During the greater part of the day coils of thick blue smoke emerge lazily and perplex the photographer. It might be the breath of some mysterious demon, for the few little wood fires scarcely suffice to account for so much reek. They have a strange effect, these apertures, when seen from the rough mound which is their avenue.

But when you enter the two great halls and your eyes have grown accustomed to the gloom you realise a region of twilight. Right at the end, some hundred yards within, you may see to read in the daytime. There is a pungent smell of wood-smoke and stale, unwashed humanity. This is more especially so in one of the halls, which I am describing, for here the habitations are mainly composed of rags. On either side of the entrance and right down one wall are ragtents, rag-screens, heaps and bundles of rags, the only shelter against the fury of the elements.

In a little recess, like a porter's lodge, lives one old woman, the doyenne or leading lady of the cave. As a faint attempt at privacy she has hung on a string a few rags, the colour of mud-stained sails, and propped them up with bits of wood, doubtless washed up by the sea. As for her furniture, it suggests wreckage or the accumulations of rag-picking during many years. The humblest marine store would disdain them, but she takes a pride in every item, and delights to recount its history. Her chief possession is a primeval box-mattress, which stands up to air during the day. At a pinch it can be used to shut her in, like a door. As none of the other cave-dwellers possess so near an approach to a bed, it is doubtless evidence of aristocracy. On a rickety table against the rock she has arranged her bric-a-brac—old jam pots, pieces of broken china, the fragment of a candlestick, and so forth. In the centre of her lair the rest of her chattels are piled higgledy-piggledy; lame, knock-kneed tables, a barrel, some packing cases, various nondescript receptacles for what ordinary people would regard as rubbish. —and—most important of all—an old petroleum tin, which does duty for all her cooking.—From "The Troglodytes of Dieppe," in the November Wide World Magazine.

ABOUT HOGS

1. Where skim milk is available, good returns can be got from feeding three pounds skim or buttermilk to one pound of a mixture of corn and shorts. As the pig grows, gradually reduce the shorts. Towards the end of the fattening period, the slop should be limited, as hogs seem to "finish" better on small amounts of water or milk.

2. The most common practice among swill feeders is to give the pigs all the swill they will clean up, endeavouring to get a growthy hog. Usually they are fed little or no corn, and are sold in a half-fat condition. As previously mentioned, much cheaper gains could be got by adding one pound tankage to 10 or twenty pounds swill. Finishing on corn would insure a better grade of pork.

3. Still another system utilizes hog-power for the harvesting of clover, rape, corn, or in fact, any kind of pasture, and this is something that can be used to good advantage in connection with the other two systems.

BREEDING

Every man who has had experience in the hog business knows how hard it is to profitably feed a "stunted" pig or a "runt." The former can be prevented by keeping the pigs healthy and liberally supplied with a balanced ration. But the latter can only be avoiding by selecting with great care sows capable of producing strong, healthy litters.

There is a marked difference in the number and vigour of pigs farrowed by sows of the same breed, and even greater difference between the breeds. Ordinarily, Poland-China sows farrow small litters (6-8 pigs), but the pigs fatten quickly and mature easily. On the other hand, Yorkshire sows produce large litters (10-15 pigs), which develop into large, growthy hogs. Berkshires and Duroc-Jerseys fall between the above extremes, both as regards size of litters and fattening qualities.

MEN—YOU NEED NERVE

Wonderful Nervous System

EARLY INDISCRETIONS AND EXCESSES HAVE UNDERMINED YOUR SYSTEM

The nerves control all actions of the body so that anything that debilitates them will weaken all organs of the system. Early indiscretions and Excesses have ruined thousands of promising young men. Unnatural Drains sap their vigor and vitality and they never develop to a proper condition of manhood. They remain weaklings, mentally, physically and sexually. How you feel? Are you nervous and weak, despondent and gloomy, specks before the eyes with dark circles under them, weak back, kidneys irritable, palpitation of the heart, bashful, debilitating dreams, sediment in urine, pimples on the face, eyes sunken, hollow cheeks, careworn expression, poor memory, lifeless, distrustful, lack energy and strength, tired mornings, restless nights, changeable moods, premature decay, bone pains, hair loose, etc.

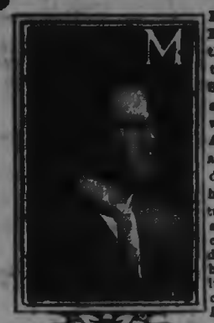
LIVING A LIFETIME IN SIXTY SECONDS OF DIRE PERIL

SCULPTOR Describes the Thrills of Clinging to a Bowlder, Tottering Far Above a Gorge and of Plunging Down Mountainside to Sway Over the Brink of a Precipice.



PHIMSTER PROCTOR

R. A. PHIMSTER PROCTOR is one of the best known sculptors in the United States. He has made a special study of the wild animals of the American continent and his various expeditions have brought him many adventures. He is also an artist, and his water colors, in which are depicted the scenes he has visited, form an important addition to contemporary art. The naturalness and simplicity of his work are owing to his close contact with the animal world which he portrays.

Perilous Adventures Told by and of Living Persons

BY A. PHIMSTER PROCTOR.

(Copyright 1911 by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

LIFE has moments which are so intense that in them seems compressed the action of years. The longest and most thrilling minute I ever passed was on the Cascade range of mountains in the State of Washington.

I was on a sketching trip in the Northwest, observing the traits and the habits of wild animals for use in my work as a sculptor.

So far as form is concerned, one may find in a zoological park or in a menagerie models which well serve his purpose. Only by observing the creatures of the wild in their native surroundings, however, can the sculptor portray those subtle qualities which are so essential to a true interpretation of the ways of the world of beasts.

My guide was a sturdy youth of eighteen named Martin, and although young he had had considerable experience as a mountain climber. We travelled in as light climbing order as possible. Our suits were of khaki, light in weight but strong and stout. We wore leggins, and our shoes were covered on the soles with projecting spikes and clamps, which would enable us to get a firm foothold as we climbed. I carried a revolver in a holster strapped to my side, while the sketching outfit, containing board, brushes and paints, was in a thin case which was strapped to my back like a knapsack. Martin carried a rope, an ice axe and provisions.

We started in our ascent of one of the tallest peaks one bright winter morning to make our way to a realm of snow and ice. Although we were ascending at what might be termed the rear of the mountain, the climbing was arduous and often painfully slow. The summits of the Cascades are always crowned with white, and even in the fall of the year the sides are in glistening coverings. Half way to the top we worked our way up the slippery steeps among the clouds, which hung like bands upon the purplish crags.

It is one of the wonders of nature that goats are able to keep so secure a footing upon what seem to men inaccessible perpendicular heights. We could see them at times leaping with ease from one ledge to another, although in the distance even the narrow holds which they had found were not visible.

As one essays these pathways himself he gains some idea of the agility and fearlessness of these wonderful creatures. Even they, however, are likely to err and to miscalculate their distances, although that is rare. We had started at seven o'clock in the morning and at times we crawled so slowly toward the regions of mist and snow that it seemed as if we should never reach them. The air was cold and bracing, but for all that we were in a glow, and the blood tingled in our veins from the exercise. Beyond us were the sheer cliffs, which, in the distance, loomed as great walls, with here and there a light patch, which suddenly appeared to be endowed with life and shifted its position in the twinkling of an eye—a goat changing its foothold.

For the most part, however, we had little time to watch the capers of our fellow climbers, for we had to concentrate our attention at every turn on the problems of ascent. The mountain streams were covered with masks of ice and snow, which arched like bridges over the beds of torrents. Here we had to proceed with the utmost caution, for a misstep would have caused us to fall into the gorge, and after that a rolling descent of hundreds of feet would have marked the close of the expedition. Often we cut steps into the ice which veiled the rocks, hollowing out places where we could place our feet, after the manner of Arctic explorers.

Upon the Tottering Bowlder.

This was painfully slow work, and under any other conditions it would have been a task which I should not have cared much to undertake. Mountain climbing in the Cascades is difficult and exciting work enough. After cutting a foothold in the glasslike surface we balanced ourselves, cut one immediately above it in the slightly sloping side, and then swung ourselves to the next notch in this quest of "atmosphere." Certainly there was atmosphere of all kinds in that region. At several points we worked our way upward by these companionways of ice among the steep which in the distance would seem impassable and impenetrable to man.

Then came a large expanse where there was only the dark surface of the earth and rock at almost perpendicular ascent it seemed, but one which a goat would have essayed with ease. Martin went ahead, leading the way at this point, and he went nimbly enough. As I was making my way in this region I clasped with my arms a bowlder which was projecting from the mountain side. It may have been there for ages, for aught I know, balancing insecurely there, with nothing to disturb its equilibrium. It needed only my weight to disturb the status of things. As I rested my hands upon it I felt the rock give and away beneath me.

I suppose that I acted largely from instinct. The moment I felt that peculiar vibration of this half ton fragment of stone I threw myself upon it, face down, and so placed my body over its edge that I was able to stay there for a moment, holding myself to the stone by pressing its sharp edge up into my lower ribs. This left my hands free, and as quickly as I could I grasped another projecting rock and drew myself over to it.

The bowlder from which my weight had been removed stirred, paused for a moment, then slipped from its resting place and went plunging down the mountainside. It woke the echoes in its swift descent and tore its way over unaccustomed ways, and smaller stones, fragments of ice and débris, dislodged by its passage, followed more slowly in its flight. From the comparatively secure footing which I had gained I worked myself up to a region of safety.

We gained the top of the mountain at noon after a five hours' climb and sat down to rest, to feast our eyes upon the glorious panorama and, what was more materially important, to feed our famished stomachs.

There was a flock of goats at the top of the mountain, and after luncheon we spent an hour or so in watching them. I made several sketches. Then, as we were in need of fresh meat, I killed one of them with my revolver. We started back to our camp in the valley, proceeding along the top of the mountain, intending to go back by the same way in which we had come. I was in the lead, and behind me, a few paces distant, was Martin, the guide.

"My Grip Held—I Was Swinging Between Earth and Sky, My Feet Hung Over Death—Above Me Was Life."

Three thousand feet below was the valley, lying at the base of this great rampart of nature. I was dragging the body of the goat after me by its hind legs. I turned to look for the last time upon the scene of varied beauty which stretched for miles in every direction.

Tumbling Down the Mountain.

The body of the goat suddenly slipped on the ground, slid downward, knocked against my legs, hurled me from my feet and in a second I was sliding down the side of the mountain, not the one by which we had come, but the steeper one. I was sliding down a descent pitched at what seemed an angle of about forty-five degrees, and that for only a few feet, which served as the approach to the edge of a great precipice hundreds of feet in depth. The action of that time must have been compressed into seconds, yet so vividly was everything impressed upon my mind and memory that every incident seemed to have its leisurely course.

I realized that I was on my way to sure and sudden death. Only a brief respite intervened between the then and the future. I pictured to myself all the horrors of that swift descent, yet my senses at the same time were strung to the tension of alertness. The slope was uneven and rocky, and I bounced from one hard projection to another. I flung out my arms and legs in either direction to stay; what seemed the inevitable.

The body of the goat, although it had been the first to slip, strangely enough slid down more slowly than my own. Being lighter than I was and a dead, limp mass, it must have found occasional lodgement in hollows until again started on its course.

Rising from the surface of the mountain at this point was a ledge which projected above the slope for several feet and in the angle where met ledge and slope was a scraggy bush, with its branches rising stiffly upward to the sky.

Here was a ray of hope of which I was acutely conscious, and with frantic movements of arms and legs I guided my sliding descent as best I could to that patch of green branches. Swifter and swifter I sped. Rods away seemed the bush and already I felt about me the eddying currents of air as I rolled toward doom. A branch brushed my feet. I summoned all my strength and, leaning forward, caught desperately at the whirl of green.

My grip held. I was swinging between earth and sky. My feet hung over death—above me was life. I was on my back, and, holding with clenched fingers to the wiry branches. Had I caught branches which were pointing downward I do not believe that it would have been possible for me to keep even this slender hold. My position was only a temporary reprieve and my life was still hanging in the balance.

It was a reminder of fate which whizzed past me—the body of the goat, released at last from the grasp of the bowlders. It passed within a few inches of me, so close that the air which whirled about its swiftly moving form fanned my face. Down it went, plunged off the incline at my feet and disappeared in the depths.

Face to Face with Death.

Hanging there at the verge of extinction I passed the longest minute of my life, if indeed it was as long as sixty seconds, before from the depths of the gorge, hundreds of feet below, came the dull sound of impact which told me that the body of the goat had reached the rocks at the base of the wall of rock.

I pictured to myself the broken, bruised body which I knew was lying there when the dull, muffled sound came up from the base of the great crag on which I still hung. In the place of the form which had just hurtled down the rocks I placed myself and closed my eyes as though to shut out the vision.

Then again I flung all my strength into perfecting escape. I shifted my grasp of the bush. I was able to face the mountain and slowly dragged myself to the bush. It was firm enough to hold me, and I flung my legs over it and rested.

Martin, who was the custodian of the tackle, threw the slender rope to me, and by its aid I scrambled to the crest of the towering height.

I was saved.

After that the story is soon told. We proceeded down the mountain by the way we had come, and at dusk we picked up the body of the goat. Its horns had been broken off and its bones, as we afterward found, were bundles of splinters.

That night I counted seventeen black and blue bruises on my body and smiled over every one as the sign of my escape from the peril of the Cascades.

THE SUFFRAGETTE AND MARRIAGE.

THE question is asked, Why should a man not marry a suffragette? The answer is simple enough. He should not, because if he will only restrain his impetuosity and wait around until the suffragette gets her clutch tightened on all the rights she thinks belong to her equally with the men she will marry him, thus obtaining results without effort on his part, and at the same time promoting the possibilities of domestic harmony which nobody ever knows how it will sound before it is too late.

"What has that got to do with it?" you inquire. Listen. Savants who investigate and are proficient in sociologic, scientific, biologic, psychologic and domestic statistics reliably inform us that under existing social conditions something like ninety-nine per cent of marriages are cases of men marrying women. These highbrows of statistics do not affirm that this is necessarily the cause of so much of the domestic infelicity we read about and hear about and get next to in our own families occasionally, but the fact remains that the men are doing the marrying, and they are either not properly qualified for the work or they are careless and neglectful.

Be that as it may, it is evident that there is a vast amount of domestic infelicity which is preventable, if taken in time, and if the women were doing the marrying it may be predicated, upon their realising that they hold the majority of the stock in the domestic corporation, that they would exercise such care in their selection of minor stockholders as almost to guarantee perfect and permanent satisfaction. If they made mistakes they could not, at least, saddle the blame on anybody except themselves, and the average woman will endure almost anything before she will admit that she is in the wrong in getting in wrong. Therefore the proposition should be obvious to the most obtuse that the man should not marry the suffragette, who is, after all, but a woman in disguise.

W. J. LAMPTON.

THE KNEE-LENG.. CORSETS.

AS skirts grow flimier the problem of the corset becomes more and more perplexing, and the latest solution offered by those who make a special study of fashion's vagaries in coutilie and bone is a flexible garment reaching from bust to knee which, when properly adjusted, does not show where it is discontinued.

It has little resemblance to the old time corset, for there are few bones, sometimes only front steels and a moderately stiff whalebone at each side over the hips.

The wearer of this corset has perfect freedom of movement. She may bend at the waist with the greatest possible ease and her figure is not compressed at any one point. The stays hold her in slightly and serve as a foundation for the dress. Otherwise they might be discarded for all the compression and stiffness they provide.

At the bust these unusual corsets may be adjusted to suit any figure, and there is a piece of woven material across the top which fits so closely that one cannot see where the corset ends. This feature of the corset is its strongest recommendation, especially at the knees, because the fashionable woman will not wear stays which make a line through her gown. The average long corset shows distinctly where it ends at the hips, and often the outline of the hose supporters can be plainly seen through the soft silk or lingerie dress, which is usually made over a very supple lining or worn over a clinging slip.

The corsets fit at the knees like knickerbockers and are fastened either at the back or front, according to individual preference. Of course they have to be made to order and are naturally quite expensive, but all women have learned that the well fitted and well made corset is worth its price, even if only one or two pairs are ordered a year.

CAMPHOR FOR PNEUMONIA

THERE have been and still are many varieties of treatment for pneumonia. A long list would be required to indicate all the medicaments which have been employed against it. Some even consider that this affection is an ailment which has a definite cycle. They are of opinion that no medication should be adopted which might act on it and disturb its development, the proper course to take being one of "expectation," or, better, a "thérapeutique armée" more particularly designed to combat complications.

The "thérapeutique armée" was at one time in vogue; to-day it is almost completely dethroned and a return is being made to medication.

Dr. Serbert, in the "Münchner Medizinische Wochenschrift," describes the remarkable results which he obtained in the treatment of serious cases of pneumonia by means of strong doses of camphor. He first had occasion to use it in 1891 in a case of double pneumonia, where the patient was also suffering from typhoid fever. He therefore practised a subcutaneous injection of twelve cubic centimetres of camphorated oil (twenty per cent) recently sterilized. The results obtained on the pulse and respiration, as well as those on the temperature and general condition, were extremely satisfactory. He renewed this dose every twelve hours, and he found after three days the trouble had disappeared.

Dr. Serbert has since employed the same treatment in twenty-one cases, one of which was extremely serious, since it was a question of double complicated pneumonia in a woman seventy-two years old. All these cases recovered. It seems certain that the camphor produced these effects, since there was no real crisis, the cure being gradually and slowly effected.

IN STRESS OF PITY

A Short Story

(By M. C. England) .. ....

"Work is work, but picnics is only picnics," summed up Aunt Hepsibah tartly. "I'm goin' to town and you'll stay here and do that ironin', so don't let's have another word about it."

Barbara Larsen stood, meek and submissive, bravely holding back the tears till her aut's gaunt form had turned down the road and disappeared trolleyward. Then she threw herself down in the old rocker and sobbed unrestrainedly.

She had told Jasper Burnham she was going—Jasper, who had never before mustered up courage to ask her to go anywhere. And now he'd think she was doing it on purpose—that she didn't care.

She rose at last. The ironing must be done. But as she reached the kitchen door some wayward impulse turned her steps and forced her up into her own tiny bedroom, where lay in all their dear, seductive glory her "best things" that she had laid out ready to wear. Sobs shook her anew as she gazed at them. She moved over to the bureau and, opening the bottom drawer, took from it a shining length of ribbon that matched the little rosebuds on her dress.

With a sudden impulse she began to unhook the unbecoming brown gingham that was her invariable week-day garb.

"I'll try them on, anyway," she resolved.

Fully arrayed, the pink ribbon gleaming around her waving brown hair, she surveyed herself with a mournful satisfaction. She hadn't known she could be so pretty. She looked longingly out at the radiant afternoon. Swinging down the rad, with furtive, bashful glances toward the house, came Jasper. Barbara's heart beat hard. Turning, she ran down the stairway and out on the vine-covered porch.

"I'll let him see I was ready, anyway," she thought defiantly, "and then he'll think something happened afterward."

Jasjer paused uncertainly at the gate.

"Coming?" he called.

Barbara looked up the road and saw the other girls chattering along with their sweethearts, all bound for the great picnic of the year. Then she looked again at Jasper. Shyness in the face of all the advancing crowd, was overpowering him. He had turned to go. Barbara's heart gave an agonized throb.

"Yes," she called suddenly.

She ran down the path, through the gate, and paused beside him. Without a word he started on, hands plunged deep in his pockets, speechless and overcome by his own daring. Barbara walked beside him with downcast eyes. Presently, stealing a glance at her, he saw the signs of tears on her face. A rush of pitying indignation banished self-consciousness for the moment.

"Who's been hurting you?" he demanded.

"No one," she denied.

"Then what've you been crying for?"

"Because—because aunt said I shouldn't go," she stammered.

A sudden, terrifying sense of what she had done overwhelmed her. Then the sound of happy, laughing voices behind brought a wave of defiant exultation.

"What'll she do?" asked Jasper shortly.

"I don't know—don't let's think about it," she begged.

But Jasper's mind clung to the subject.

"Darn her!" he burst forth. "Why don't you leave? She's not your real aunt, is she?"

"No, but she took me when I was little, and she's kept me and raised me, and all for nothing."

"For nothing, yes, and you've worked like a slave for her. She couldn't pay a hired girl to do what you've done," avowed Jasper heatedly.

As silence fell his shyness returned. He walked awkwardly, kicking at the stones in his path or switching aimlessly at the tall reedy growth by the roadside. When they reached the picnic ground, a wide, cleared space in the woods by a rushing stream, he withdrew to a distance and Barbara joined a group of chattering girls by one of the swings.

He kept apart from her during the afternoon, though his eyes followed her everywhere with a dumb worship. When twilight came and they began to flock homeward in chattering groups of twos and threes. Barbara had an instant's pang lest he should fail her, but a moment later he fell into step at her side.

With the homeward walk came back the crushing fear of what might befall her as a result of her disobedience. She knew only too well the harsh ill-temper of her aunt. She lagged more and more slowly, till all the happy, laughter-loving crowd had left them. Jasper lagged even one step slower, seeming loath to bring the silent walk to an end. Yet the twilight, the solitariness, the very nearness to the object of his devotion bred in him a paralysing shyness, a very agony of self-consciousness. Never, perhaps, would he have a chance like this again, yet the very thought of speaking, of even reaching out and touching the little hand that swung near him, brought the perspiration in great beads to his brow.

Barbara, with the growing intuition of awkward womanhood, vaguely realised all this.

As they came in sight of the house her heart began to beat painfully. She moved closer to Jasper.

"I'm frightened," she whispered.

For the second time that day a fire of indignation swept Jasper's self-consciousness from him. His hand went out suddenly and grasped her small one.

"Don't you be afraid," he said soothingly.

They came opposite the window. Inside Aunt Hepsibah sat, waiting. Her jaws were set in a heavy, purposeful revenge. Barbara grasped Jasper's arm with a little half-sob.

"Oh I—I hate her!" she whispered.

Jasper stood silent, staring at the woman, and with the helpless, trembling touch on his arm there surged up within him a mighty passion. He shook Barbara's hand from his arm almost roughly and took three great strides toward the house. Then he halted, suddenly, and turned.

"You come with me," he said.

She had to run to keep up with him. There was no breath left for speech. Presently they turned in at a gateway.

"Why, it's the minister's," panted Barbara.

Jasper knocked loudly at the door. "We want to get married," announced Jasper, a steady fire burning in his eyes.

"Well, now, I'm sure!" exclaimed the minister's wife bewilderedly. "Why, it's little Barbara Larsen and —and Jasper! Well, well, well!" She led them into the front room and disappeared.

"Mighty good thing!" they heard the minister say. "That child leads a dog's life." He strode into the room.

"Well, well!" he said kindly, "so you want to get married! That's right, Jasper. You're doing fine with the farm now. A wife is just what you need to make the old place look right." He stood them up before him.

When it was over and they were again outside, Jasper took Barbara's hand in his.

"Come," he said.

They walked, hand in hand and speechless, down the village street and along the road that led to Jasper's farm. As they reached the gateway the moon peeped out from under a cloud and flooded the orchard with silver light. Jasper stopped and gazed dazedly about at the familiar scene, then down at his wife's drooping head.

"Barbara!" he whispered unbelievingly.

She looked up, her eyes still dark with wonder.

He took her suddenly in his arms. The pent-up longing of two endless years seemed to culminate in that moment.

"Why, Barbara!" he cried passionately, "you're mine—you're mine! And I didn't know I was doing it!"

USELESS LINIMENTS

Are being fast driven off the market by the overpowering merit of Nerviline, which has more strength in one drop than is found in a quart of ordinary remedies. Full of pain-subduing properties, healing and soothing, its influence on rheumatism, sciatica, and lumbago is unsurpassed. Nerviline is without question the best household liniment made. For nearly fifty years a staple in every drug store in America.

DROP ALL OTHERS.

"I dropped all liniments but Nerviline because I found Nerviline the quickest to relieve pain," writes E. S. Benton of St. John's. "If my children are croupy or sick, Nerviline cures them. If a case of cramps or stomach-ache turns up, Nerviline is ever ready. We use Nerviline for neuralgia, rheumatism and all kinds of aches and pains; it's good as any doctor."

Use Only "Nerviline"

Good to rub on any part of the body—soothing, antiseptic, and just full of pain-relieving power. Just as good for internal pains, like cramps, toothache, dyspepsia, etc.

You can't beat Nerviline as a general household panacea for the aches and pains of the whole family. Try it.

FIVE DOCTORS GAVE UP ALL HOPE

Said she Would Die of Kidney Trouble

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" CURED HER

MOUNTAIN, ONT., Dec. 14th. 1910.

"For six years, I suffered from dreadful Kidney Disease. My legs and lower part of my body were fearfully swollen, and the pain was awful. My people thought sometimes I was dead, as I would faint from the agony. Five different doctors attended me, and all said it was kidney trouble and gave me no hope of getting well. A kind neighbor told me to try "Fruit-a-tives" and mentioned the case of Mrs. Fenwick, who was cured by them.

I took "Fruit-a-tives"—and in a short time, I began to feel better, the swelling went down, the pain was easier, and then "Fruit-a-tives" entirely cured me. All my friends look upon my recovery as a miracle, and I am unable to praise "Fruit-a-tives" enough."

T.R.H. IN MONTREAL.

Governor-General Gets Big Reception in Metropolis.

Montreal, Dec. 13.—T.R.H. the Duke and Duchess of Connaught arrived here yesterday, accompanied by the Princess Patricia. Their visit will extend over four days.

Immediately on their arrival at 3 p.m. they were driven to the City Hall where the civic address of welcome was read, together with loyal addresses from the British Army and Navy Veterans. The royal party then drove to Royal Victoria College, where a special convocation of McGill University was held and the honorary degree of LL.D. conferred upon His Royal Highness.

Following this the Duke and Duchess of Connaught entertained a small party at dinner and later the public reception in their honor at the City Hall, was was attended by several hundred prominent citizens.

The weather was most inauspicious and the Governor-General and his party drove from place to place over streets inches deep in mud, in the midst of a steady drizzle of rain.

Despite the weather and that the mayor's proclamation of a public holiday met with little response from employers, owing to the Christmas rush being already on the streets were lined with people and cheers for the royal visitors were often heard.

Probing Dynamite Shipments.

Indianapolis, Dec. 13.—Who besides John J. and James B. McNamara handled or had knowledge of the interstate shipment of the ton or more of dynamite and nitro-glycerine used in blowing up iron and steel structures erected by firms employing non-union men in the last five years?

This question was enquired into by Government officials yesterday preparatory to the resumption on Thursday of the federal grand jury's investigation of an alleged nation-wide dynamite conspiracy. Clerks who wrote letters, baggagemen shippers and all those who are supposed to have had even the remotest knowledge of the movement of the explosives or where and how they were stored are among the several hundred witnesses who have been summoned to testify before the grand jury.

The instances of the finding of the explosives about which special enquiry was made yesterday, are the following:

Fourteen hundred and ninety pounds of dynamite discovered in a padlocked box in a barn in the rear of Ortie E. McManigal's father's home at Tiffin, Ohio, April 23, 1911.

Guelph Winter Fair.

Guelph, Dec. 13.—This was the opening day of the provincial winter fair, and there was a large crowd in attendance. The horse ring was a big attraction, and all available space was occupied by those anxious to see the best exhibition of horses yet shown at the winter fair. The judging started yesterday afternoon, and but few awards have yet been made.

The heavy draught horses are exceptionally fine and some of the judges say a better collection has never been brought together in Canada. Another great feature of the fair is the poultry show, with over five thousand entries.

The competition in sheep is very keen, there being about five hundred entries, many of which captured prizes at the Chicago International Show last week. The dairy test of milch cows was concluded Monday night. There were sixty entries in this class, about twenty more than last year. There were no Jerseys entered.

The wet weather of the past few days has made the roads so bad that it may affect the attendance of local farmers, who have far to drive, but big crowds are expected by train today and to-morrow.

McNamaras In Jute Mill.

San Quentin, Cal., Dec. 31.—"James B. McNamara has not been examined yet by the prison physician for tuberculosis, and it is impossible to state when he may be," said Warden J. E. Hoyle yesterday.

The McNamaras began their second day's lesson in the jute mill, according to the prison authorities.

Owing to his familiarity with printing machinery, James B. has appeared the quicker of the brothers in mastering the mechanism. The working of a loom is not simple and several weeks are allowed prisoners for learning.

"SALT RHEUM"

Had It On Hands For Two Years.

ITCHED SO DID NOT KNOW WHAT TO DO.

Tried Three Doctors and Went to Hospital.

All skin diseases are more or less occasioned by a bad state of the blood, and no one can expect to be free from some form or other of skin trouble unless the blood is kept in good shape. All skin diseases can be very easily cured by the wonderful blood cleansing properties of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This is due to the unrivalled purifying action of Burdock Blood Bitters on the blood, coupled with the thorough manner in which it cleanses and expels the impurities from the body.

Mrs. Richard Coutine, White Head, Que., writes:—"I have been bothered with salt rheum, on my hands, for two years, and it itched so I did not know what to do. I tried three doctors, and even went to Montreal to the hospital without getting any relief. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got three bottles, and before I had the second used I found a big change, and now to-day I am cured."

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for about 35 years and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Baby's Rash Became a Mass of Humor

Parents Decided He Could Not Be Cured, "Cuticura" Soon Made His Skin Perfectly Clear.

A Toronto man, Mr. Robert Mann, of 758½ Queen St. East, says: "Our boy was born in Toronto on Oct. 13, 1908, and when three months old a slight rash appeared on his cheek. What appeared to be a water blister would form. When it broke, matter would run out, starting new blisters until his entire face, head and shoulders were a mass of scabs and you could not see a particle of clear skin. We did not know what to do for him and tried about every advertised remedy without avail, indeed some of them only added to his suffering and one in particular, the —— Remedy, almost put the infant in horrible pain. The family doctor prescribed for him. This did not do any good so we took him to a hospital.

He was treated as an out-patient twice a week and he got worse, if anything. We then called in another doctor and inside of a week the boy was, to all appearances, cured and the doctor said his work was done. But the very next day it broke out as bad as ever.

"We decided that it could not be cured and must run its course and so we just kept his arms bandaged to his side to prevent his tearing his flesh. The Cuticura Remedies were recommended. We started using them in May, 1909, and soon the cure was complete. Cuticura made his skin perfectly clear and he is entirely free from the skin disease." (Signed) Robert Mann, May 3, 1910.

In another letter, dated June 29, 1911, he adds: "My boy has never had any more trouble since using Cuticura."

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Ointment have afforded the most successful treatment for skin and scalp troubles of infants, children and adults. A single set is often sufficient. Although sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin, will be sent free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 85 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

M.C.R. Men Ask Arbitration.

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—Three thousand men in western Ontario are deeply interested in an application which was received at the Department of Labor yesterday. It came from the station agents, telephone and telegraph operators of the Michigan Central Railway, who ask for a board of arbitration under the Labor Disputes Investigation Act, to take up matters connected with their working conditions and rates of pay. They also desire a new schedule of rules.

The present application is one of the most interesting that has ever been received by the Labor Department, as it applies to a company of which the principal officers are not citizens of Canada, but live in the United States.

Stabbed Herself to Death.

London, Dec. 13.—A poorly-dressed woman, about 55 years of age, who looks and talked like a foreigner, committed suicide at the G.T.R. station here yesterday by stabbing herself in the breast with a jackknife. She was from Belleville, where her trunk had been checked through to Detroit. When she reached London she got off and told the constable she had lost her ticket. She was taken to the stationmaster's office, and while left alone for a few minutes plunged the knife into her body. She was dead when found by officials. She had said she was out of money, and it is supposed this drove her to the desperate act.

Pension Fund For Montreal.

Montreal, Dec. 13.—A report was sent yesterday by William Robb, city treasurer, to the board of control, in regard to the establishment of a civic pension fund, and its cost.

It is shown that all the permanent employes of the corporation, which include police, firemen, clerks, and permanent employes of the road department, shall be included in the fund. One per cent. of their salaries will be taken to sustain it.

"Gone to 23."

Briceville, Tenn., Dec. 13.—Additional signs of life were discovered in the Cross Mountain mine at 11 o'clock. On the walls of the main shaft were found inscribed these words: "We have gone to 23." A crudely drawn "index hand" aimed at entry No. 23, pointed out the way.

C.N.R.'s Big Land Deal.

Prince Albert, Sask., Dec. 13.—The biggest deal in northern Saskatchewan farm lands which has ever come to the attention of the local registry office is now being wound up. The Canadian Northern Railway is transferring a land grant to the Northern Saskatchewan Land Co., Ltd., and the latter company is paying $901,921.70 for the lands involved.

The lands in question are located at Tisdale, Birch Hills, Melfort and Kinistine districts, and comprise townships 43 and 47, ranges 15 to 25 west of second meridian. The registration and title fees for this deal will approximate $1,175.

Fired on British Steamer.

Marseilles, France, Dec. 13.—The British steamer Baron Polwarth, which sailed from Manilla on Nov. 8 for this port arrived yesterday and reported that she had been fired upon by an Italian cruiser while passing through the Red Sea on Nov. 30. Her bows were badly damaged when she came into port. The captain says that the commander of the Italian cruiser apologized for the occurrence.

Tariff Changes.

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—The feeling is growing that the federal budget when it comes down in January will contain some tariff changes. But if they do come down they will be few and judged to be absolutely necessary. The bulk of the suggested changes may be referred to the Tariff Commission, which, it is said, will be authorized in an early measure.

Britain's Population.

Great Britain and Ireland now have a total population of 45,216,665, excluding 148,934 inhabitants of the Isle of Man, Jersey, Guernsey and other islands.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—With crop conditions as unfavorable in the Argentine as to lead to withdrawal of wheat offers from that country, the market for the cereal to-day took an upward tilt. The close was firm, 2-3c to 2c higher than last night. Latest trading left corn with a net gain of 2-3c to 1-2c, oats up 2-3c to 1-2c and provisions at 7 1-2c to 12 1-2c advance.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d to ⅝d higher than yesterday on wheat, and ½d higher on corn. Antwerp Wheat closed ⅜c higher, Buda Pest 1½c lower, Paris ⅛c higher.

Flour—Winter patents, 27s 6d; hops in London, Pacific coast, £1 to £1.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12.—There was a decided improvement in the demand for Manitoba spring wheat, and the bids from the United Kingdom were better than those from the continent, and as ocean grain room to the former ports is more plentiful than to the latter a fairly good business was done at an advance of 8d per quarter. An easier feeling has prevailed in the market for oats, and prices are ½c per bushel lower, with a fair amount of business doing in car lots.

The demand for American new No. 3 yellow corn is fair at 73c per bushel, ex-track. A fair volume of business is passing in flour for local account, but the foreign bids for spring wheat grades are 6d to 1s per sack out of line, and for winter wheat flour 1s. Millfeed is in good demand and firm. The trade in cheese is quiet, while the demand for butter and eggs is good. Provisions are steady under a fair demand.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO Dec. 12.—The railways all carloads of live stock at the City Market, consisting of 1776 cattle, 1286 hogs, 470 sheep and lambs, 94 calves and one horse.

Owing to the auction sale of prize stock at the Union Stock Yards, and many of the dealers attending it, trade on this market was slow, and quite a lot of offerings were left over for Wednesday's market.

Prices in all the different classes were about the same as Monday, quality considered.

this will be about the last opportunity before Christmas to obtain such cattle.

David Rowntree bought 100 lambs at $5.15 to $5.20; 20 sheep at $5 to $5.00; 12 calves at $5.50 to $6.

Charles Maybee and R. Wilson will have four loads of stockers and feeders of good quality, 600 to 700 lbs. each, for sale at the City Market on Wednesday and Thursday. Farmers or dealers needing such had better see these steers, as Britain Averts Big Strike.

London, Dec. 13.—The Government, after inducing the employes of the Postoffice Department not to strike on the eve of the Christmas holidays, has obtained another victory, when yesterday, through its efforts, a second strike of the railway men was averted. The conference, which was brought about by the Government, ended in the signing of an agreement which, though it does not contain any provision for the direct recognition of the unions by the companies, greatly facilitates the access of the workmen to their employers when matters are in dispute, and for which purpose the unions were formed. In the opinion of many of the labor leaders this action will ultimately lead to the recognition of the union directly.

Disturbed the Admiral.

The Turkish navy appears to be in the main an obsolete fighting machine. Probably, however, it is better officered than half a century ago. When Lord Carlisle visited Constantinople in 1854 he met a Turkish admiral whose ignorance of naval matters was equalled only by his horror of the sea. If he went for a cruise he was invariably seasick.

On one occasion, when prostrated in his cabin, hearing a noise which grated on his nerves, he inquired whence it proceeded. "From the rudder of the ship," was the reply. "Then have the rudder removed immediately," ordered the afflicted admiral.

The Welsh Woman's Red Cloak.

The red cloak which the Welsh women wear is not only ornamental, but it also contributed to the repelling of the last invasion of their island. When a French force of 1,400 men under General Tate landed at Fishguard in 1797 Lord Cawdor hastily gathered together the local militia, while several hundred women had followed their husbands from the hills dressed in the national costume — red mantles and men's beaver hats. The French, knowing that scarlet was the British uniform, concluded that large re-enforcements had reached Fishguard and hastened to make an unconditional surrender.—London Chronicle.

The Return of the Prodigal.

When the elder brother of the prodigal son came near his father's house he heard, according to the authorized version, "music and dancing." Dr. Randel Harris, in an address at Westminster College, Cambridge, says that the word for music in the original is "symphony" and that symphony means the bagpipes. Wycliffe's version gives the word symphony, but no other translator has done so. Wycliffe also says that he heard "symphony and a crowd." Now, crowd is the Welsh crwth or harp. In view of the two instruments Dr. Harris says that the elder brother had some justification for getting angry.—Christian World.

AN UNUSUAL THEFT CHARGE AT COUNTY COURT SESSIONS

John L. West, Accused of Having Stolen Two Horses, a Colt and Two Cows From James Watt.

TRUE BILLS RETURNED

This morning's proceedings of the quarterly sessions of the County Court opened with the Crown vs. West—a theft case.

John L. West, who resided near Crawford's Grove, was charged with stealing two horses, one colt, and two cows, valued at $1,650, in October last, from James Watt of Kilora. The accused was arraigned in the Police Court, some time ago, and elected to be tried by Jury. He was represented by Mr. F. D. Kerr, and pleaded not guilty of the charge in the Court this morning. The following jury was sworn: James McMillan, Frank J. Pearson, Richard White, Thos. Frecks, Henry J. Hanwell, Peter Taylor, Walter Garnett, Henry Hamilton, E. H. Christie, D. Garathy, David Little, Alex. Archibald.

Crown Attorney R. E. Wood outlined the duty of the Jury, in considering the evidence that would be given and then outlined the circumstances of the case. He stated that two thoroughbred mares, one colt, and two thoroughbred cows valued in all at $1,650, had been purchased from Mr. Watt, who is a dealer in thoroughbred stock, by the accused, who gave a lien note of payment. Without redeeming the note, the accused sold the animals, and has not since redeemed it. The note contained a clause to the effect that the property was not to pass from the accused's possession until the amount was paid and Mr. Watt had a claim on the animals till that time.

The Crown Attorney then put Mr. Watt in the box, and the latter gave evidence to the effect that he had called at the accused's house, near Crawford's Grove, in company with Mr. G. N. Gordon, barrister, and West told them that he had no money, but admitted the sale of the animals, and also the making of the note with Mr. Watt.

Mr. Kerr, lawyer for the defence, then cross-examined the witness.

Mr. G. N. Gordon was then put in the box, and questioned by Mr. F. D. Kerr, counsel for the defence, he gave an account of the visit he and Mr. Watt had made to West's residence, and the conversation that took place at that time, between Mr. West and himself. He stated that the accused stated to him at the time that he had got the money from the men to whom he had sold the animals, but had used it. He told Mr. Gordon that he would get money from Australia after the sheep-shearing season, and intimated that if it would not do to pay the money then, that Mr. Watt would do nothing. Mr. Gordon stated that the accused told him that he owned all the land around, and when he (Gordon) intimated to him that he had purchased 33 acres of land there, including the Grove, the accused was much surprised.

Robert Howden was the next witness called. He stated that one day, when he was coming to the city, he noticed the cattle, and asked the owner how much he wanted for them. He asked $160, but he (Mr. Howden) considered that too much, but stated that he finally purchased them for $125, which he considered a fair price. He said that the cattle were fat, but fit for nothing but beef purposes, and sold for all they were worth.

Mr. John Mervin was put in the box, and testified to having purchased the animals from Mr. Howden.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford was called, and gave evidence regarding the prisoner's account with the Bank of Commerce. He presented the cheques that Mr. West had presented to the Bank for deposit.

At this juncture the case was adjourned until the afternoon, when evidence for the defence will be given.

True bills were returned against Albert Crouter, charged with the theft of a watch, and Gilbert Horton, accused of theft.

A SERIOUS CHARGE

A Dummer man, arrested on a charge of seduction, was brought to Peterborough last night by Constable Webster of Lakefield, and is at present in the County Gaol. He appeared before the Magistrate at Lakefield yesterday and was remanded.

631 MAJORITY FOR MR. PECK

With all the returns in, Mr. Peck's majority in West Peterborough is 631. The official figures will not be made known until Friday, when the Returning Officer, Sheriff Hall, will give the figures. The result of the two polls in Cavendish gave Mr. Peck a net majority of six. On the other hand a correction in the figures at Div. No. 3, B. McGill's store, cuts down Mr. Peck's majority at that point by eight. The correct figures for this division are. Peck, 82, Hall, 66; a majority of 16 for Peck, instead of 24, as announced yesterday. The figures for Cavendish are as follows:—Hugh Cochrane's House—Hall, 1; Peck, 4; David Higgins' House—Hall, 3; Peck, 6; net majority for Peck, 6.

FIRE AT THE GAS HOUSE

Building Adjoining the Plant Threatened With Destruction—Will Be Demolished

TWO MEN INJURED

A fire located in a shed adjoining the gas house, gave the fire department a strenuous two hours' work last night. The alarm was received at the station about 6 o'clock, and when the firemen arrived the flames were bursting out through the roof. Two lines of hose were quickly laid, and two well directed streams of water kept the fire from spreading. The building, which is an old frame building, is a veritable fire trap, and has been a menace to the rest of the plant for some time. Mr. Munro, manager of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, has given instructions to have the building demolished. The damage to the building was comparatively light, and will only serve to render the demolition of the structure more easy.

Two firemen were injured while in the performance of their duties. They were Fireman Degen, whose hand was badly burned, and Fireman Johnston, who had his shoulder blade dislocated. The men received medical attention at the hands of Dr. MacPherson. They were able to be out and around this morning.

"CIVIS" CONDEMNS AUBURN BRIDGE PROPOSITION "LET STREET RAILWAY CO. BUILD THE BRIDGE"

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I observe by the papers that the City Aldermen are figuring on a bridge over the new Auburn dam. I would like to know who is asking for this bridge. Surely the people wanting to come to town will gain nothing by it, for the town can be reached by just as short a walk on one side of the river as on the other. There are three bridges south of Auburn by which they can reach town. If people want to go north they can cross in either direction at the new arch bridge or by the railway line or by Hunter st. bridge. I can only see the hand of the Street Railway Company in this move, and I think I speak for the citizens generally when I suggest that the company that owns the dam, or the street railway and the power should build a roadway over their own dam if they want it. The citizens are now paying taxes for the arch bridge, and don't want to pay taxes for a bridge that is only required by the Street Railway Company.

If the bridge were built people would be shy of using it with horses, even if the street railway ran over their heads as suggested.

If the aldermen want to build a bridge let them throw a cheap pile bridge over the Quaker Oats pond in line with Dublin street, and then they will accommmodate one hundred for one that would be accommodated with an Auburn dam.

The railway bridge south of Auburn affords accommmodation for foot passengers. The rate of our taxes is a warning to the council that the people won't stand for luxuries in the shape of useless bridges.—Yours, etc.,

A STEAMER GOES ASHORE

King George's Sister is in Great Danger—Wrecked in a Terrible Storm

ASSISTANCE ON WAY

Examiner Special:

GIBRALTAR, DEC. 13.—The steamer Delhi, of the Peninsular and Oriental Line, including among its passengers King George's sister — Princess Royal Louise Victoria Dagmar with her husband, the Duke of Fife and their two daughters, bound for Egypt—has gone ashore in a terrific storm on Cape Spartel on the Morocean coast. Several tugs have gone to their assistance in answer to wireless messages, and the cruiser Weymouth has been ordered to go at once with a detachment of coastguard artillery and life saving apparatus to render assistance.

London, Dec. 13. — Private despatches received here indicate that the steamer Delhi is in a precarious position and in danger of being broken to pieces in the fierce gale and heavy sea breaking around her. Boats of the French cruiser Friant, after courageous work by sailors and marines have taken off all the women and children, including the Duchess of Fife and daughters, who have been landed safely at Cape Spartel. The Duke of Fife and all the men passengers and crew are so far as known at four p.m. (Spanish time) still on the ship. The Duchess of Fife is a British princess, the eldest sister of King George V.

GILLESPIE FOR MAYOR

A number of the citizens of the city waited upon Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie on Tuesday, requesting that he allow his name to go before the electors for the position of Mayor for 1912. Mr. Gillespie promised to give the matter consideration and announce his position in a few days. Mr. Gillespie's friends say that, as alderman for a number of years, he gave excellent satisfaction, and showed that his judgment on all important questions was sound, and that his honesty of purpose was good. He was a safe man in whom the ratepayers had confidence.

Should Mr. Gillespie decide to enter the contest he will be certain to have a strong following.

WERE THESE THE BURGLARS?

Suspicious Gang Seen Around Section Foreman's Tool House Which Was Broken Open Saturday Night

A POSSIBLE CLUE

In regard to the burglary at Lakefield, considerable interest is centred in the fact that on Saturday night last, the G.T.R. section foreman's toolhouse was broken into. When left on Saturday the hand-car was loaded with tools, but on Monday morning the tools were found strewn about the floor. What renders the incident the more interesting is the fact that the section foreman at Lakefield identified a hand axe which was left on the scene of the robbery at Mr. C. J. Charlton's store early on Sunday morning as that used by the men at Auburn.

The sectionmen say that four strangers have been seen prowling about in the vitinity of Auburn for some time, and one day last week the shanty was entered and traces of the cooking and eating of a meal were left. These men have not been seen since the robbery.

ADVANTAGES IN NORTH END

The growth of Peterborough, southward and westward, is a surprise to old residents who return after a few years' absence," says a well-known citizen. "Without doubt the city limits should extend to the river, as it is rapidly being covered with houses as far down as the street railway extends. The south will be the manufacturing section, but the north will invite the better homes as it is high, well drained and with pure air and fine outlook. It is an ideal residence section. Only the street railway extension north as far as the Normal School is required to put this splendid section in demand. The present season has seen extensions of the granolithic walks on Bethune and Aylmer streets. Sewers also are on these streets as far north as the Normal. A number of good homes have been erected, and people who live in them are loud in their praise of their new homes."

Fifteen-Year-Old Boy Accused of Robbing Bell Telephone Company to Appear on Saturday

ARRESTED IN TORONTO

The young man who, it is alleged, stole a quantity of cash from the Bell Telephone Company, on Sunday night, and who was apprehended in Toronto on Monday night, was brought back to the city yesterday by Detective Newhall. He was released on bail amounting to $2,000, which was put up by his father, and will appear for trial on Saturday, Dec. 16th. About $77 of the amount stolen was recovered. As the youth is only 15 years of age, he will probably be tried under the Juvenile Act.

Reception At St. Peter's

At Vespers on Sunday evening, at St. Peter's Cathedral, His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, assisted by Rev. W. J. McColl and Father Fergus O'Brien, received sixteen young ladies into the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin. Twenty-two young ladies received the white ribbon. The sermon, appropriate to the occasion, was preached by Rev. J. O'Brien, Lakefield. He chose for his subject "The Immaculate Conception." The sermon was both eloquent and instructive. The benediction was sung by the Sodality choir. At the close, the Magnificat was sung.

The Annual Fire Drill

In accordance with instructions received from the Fire, Water and Light Committee, Fire Chief Howard visited the City Schools yesterday, and conducted fire drill.

The Chief conducts these drills without warning being given ahead of time, and the children are taught to march out of the schools on the sound of the gong. The principals and teachers have this work so well in hand that the schools are cleared with striking precision. The number of scholars in attendance at each school and the time made, was as follows:

JUDGMENT RESERVED IN THE STREET RAILWAY CASE

Considerable Evidence Heard in Action in Which Toronto Company is Involved.

PLAINTIFF'S TESTIMONY

Judgment was reserved in the case of Carter vs. the Toronto Street Railway, by his Honour Judge Huycke, at the Quarterly Sessions last night. A report of the case follows:

Yesterday Afternoon's Session

The regular quarterly Jury Sessions of the County Court began yesterday afternoon at one o'clock. His Honour Judge Huycke presided.

Judge's Address

After the jury had been chosen and sworn in, His Honour Judge Huycke addressed the Grand Jury at some length, defining minutely the nature of the cases they were to deal with, and their duty in bringing in a verdict. After extending a welcome to the jury, he said that they had to deal with at least three or four criminal cases, that of theft, and yet they were not so serious as they might be, and he thought the city and county were to be congratulated upon its immunity from crime. He explained that these cases were not the only ones, however, as there had been several cases dealt with in County Police Court, etc. Yet he thought the county should be congratulated upon the absence of serious crime. He then went on to explain the origin of Grand Jury, and gave an interesting description of the ancient manner of trying criminal cases by "combat."

As regards the condition of the court room, he thought it was a good one, but suggested that they find some way of deadening the noise of people walking back and forward—laying carpet or some such measure. He informed them that they had the privilege of suggesting any improvements they wished. After assuring the jury that he would be glad to assist them if they required any assistance, the first case was proceeded with.

Carter vs. Toronto Street Railway Co.

Mr. George Carter, 310 Elm st., entered suit against the Toronto Street Railway Co. for damages to the amount of $500 for injuries he received while in their employ. Mr. Curry, K.C., of Toronto, appeared for the company.

The case was opened by Mr. Carter being examined by his counsel, Mr. D. O'Connell.

The witness stated that his duties at the time consisted of learning to start and stop the car by bell signals, making out of fare receipts and learning the general workings of a conductor on an electric street car. He said that the full run was about a mile and a half or two miles long. The witness gave his evidence as follows: "I was just going to collect the fares, and was walking along the side board of the car. My one foot was reaching out, as I reached over for the fare, and an automobile standing on an angle with the track struck me as the car swung around the corner, throwing me to the ground. The auto did not touch the street car, but it was so close that anything projecting would come in contact. When the accident happened, two men picked me up and put me in the motor car and took me to the hospital, and I was unconscious for some time. I had severe pains in my side and back and head. I was in the hospital over a week, during which time Dr. Reason attended me. Dr. Young, of Peterborough, also examined me."

Mr. Curry, K.C., Cross-Examines Witness

"Then you were just a learner?" asked Mr. Curry.

"Yes."

"On your route, you passed necessarily close to some obstacles, seeing the traffic is so congested?"

"Yes, but I did not pay attention to it, as my mind was taken up with my work."

"You knew the danger of going through congested traffic, standing on the running board of the car?"

"Yes."

"When the accident happened you had stopped at Dupont st.?"

"Yes."

"How far from Dupont st. to the place of the accident?"

"I don't know."

"Would you be surprised if it was only 50 yards and certainly not 100?"

"Very much."

"Did the hood of the car project over the rails?"

"It projected over the running board and hit me on the breast."

"How could the motorman avert it?"

"He did not need to run past an obstacle that was dangerously close to the car."

"Did they ask you to come back after you recovered?"

"Yes, but I refused."

"What do you do?"

"I am a barber by trade."

"How long were you ill?"

"I was under the doctor's care for fourteen weeks, here in the city, and was in the hospital for about 10 days."

SPIES ARE SENTENCED

Examiner Special:

Leipsic, Dec. 13. — The English spies on trial here charged with prying into German naval secrets for the purpose of selling them to England, received severe punishment to-day. Max Schutz, the leader, was sentenced to seven years. Hipsich, an engineer, got twelve years, and others received various terms. Schutz was a ship broker and his home was in London. The others were Germans.

THE CHARITY BOARD MET LAST NIGHT

The Central Charity Board of Peterborough met last night. Those present were Messrs N. Rush, chairman; P. S. White, R. C. Braund, U. D. Collins, F. W. Miller and Wm. Yelland.

Relief Officer Miller reported having given wood and groceries to several deserving parties. This was approved, and the board adjourned until Tuesday evening, December 26th.

REPORT WAS FALSE

Lindsay, December 13. — Great indignation is felt in town this morning on account of an article which appeared in a Toronto paper stating that "owing to a score of cases of diphtheria here the schools, churches and other public places have been ordered closed until January 1st."

There is no truth in the statement. There is not one case of diphtheria in town, the schools have not been closed nor have any other public places been closed.

$250 DAMAGE TO STOREHOUSE

Building Owned by Mr. Rehill Narrowly Escaped Destruction by Fire This Morning

ORIGIN UNKNOWN

The fire department received a call to a fire on Townsend street this morning, which upon their arrival was found to be making rapid headway. The blaze was located in a storehouse belonging to Mr. Thomas Rehill, and is supposed to have been caused by boys playing in the building.

Two streams were soon playing on the flames, and after an hour's hard work the fire was extinguished, but not before about $250 damage has ensued to the building.

The fire was first discovered by Ald. Buller who sent in the alarm from the lower office of the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company. Mr. Rehill was contemplating turning the building into a dwelling house, and for that reason was preparing to have it reconstructed. The building was insured.

CONDEMNED ALL ROUND.

We don't hear a single Conservative journal put in a good word for Dr. Pyne, alleged Minister of Education, in Sir James Whitney's Cabinet. We do hear, however, many Conservative journals condemning his inefficiency and official stupidity with great heat—especially after the elections. Yet, Dr. Pyne was elected by a majority of 2,337 in East Toronto. What's the use of representation institutions? Dr. Pyne is as unqualified as a Minister of Education as the thousands of unqualified teachers his blundering administration of educational interests has forced upon the Province. If Dr. Pyne had been as big a failure as a director of a bank he couldn't be re-elected as a janitor.

NOT PERFECT.

The return of Sir James Whitney's Government is, it appears, not due to its merits, but largely to the apathy and indifference and lack of practical thought on the part of the electors. The party newspapers themselves do not think that the Whitney Government is as perfect as they led the people to believe during the elections. The Hamilton Spectator, the most vicious apologist of the Government then, now that there is no need for extravagant claims, tries to speak the truth. It now says, as a hint to Sir James, what would have been rank heresy to say a week ago, that "there is always something better in the way of government." The Toronto Telegram, (Conservative), says that "Sir James Whitney will do well to take heed of his ways and not repeat the neglect that has marked his attitude towards the development of Northern Ontario; and even this appears in the Telegram:

Too bad about the reduction in Hon. Dr. Reaume's majority and Sir James Whitney's loss of those French-Canadian seats—the chief cause for regret being that Dr. Reaume's majority did not utterly disappear, and that the loss of French-Canadian support did not include the whole fourteen seats in Ontario.

Why didn't the Telegram say something like this during the campaign?

And the Toronto World says:

He must recognize his department of education, including the minister, and he must teach English in the schools where it is ignored. The attitude of the French Canadians toward our school system cannot be tolerated. Even we've got some "institutions that we hope to preserve. We're not going to sit and see English wiped out in Ontario. They're doing it now. Dr. Pyne is not the man for the work in hand.

We've got to do better for good roads generally, and the colonization and settlement of New Ontario A first-class energetic minister is wanted in charge of this work.

Agriculture wants to be reconstructed from the top down.

We want a minister for the municipalities. Give Lucas a chance to see what he can do in the way of progressive municipal government. The hydro-electric and Adam Beck must go on stronger than ever.

Why does the bogus independence of these journals crop out after the elections? Why not before? What they now so heartily condemn in the Whitney Government is what the Liberals and Liberal journals condemned during the elections. The Liberal policy included condemnation of the scandalous neglect and mismanagement of our educational interests and our agricultural interests, two of the very foundation interests of the Province of Ontario. The after-election condemnation of these journals shows that hte Whitney Government was returned largely on false pretences. After a while the people will begin to wake up and think.

It will be the duty of the Liberal Opposition in the Legislature ot give the Conservative supporters of land taxation, workmen's compensation, public telephone lines, and other progressive proposals in the Liberal platform a chance to vote as they talked during the campaign.—Globe.

NOT TRUE TO THEMSELVES.

This is from the Toronto Telegram, Conservative:

East Hamilton is to be congratulated on its refusal to take Sir James Whitney's word for it that Allan Studholme should be defeated.

And Sir James Whitney is not to be congratulated on his invasion of East Hamilton. A Premier who owes as much as Sir James Whitney owes to independence in the Ontario electorate should not have gone out of his way to make war on the only vestige of independence in the Ontario Legislature.

If every workman were as live to the cause of labour as Mr. Allan Studholme, labour would soon have the rights and influence in government it claims and deserves. This will never come so long as labour allows itself to be led by the nose by party politicians and party interests, or to be used as a tail to the party kite; it will have to nurse its grievances and swallow indignities, and take snubs to its representatives. What stands in the way of Labour winning its way and getting just attention to its rights is Labour itself. In the last election, in the cities where the working man, if he votes for himself, can control the situation, and swing the result, they voted solidly against themselves. They voted for the head of the government who tried to crush the only real true representative of labour in public life; they solidly supported the man who has scorned, and still scorns in his ingrained and obstinate political creed, the working man and his rights. The Liberal policy and the principle of equal rights and justice to the masses as against the classes, was voted down; not by the country electors, but the city electors—the workingmen themselves. It is the city vote in the big cities, and the city vote in mixed constituencies that swings the balance against the working man; it is the working men that vote against themselves. It is the fault of the working men themselves that there is not a majority in Parliament, and the Legislature, friendly, instead of hostile, to their interests. They must not complain of the results, if they listen to the voice of the political spellbinder, instead of the voice of their own reason and common sense. They should get tired of being the salt of the earth at election time, and being the neglected and despised between elections, when real work in their interests can be done, but is not done—not done because they tie the hands of their real friends and give power to their real enemies.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Pitch Pyne in the cabinet would be an improvement, but Pitch Pyne out of the Cabinet would be better.

Count that day lost, whose slowly rising sun finds not some Grit officeholder being run.—Montreal Herald.

Sir James Whitney might now safely give the people a peep at Dr. Merchant's report on Bilingual Schools.

Mr. Bourassa seems to have permitted Mr. Hazen and Mr. Monk to make Toronto a great ocean port. Mr. Monk's plans, therefore, make no provision for the building of vessels of the Canadian navy.

In Ottawa the two Conservative candidates and both Conservative journals opposed Sir James Whitney's stand on tax reform. Yet, the intelligent electors "turned down" two candidates who opposed Sir James Whitney with promises of reform, which was refused the other two candidates.

Only about one-fifth of the vote polled in the last Dominion elections was polled yesterday. On Sept. 21, in West Peterborough, the total vote polled was 5846. Taking from this the vote of 221 in South Monaghan, which is not in the west riding for the Provincial elections, leaves a total of 5625 votes in the Dominion elections. Yesterday the total vote polled was 4890, a reduction from the Dominion vote of 1035.

A LESSON TO SIR JAMES

Toronto Telegram (Conservative)

Ontario contrasts the Temiskaming country at the end of Hon. Frank Cochrane's provincial ascendancy as the Temiskaming country was at the beginning of Hon. Frank Cochrane's provincial ascendancy.

And the contrast does not raise this province to the heights of Sir James Whitney's admiration for Mr. Cochrane as an enlightened and progressive steward of the possibilities of New Ontario.

It is fortunate for Sir James Whitney that his own bluff honesty, the progressive policy of Adam Beck and many administrative virtues covered the Ontario Government with the flag of merit. Thus an indignant people had to shoot through the colours of public ownership and public rights in order to blow holes in the imperfections of Whitneyism.

Ontario has declared that the virtues which are to be admired in the work of Sir James Whitney are mightier than his faults. Ontario also recognised the sad truth that the virtues of the N. W. Rowell leadership offered no hope of escape from the faults of the Whitney Government. Sir James Whitney's worst enemies are the flatterers who interpret the meaning of the election as an intimation that Sir James Whitney should "sit at ease in Zion." Even Sir James Whitney will do well to take heed to his ways. Sir James is entitled to cherish his own opinion of Hon. Frank Cochrane. But Sir James will do well not to make that opinion the law of his future. If Sir James Whitney and Hon. W. H. Hearst do not do more to open up the Temiskaming country in the next four years than has been done in the same direction under the auspices of Hon. Frank Cochrane in the last six and a half years, not even the merits of Adam Beck and the Hydro-Electric policy will save Sir James Whitney from rebuke when next he calls the people of Ontario to the polls.

Western Cities Are Satisfied With The Single Tax System

A number of cities in the Canadian West are experimenting with the Single Tax plan. Does it work? Here's what some of the officials of these cities have to say about it.

Writing under date of Oct. 28th, 1911, Mayor Klinkskill, of Saskatoon, says: "We have made the first step toward the assessment of land only this year by reducing the assessment on improvements by 10 per cent. It is our intention to continue this reduction year by year until eventually improvements will be exempt from taxation. So far the people are very well satisfied and consider the movement a wise one."

Since Saskatoon began with an assessment on only 60 per cent on improvements this means that in five years more Saskatoon will be a Single Tax city.

A year ago Victoria, B.C., followed the example of Vancouver. Mayor A. F. Manley, of Victoria, writes under date of Oct. 25, 1911: "At this time I can but state that the ratepayers appear to highly approve of the change made, and that the city of Victoria, whether from this cause or not, is enjoying an abnormal development in building and other improvements, the buildings going up being of far more substantial nature than heretofore, and every indication points to the fact that the city of Victoria has made no mistake in the step it has taken."

At the beginning of this year, taking advantage of the recent Saskatchewan Legislation, the city of Regina reduced the assessment on buildings to 45 per cent of their value, leaving the assessment of land at full value.

Writing under date of Oct. 23, 1911, Mr. A. E. Chivers, city clerk of Regina, says: "It is the intention, in the course of another three years, to entirely wipe out the assessment on improvements. It is considered advisable to make the change to a Single Tax system a gradual progression . . . as to the results in this city of the adoption of this plan, since the change has only recently been made it is impossible to make any emphatic statement as to its effect. It may be of interest to state that up to the present (say Oct. 15th) the building permits of this year total upward of $4,360,000. The total of the building permits in 1910 was $2,351,288. When I say that 1910 shows by far the largest figures in the history of the city, it can readily be seen that what an enormous expansion in the direction of building enterprise has taken place this year. While it is true that there has been this large activity throughout the west in building this year I think it perfectly true that a proportion of the increase in this city is due to the adoption of Tax Reform methods by the Municipality."

Some people in Ontario are afraid of what Mr. Whitney calls "Checker-Board Legislation." Mr. J. N. Bayne, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs at Regina, Sask., writes under date of Oct. 28th, 1911: "I have not read any adverse criticism of the action of the Legislature in allowing, at the last session, a further reduction in towns and cities of taxes on buildings and improvements, as mentioned in the respective Act."

Mr. Jas. Richie, Mayor of Summerland, B.C., says of the Single Tax: "There is absolutely no hesitancy on my part in replying that it is the only mode of taxation that can be successfully maintained in this country. We would never dream of enforcing any other kind here."

UNIQUE IN HISTORY

Montreal Herald.

Never in the history of the world have two events so widely separated geographically, so nearly the same in essential significance and so different in the outward symbols of what they are meant to convey happened in countries so vast yet united by the same ties of sovereignty as to-day's reception of the Duke of Connaught in Montreal and the Durbar at Delhi, at which King George the Fifth has been proclaimed Emperor of India in the ancient capital of the Mogul potentates. Here in the metropolis of a Dominoin proud of her freedom and inclined to be jealous of her autonomy and powers of self-government —representing the finest achievement of a pure democracy—the uncle of the King, who has himself rendered great services to the British Empire in civil and military capacity, receives on behalf of the sovereign the most convincing proof of the loyalty and devotion of two peoples of divergent races to the principles of which the British Empire is the foremost exponent and example before the world.

In India the representatives of a people of many races, many religions, are as yet in the nursery stage in the matter of government by free institutions, not of their own creation, as are those of Canada, but provided for them by surely the most benevolent despotism that has been known to mankind. There is naturally something barbaric in the eyes at least of the west in the displays of vast wealth represented by the princes of India, especially when one considers the condition of practical serfdom in which so many millions of the inhabitants exist; but there is comfort in the reflection that to-day's ceremony is a distinct advance on all similar functions that have been held in Delhi. One may perceive in the difference in the manner of the observance an advance within the last decade, for in 1903, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught were themselves the central figures of the Durbar organized by Lord Curzon in honour of King Edward the Seventh and his consort.

King Edward's son sits on the throne to-day which the best and the most enlightened in every land declare unhesitatingly to be the most glorious on earth. It should never be forgotten that the throne, like the standard and the flag, which are its symbols, stands for progress of mankind over a larger part of the human race and a greater geographical area than any other institution or people represent. Great are the glories and great the responsibilities.

XMAS GREETING CARDS

Samples of the most beautiful and appropriate Xmas Greeting Cards shown in the city may be seen at the Examiner Office—larger selection than in former years. Order early—drop in and see samples. Those requiring cards to mail to the Old Country should order at once so that they may be supplied in time.

OLD PEOPLE'S HOME FAILS

Inmates Thrown on Charity.

A "home for old people" recently became bankrupt in Detroit, and many inmates who had paid into it every dollar they had in the world, expecting to be assured of a comfortable old age, were thrown on charity.

We say that every institution of this nature ought to be under supervision of the state so such things could not happen. It is the duty of the young and strong to safeguard the welfare of the old and feeble.

Their health and vigour, for example should be kept up as much as possible. Nothing is so good for this purpose as Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil. Miss A. H. Ralston of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., says: "As a tonic, I think Vinol is excellent and especially for an old person. A condition of general debility which had lasted for months yielded promptly to Vinol and this gives me the fullest confidence in it."

Vinol is not only pleasant to take but always agrees with the stomach and we guarantee it absolutely. McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

THE SHOPPERS.

See the Christmas shoppers shopping!
See them round the counters hopping,
Hardly stopping,
Gayly popping
Here and there and everywhere.
Picking bargains up and flopping,
Woolly lambs with ears a flopping,
Dolls exceeding large and whooping.
Toys that last and games that tear.
See them rush, their foreheads mopping,
As they hurry on their shopping,
Buying books for Tom and Willie,
Buying things exceeding silly.
Things that no one has a use for—
Things that father must "produce" for;
With their endless lists clutched tightly,
So that they may purchase rightly—
See them! Watch them, hipping, hopping,
Flipping, flopping,
Never stopping,
Till they're dropping.
Worn with shopping,
And go homeward worn and weary,
With a sorry sigh, "Oh, deary!
I forgot to buy a present
For my cousin's aunt—that's pleasant!
And I fear I made mistake
In those gloves for Uncle Jake—
P'raps a larger size he'll take!
I'll be happy when it's through,
For Im tired out—arnt you?"
Oh, the shoppers, Christmas shoppers!
How they come financial croppers,
Spending money that they need!
Do they like it? Yes, indeed!
For it comes but once a year,
And they ervel while 'tis here.

WON'T TELL AGES

BOSTON, MASS., DEC. 12. — Not even for such allurements as a Christmas present of cash and promise of a pension, will the young women employed by the local telephone company reveal their ages. Recently the directors of the company voted to give the girl switchboard operators a cash present at Christmas, the amount varying according to age. It was announced that this Christmas gift would eventually develop into a pension.

One of the young male secretaries was given the task of tabulating the girls by ages. He began his work among the 150 young women employed in the main office. After a few hours of fruitless questioning he reported to the directors that the task was a hopeless one, as not one of the operators would answer his question as to the date of her birth. The scheme has therefore been abandoned for the present.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"All things are engaged in writing their history. The rolling rock leaves its scratches on the mountain; the river, its channel in the soil; the animal, its bones in the stratum; the fern and leaf, their modest epitaph in the coal. The falling drop makes its sculpture in the sand or the stone. Not a footstep into the snow or along the ground but prints in characters more or less lasting, the map of its march. EVERY ACT OF THE MAN INSCRIBES ITSELF IN THE MEMORY OF HIS FELLOWS, AND IN HIS OWN MANNERS AND FACE."

—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

"The day will come," I once heard a psychologist prophecy, "when we shall be able to read each other's minds."

"Well, I devoutly hope NOT," promptly commented one member of the group, to whom the psychologist spoke.

And the rest of the group echoed the wish in varying forms, but with unvaried fervour

This unwillingness that our fellow should be able to see into our hearts seems to ersal. I don't wonder. I share it just as you do. But I do wonder if most of us realize to how large an extent others can see the inside of our hearts.

I was talking with a big business man the other day, a man who owes much of his success to his ability to understand human nature. "Do you know," he said, "I believe that everybody wears a label and somebody is reading it all the time."

How tremendously true that is.

There are no such things as secret acts.

There is hardly any such thing as a secret thought—surely no such thing as a secret trend of thought.

Everybody is wearing a label and somebody is reading that label every day.

Everybody can't read it. Indeed, very few—I might say mercifully few—can. But I don't believe that ever a day goes by but each of us meets someone who can and does read our label.

I heard a woman say of a clerk in a certain store in my home town: "That woman is not a good woman." "How do you know?" "By looking at her face." "Is that a safe way to judge?" "Far safer than any other way. I would believe what I read there much sooner than I would any gossip about her." Incidentally, the woman was right in her judgment.

Labels are slow in the making, but the process is as sure as it is slow. They are never wrong.

One thought does not make a label. One act doesn't. Each single thought and deed only makes the first faint tracing of some single letter of the label. Subsequent thoughts and deeds may obliterate and change this first tracing.

What is YOUR label?

What are you making it?

What do you want to make it?

Are you willing and glad that it should be read by anyone, or are you afraid of those who have eyes to see?

Impertinent questions, you say?

Perhaps so, but pertinent, too, I think.

Ruth Cameron

FOR A SICK, SOUR BILIOUS STOMACH, GAS OR INDIGESTION, SURELY TAKE CASCARETS

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means indigestion; a disordered stomach which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they cure indigestion, because they immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended forever. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning — a 10-cent box will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED

Three Havelock People Arraigned in County Police Court

Len Brill, Oscar Copperthwaite, and Mrs. Lawson Lewis, who were arrested at Havelock on Saturday, and brought to the city, came up before Magistrate Edmison in the County Police Court yesterday, and were allowed to go on suspended sentence. They were charged with stealing ducks, geese and turkeys, and did not plead nor elect. They were represented by Mr. G. N. Gordon. They also paid the costs of the court, which amounted to $5.55 each —$16.65 in all.

DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION TO CURE ECZEMA

The most advanced physicians of this country and Europe are now prescribing a wash of Wintergreen, Thymol and other soothing and healing ingredients for the cure of Eczema, Psoriasis and all other forms of skin trouble. This compound is known as D.D.D. Prescription.

Dr. Holmes, the well known skin specialist, writes: "I am convinced that the D.D.D. Prescription is as much a specific for Eczema as is quinine for malaria. I have been prescribing the D.D.D. remedy for years."

We ourselves vouch for the D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema and absolutely know that it will take away the itch the instant you apply it.

Drop into our store and get posted on this wonderful remedy for Eczema and the other skin troubles. Or write the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. P.E., 49 Colborne street, Toronto, for free sample bottle. They will be glad to send it immediately. McDermid and Jury and E. L. Payne.

"SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE"

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I observed from Mr. Peck's remarks in the Opera House on Monday evening, that he complained of certain attacks made on him by the Examiner during the election campaign. I would like Mr. Peck to point out wherein the attack was made that he complains of, and ask him at the same time to let the public know if he approves of the lying, personal attack made upon the Liberal candidate by the Review, particularly with reference to the King case, printed in the Review on Saturday, especially when they knew they were not publishing the facts. It is all right for the Review to scandalize and vilify a Liberal and to attempt to injure the personal and business reputation of the Liberal candidate, but its all wrong to ask the Temperance people of West Peterborough what legislation they can expect from one who is a director in a brewery and who cannot well serve two masters.

Yours truly,

NEW YORK, DEC. 8.—The oyster has at last been exonerated of causing typhoid. A report by Health Commissioner Lederle, of New York city, gives the succulent bivalve a clean bill of health. "For several years," the commissioner says, "diligent investigation has failed to trace a single case of the disease to the eating of oysters."

PETERBORO' PRESBYTERY MET IN PORT HOPE

Rev. Mr. Keith Will Act as Moderator for Another Six Months —Will Meet in Peterborough

The Presbytery of Peterborough met in St. Paul's Church, Port Hope, yesterday morning. The session opened at 9.20 a.m. with Rev. Mr. Skeene of Havelock in the chair, acting clerk, pro tem, in the absence of the clerk, Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Hastings, who was delayed by an accident on the G.T.R.

Rev. Mr. Keith, moderator, was given a six months' extension of office, and the moderatorship was extended from six months to twelve months hereafter.

A call was extended to Rev. Mr. Abraham, of St. Paul's Church, Port Hope, by the Board of St. Andrew's Church, Guelph. A strong deputation were on hand to present their case on behalf of St. Andrew's. A deputation from St. Paul's Church epitomized the good work accomplished by Rev. Mr. Abraham during his ministry in the district, and concluded by asking Mr. Abraham to remain, but as he indicated a desire to go to Guelph, he was given permission to do so. The change will take effect about the end of December.

Rev. Mr. Pogue acted as moderator of the session. After the regular business had been disposed of, the meeting adjourned until January 2nd, when they will meet in Peterborough.

Rev. Mr. Johnston, of Millbrook, and Rev. Mr. Keith, of this city, were appointed to represent the presbytery at the designation service at St. Paul's Church, Peterborough, on December 29.

BACK FROM CONVENTION

Mr. D. Wires has returned from London, where he was a delegate at the Bricklayers' Convention, held in that city. The Convention was the best yet held, with a record attendance of delegates and considerable business was transacted. Berlin will be the next meeting place and there is a prospect of Peterborough being chosen in 1913, as it is the intention to hold the convention that year in the eastern part of the Province.

FOR AGED PEOPLE

Old Folks Should be Careful in Their Selection of Regulative Medicine.

We have a safe, dependable, and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirements of aged people and persons of weak constitutions who suffer from constipation or other bowel disorders. We are so certain that it will relieve these complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer it with our personal guarantee that it shall cost the user nothing if it fails to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity. Three sizes, 10c., 25c., and 50c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store—McDermid and Jury.

COULD NOT SWEEP FLOOR

Was So Terribly Afflicted With Lame Back.

It is hard to do housework with a weak and aching back, and no woman can be strong and healthy unless the kidneys are well.

The weak, lame and aching back comes from sick kidneys and should be attended to immediately so as to avoid years of terrible suffering from kidney trouble. Mrs. Harvey W. Brownell, Northport, N.S., writes:—"I now take pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About a year ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad at times I could not sweep my own floor. While looking through your B.B.B. Almanac I saw Doan's Kidney Pills were a great remedy, so thought I would try a box or two. After using five boxes I was completely cured, and I am very thankful to have found so speedy a cure."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. In ordering direct specify "Doan's."

A Superb Showing Of

Gloves For 'Xmas

Gloves of Distinctive Style For Women, Misses and Children---Gift Qualities At Low Hall Prices

When a Glove need develops most women in this city---especially those who enjoy a reputation of being "good dressers"---think of Hall's. There is a good reason for their instantly associating this store with Gloves.--and the reason lies in the fact that this store sells Kid Gloves for exactly what they are: Hall's stand between you and the countless imitations of REAL Kid with which the market is flooded.

You Are Safe In Buying Kid Gloves For Gift-Giving At Hall's--For Ours Are Made Of Genuine French Kid

No coarse skins of Belgian or Italian goats masquerading here as French Kid. Nothing but the genuine, soft French Kid, cleverly worked up by master-glovers of world-wide repute, into handwear of irreproachable style and wearing qualities.

Remember, too, our glove stock does not consist merely of Kid Gloves---we have by long odds the largest assortment of GLOVES OF ALL KINDS for Women, Misses and Children, in Town. And--whether of Kid, Cashmere, Silk or Wool---you may depend upon Hall's for the best Glove value-for-price to be had in Canada.

TWO PRESENTATIONS WERE FEATURES OF KNOX CHURCH ANNIVERSARY CONCERT

Rev. H. J. Keith Was Given a Handsome Fur-lined Coat While Mrs. Keith Received Substantial Cheque From Ladies' Aid.

AN ENJOYABLE EVENT

A magnificent banquet and concert, held in the school-room of Knox Church last evening, marked the first anniversary of the opening of the church, which anniversary fell on Sunday last.

During the year splendid progress has been made in the work of the parish. The congregation has increased from one hundred to five hundred, and various societies in connection with the church have been formed.

Last evening's event was a great success. From 5.30 to 7.30 great activity was exercised in tending the large number who sat down to a sumptuous meal, after which a fine musical programme was rendered. In the intermission, the pastor, the Rev. H. J. Keith, was the recipient of a token of appreciation in the form of a handsome fur-lined coat, while Mrs. Keith was presented with a cheque from the members of the Ladies' Aid Society. In connection with the presentation the following address was read:

Dearly beloved Pastor,

Now that Christmas times are upon us, and wherewith the Lord loveth a cheerful giver, we open our hearts in a cause that we consider justifiable and in conformity with the wishes of your church members, adherents and friends.

Since your induction as our pastor and spiritual guide, on April 11th, 1907, we have carefully watched your course, and we all, with one accord, approve most heartily of your guidance in our midst. Your aid and counsel in the budding of our new church and its opening, December 11th, 1910, which has now passed its first anniversary, we might mention. Further, your daily duties amongst us call for much going to and fro. Therefore, in order to show our appreciation and to enable you to resist all inclement weather, we would wish you to kindly accept this fur-lined coat as a token of our respect, esteem and good wishes for your health.

Please convey to your wife and family our congratulations on account of yours and their restored health, and wishing you and them a merry Christmas and a very happy New Year. We are, sincerely yours in Christ,

The Members and Friends of Knox Congregation.

REV. H. J. KEITH,
Pastor of Knox Church, who was honoured by a presentation at the anniversary concert last night.

With regard to the programme, Mr. Kelly was deserving of special mention for his able ventriloquism. The manner in which he manipulated his several mediums was most clever. All the other artistes contributed acceptable items, which assisted greatly in rendering the concert successful. Mr. Lewis was the pianist, and the programme was as under:

Selection, Orchestra; song—"My ain Folk" (by request), Mr. R. D. Dickson; song—"Caller Herrin'," Miss M. Wilson; comic song—"The Waddin o' Sandy McNab," Mr. R. Hendry; ventrilequial entertainment, Mr. J. Kelly; selection, Orchestra; song, Mrs. A. McArthur; song—"The Veteran Song," Mr. Wm. Lorimer; ventriloquial entertainment, Mr. Kelly; song—"Killarney," Miss Wilson; ventriloquial entertainment, Mr. Kelly, concluding with "Oh! Canada" by the audience and "God Save the King."

Fire Chief Inspects The Peterborough Hotels A Satisfactory Report

The Chief of the Fire Department, accompanied by the License Inspector, made his annual inspection of the city hotels on November 21st, and found all to be in first-class condition. Following is the Chief's letter and report to the Commissioners: To the Chairman and Board of License Commissioners, City.

Gentlemen,—I beg leave to report to your Honourable Body the result of my annual inspection of Licensed Hotels in the City of Peterborough.

The inspection was made on Nov. 21st, and Mr. Joseph Stewart, License Inspector for West Peterborough, accompanied me, and assisted in making the inspection, and attached you will please find the report in detail, which I trust will be of interest to your Board. I am, Sirs,

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) W. A. HOWARD,
Chief Fire Dept.

The Report.

Peterborough, Dec. 12, 1911.
To the Chairman and Board of License Commissioners, City.

Gentlemen,—I beg leave to advise your honourable body of my annual inspection of Licensed Hotels, made November 21st, in accordance with City By-Law No. 1620.

The following hotels were visited: Snowden House, White House, Grand Hotel, National Hotel, Albion Hotel, Munroe House, Windsor Hotel, King George Hotel, Montgomery House, American House, Palace Hotel and Oriental Hotel.

In each of the hotels visited I found the law had been complied with relative to fire escapes, ropes in bedrooms, etc. In some of the hotels we found that the ropes in the bedrooms had been removed during house-cleaning time, and by carelessness on the part of servants had not been replaced. The attention of the proprietors was called to this state of affairs and they expressed a willingness to rectify the irregularity. A second visit was made on November 28th, and the conditions were found to be entirely satisfactory. This intelligence will, no doubt, be gratifying to you.

It was found that in all twelve hotels there were 375 bedrooms. Seven of the hotels have made provision for accommodating extra guests by placing cots in commission, which it is understood are only used in time of a convention or extra rush of visitors to the City. In the seven hotels mentioned a total of 95 cots were in store.

I may say that 675 bedrooms herein mentioned include the apartments of the proprietors and their families, and the servants of the hotels.

The twelve hotels in the city were found to be in a fairly good state of repair, and in every case the premises were found to be clean and nothing of an offensive nature whatsoever was found.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

I have the honour to be, Sirs,
Yours respectfully,
W. A. HOWARD,
Chief Fire Dept.

Died On Marriage Anniversary

NEW YORK, DEC. 13.—Childhood sweethearts in Germany, but by circumstances prevented from being married until seven years ago, an aged Williamsburg couple were preparing to receive a few friends last night for an anniversary celebration when suddenly their home became a house of mourning. The husband, Bernard Koch, a retired tailor, 65 years old, was stricken with a fatal attack of heart disease, and his wife, Catherine, two years younger, died from shock.

The friends who had been invited to the celebration feast took part, instead, in preparing for the funeral and burial of the aged pair, which will take place on Saturday.

$10.000 In His Wooden Leg

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., DEC. 12—An old wooden leg may not be much of a legacy, but when it contains ten thousand dollars, Jacob Randall, a pauper at the poor farm of Canadian county, thinks it is worth having. The leg was given to him by Alexander F. Hamilton, a supposed pauper at the farm, just before he died a few days ago. Last night Randall discovered the roll of money in the stock of the artificial limb. If Hamilton had relatives they are not known here.

When you have a bilious attack give Chamberlain's Tablets a trial. They are excellent. For sale by all dealers.

Squabble On Stage

OTTAWA, DEC. 13 — An incident occurred at the Russell Theatre while the Paul Marcel company was playing "Le Monde ou l'on S'Ennuie." There was no trouble until the third act, when Mr. Cosset announced that Mr. Roger Guyot, who had been taken suddenly ill, could no longer play his part, and that he would read it himself. At the same moment Guyot appeared on the stage and protested, saying that he was not ill.

The curtain was lowered, and the orchestra played the National Anthem while the difference between the two actors was being settled, and several members of the audience left the theatre.

Soon after the piece was continued, Mr. Cosset filling the two roles, but the general interest was gone. This disturbance at the last appearance of the company was the more unfortunate as it was a gala performance, and the audience was made up of some of the most prominent figures in Ottawa society, including Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Lady Laurier and a number of members of Parliament.

How A Peterborough Boy Is Honoured For His Work In West

It will be of special local interest to note the prominence among men of prominence that an old Peterborough boy, Mr. Ryerson Ritchie, is accorded on his merits in one of the greatest cities of the continent, San Francisco, where he has reorganized and rejuvenated the Chamber of Commerce—an amalgamation of the four largest commercial bodies of that city.

This great epoch in the city's history in which Mr. Ritchie was the chief factor, was celebrated by a banquet, a thousand strong, at which he was also the chief speaker. The "Call" of that city refers thus to Mr. Ritchie's address; and its summary contains, in small space, so much of great principle of motive and action that might with advantage be laid to heart by Peterborough, that space is given to it. The "Call" says:

The theme of the big gathering was expressed by Ryerson Ritchie, the new executive officer of the Chamber of Commerce, and one of the leading authorities in America on the subject of co-operation among business men for civic betterment. His subject was 'The Modern Chamber of Commerce' and from his extensive fund of experience in other states he told his hearers just what can be expected from concentrated effort among the merchants of San Francisco.

"The modern Chamber of Commerce is a public trust," was his definition of their organization, "and it serves as a brain for the city".

So must the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce become the brain, or directing power, in the activities that make for commercial and political prosperity in this commonwealth, and Ryerson Ritchie sketched the means of bringing success to the new organization.

High motives of service and city pride must obtain, he declared, before any civic body can win the real element of power in building a city, which is public confidence. He told his audience that the brain must be consistent and intelligent, must study the problems and act in concert and with enthusiasm. Only in such a way can business enterprise be massed for unselfish use in building up the community.

Ritchie dwelt upon the possibilities of San Francisco as unfolded in the three great events of the past year, which he named as the election of James Rolph, Jr., the breaking of ground by President Taft for the exposition in 1915, and finally the celebration of the new Chamber of Commerce, which merges into one association the four largest commercial bodies of the city. He called attention to the close relationship existing between the three events since each depends upon the others, and all are indications of a new spirit that spells progress for San Francisco.

His address was received as the key-note of the banquet and the specific suggestions he made for the administration of the new association met with hearty response. The principal one of these had to do with the immediate need for an industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce, which should be as active in securing new industries and factories for San Francisco as in the Convention league in bringig big meetings to the city. From the welcome given the suggestion last evening it is probable that such a department or bureau will soon be made a part of the organization.

COLD SORES AND ULCERS ARE HEALED BY ZAM-BUK

Cold sores, chapped hands, ulcers, and winter eczema are common troubles just now, and for all these, Zam-Buk will be found the surest and quickest remedy. Sometimes cold sores arise from chilblains on the toes or fingers, and in the former case, where coloured socks are worn, there is a danger of blood-poisoning from the dye. Zam-Buk being so powerfully antiseptic removes the danger as soon as applied and quickly heals.

Mr. W. J. Halliday, of Ash Grove, Ont., says: "I had my little finger frozen, and it cracked at the first joint, causing a bad sore, which discharged freely and would not heal. The pain was very bad, and the whole of my hand became swollen and in bad shape.

"A friend advised me to try Zam-Buk, and I soon found that Zam-Buk was altogether different to any preparation I had ever tried. In a very short time it healed the sore".

Miss Lillie May, of Stoney Creek, Ont., says: "A few weeks since, several nasty, disfiguring cold sores suddenly broke out on my lips, which became much swollen. Seeing my condition, a friend advised me to try Zam-Buk and leave all other preparations aside. This I did, and was much pleased, after a few applications of this balm, to see every sore healed".

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for eczema, blood-poison, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse harmful imitations and substitutes.

Use also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet. Best for baby's tender skin!

POLICE COURT.

An Irishman, a Canadian, and a Swede appeared in the Police Court this morning, collectively, on a charge of being drunk in a public place. Two of them were assessed $2 each, and the third, who was without friends, was allowed to go with a warning. It was necessary to bring one of the Fuel and Cartage Co's trucks into requisition to convey two of the offenders to the station last night.

MORE STRIKES IN NOVEMBER

But Industrial Accidents Were Fewer According to Department of Labour

According to the Labour Department's strike record, there were thirteen trade disputes in existence during November, being three more than in October and six more than in November, 1910. Forty-one firms and nearly twelve thousand employees were involved, and the loss in working days amounted to approximately one hundred and forty thousand. The termination, however, of the coal miners' strike in Alberta and Eastern British Columbia and the speedy settlement of the long-shoremen's strike at Montreal enables it to be said that the situation has improved somewhat since October. The only important strike which began during the month was one of cotton mill operatives at Magog, Que. There were only six strikes unsettled at the close of the month. Ninety-five fatal and one hundred and ninety-one serious injuries to workpeople were reported to the Department during the month. The record is considerably more favourable than that of the preceding month or that of the same month last year. In October there were 344 accidents, fatal and non-fatal, and in November, 1910, there were 407. The chief accident during the month was the foundering of the schooner Antigua off St. Martin's River in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, when the captain and eleven sailors were drowned. There were eleven killed in the railway service, eleven in the agricultural pursuits and twelve among unskilled labourers. The largest number of non-fatal accidents occurred in the metal trades, namely, forty-five, but the twenty-three non-fatal accidents reported in the railway service were of a more serious character.

Court Stanley's New Officers

There was a large attendance of members at the regular meeting of Court Stanley No. 7680, A.O.F., held last night in the S. O. E. hall. The Chief Ranger, A. Brotherson, was in the chair. One candidate was duly initiated and five applications were received for membership. After considerable business had been transacted for the good of the Court, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Chief Ranger—Bro. F. Pratt (accl.)
Past Chief Ranger—Bro. A. Brotherson.
Sub Chief Ranger—Bro. Geo. East.
Treasurer—Bro. S. Adlam.
Secretary—Bro. R. J. McWilliams.
Sub.-Sec.—Bro. A. McWilliams.
Sen. Woodward—Bro. Richard Adlam.
Jr. Woodward—Bro. Jas. Henry.
Sr. Beadle—Bro. Babbs.
Jr. Beadle—Bro. A. Whittell.
Chaplain—Bro. George Tremain.
Trustees—Bros. Hanwell, Tremain, and Edwards.
Auditors — Bros. Malane, Record, and McWha.
Medical Officers — Drs. Scott and Amys.
Cor. to Ancient Forester—Bro. Geo. East.

The newly elected officers will be duly installed at the first meeting on Jan. 2nd, (Tuesday), when a joint installation will take place of the officers of Court Stanley and Queen Alexandra Circle. The Court is in a prosperous condition, and, with the newly elected officers, success is assured for the coming year.

TO CHECK A COLD

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

"The Gospel of The Hereafter" by Rev. Paterson-Smyth, on sale by Trebilcock Bros., price $1.00.

SWIMMING POSTMAN OF INDIA

Next come the swimming postmen of India and the ski-ing postmen of the Andes. The former frequents a district where rivers abound and bridges are few, so that to avoid extensive detours he must be ready at any moment to take to the water. He is equipped as a swimmer, and wears as uniform only a sketchy bathing costume, a turban and life belt.

The Argentine Government imports Norwegians to carry the posts in winter across the Andes on skis. This is probably the most perilous task known to the postal service of the world. The men travel at heights from 3,000 to 18,000 feet above the plain.

Best Farce, Best Company Seen In Chicago In Years

Mr. Will J. Davis, manager of the Illinois Theatre of Chicago, referring to "Dear Old Billy," declares it to be "the best farce and best company seen in Chicago in twenty years." Mr. Percy Hammond, dramatic critic of the Chicago Tribune, says: "It is a facile example of playing and one quite worthy of Mr. Hawtrey's past." The Detroit Free Press says: "Anybody who thinks an Englishman has no sense of humour should see 'Dear Old Billy'; it is the best imported farce since 'Charley's Aunt.' The audience shrieked with laughter. Hawtrey is immense and his support is admirable." "Dear Old Billy" will be seen at "The Grand" to-morrow (Thursday) night.

Bishop O'Connor To Dedicate Fine New R. C. Church At Orillia

Mr. Richard Sheehy is in the city for the winter, having just returned from completing an important contract in Orillia—the building of the Guardian Angel Roman Catholic Church, in that town. The new church is built of Longford limestone and is regarded as the finest cut-stone church in Ontario, north of Toronto. Its cost was about $75,000.

The church is to be dedicated to Divine worship to-morrow, and the occasion will be a notable one. Orillia seems to have a partiality for Peterborough. A Peterborough contractor built the church and a Peterborough Bishop is to dedicate it although it is in the diocese of Toronto. Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Connor will officiate at the opening ceremonies, assisted by priests from both dioceses.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

The Rev. H. W. Raymond, of Saskatoon, is a visitor in the city to-day.

Mr. Russell Wotten has returned from a four months' trip to the Coast.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Browne of Chicago, Ill., are in the city visiting friends.

Mrs. B. D. Hall and Miss Reinhardt will not receive until after New Year's.

Mrs. W. J. Green ,375 Brock street, will not receive again until the New Year, and then on the second Thursday of each month.

Mrs. Thos. H. Darcy, of the Park Hotel, Burleigh Falls, is staying with her son, Fred, of 160 Charlotte st., on account of his illness.

Miss E. Robinson and Mrs. (Rev.) Earle, of Omemee, spent the week-end at Mrs. J. Cunningham's, 508 Stewart street.

Mrs. George Henderson (formerly Ella Mathieson) will receive on Friday, December 15th, from 4 till 6, at No. 3 Grand Central Block.

Mr. Wm. Hipperson has arrived from Regina to spend some weeks in the city. He is being warmly welcomed by his many friends in Peterborough.

Mrs. G. Walter Green arrived home last evening, after a pleasant six weeks' visit with relatives in Denver, Colorado. She was accompanied by her brother, Mr. John Carruthers of Chicago, who will visit with his sister during the holiday season.

Splendid Concert

There was a very large attendance in the Salvation Army Temple last night, when a most enjoyable programme was given under the auspices of the Temple Band. That organization, under the direction of Bandmaster Peryer, has reached a high standard of efficiency, and their splendid playing last night, won new laurels for them. An interesting feature was the reproduction through the phonograph, of marches played by the Band. The Band numbers were interspersed with vocal and instrumental solos and recitations, and was greatly enjoyed. It was as follows:

March—"The New England," introducing "O Canada."

Solo (vocal)—"We're Neo,' a song explaining an army bandsman, by Bandsman Moyses.

Selection—"Old Song Memories".

Mouth organ solo — "Hallelujah Chorus," by Bandsman Vick.

Selection—"Harvest Praises" Band Song—"A Soldier's Life" by the Band, male choir.

Trombone solo—"Hymns of the Old Church Choir," Bandsman Sandford.

Marches by the Band, given through a phonograph.

Selection—"Old Song Memories," a magnificent arrangement of old hymns.

Recitation—"Abide With Me," by Bandsman Fred Gray.

Final Hymns—"When I Survey the Wondrous Cross."

A Woman of Few Words

Mrs. Harry E. Bye, Main street north, Mount Forest, Ont., writes: "Your remedy for kidney, bladder and stomach trouble has given me great relief. Have taken three boxes and now feel like living and better than I have felt for years and I give your all the praise, for they are the best I have ever tried." At all dealers, 25 and 50 cents, or The Fig Pill Co., St. Thomas, Ont. Sold in Peterborough by the Warne Drug Co., Ltd.

Meeting Of The Property Com.

The Property Committee met last night with the following present: Ald. Duncan, chairman; Messrs Brown, Graham, Morgan and Mayor Morrow.

It was moved by Ald. Graham and seconded by Ald. Morgan that the deed from John Dixon of a strip of land on the south side of Victoria avenue, be not registered until further instructions are given.

THE WHOLESALE PRICES FIRM

The Department of Labour index number of wholesale prices for November shows that about the same level was maintained during the past month as in October, though prices are considerably higher than at the same time in 1910. The number is 130.8 for November, compared with 130.5 for the preceding month, and 122.0 in November, 1910. Over two hundred and fifteen articles, carefully selected to represent the entire field of Canadian production and consumption, are included in these calculations. The numbers represent in each case percentages of the average price level prevailing during the decade, 1890-1899, the period selected as the standard of comparison. The detailed figures show that the chief features of the price movement during November was a continuance of the upward trend of grains and dairy products, with a drop in animals and meats. Miscellaneous foods, especially canned goods, flour and sugar, were higher, but textiles were slightly lower owing to a fall in cotton. Under paints and oils, turpentine dropped, but linseed oil advanced. Pulp and rubber were lower.

Musical "At Home"

The musical "at home" held under the auspices of the St. John's church Association, last night in the School Room, proved to be a most enjoyable affair. Mr. Wainwright, chairman of the committee, explained the circumstances under which the Association had been formed, and Mr. H. Cluxton, President, afterwards took the chair, giving a hearty welcome to all present, and asked for the thorough co-operation of the whole congregation in the work of the church, which was to be undertaken by the various committees of the Association. A delightful musical programme was presented by the choir under the leadership of Mr. R. J. Devey, the following members taking part:

Solos by Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie, Mrs. R. Davidson, Miss Quartermaine, Miss Daisy Sharman and Mr. Langley. The choral numbers, "Hail! Smiling Morn," and "Sweet and Low," were given by Mrs. Seward, Mrs. R. J. Devey, Mrs. Langley, Mrs. W. Common, Messrs. Langley, Devey, Flowers and Coleman. Mrs. Langley and Miss Flowers assisted Mr. Devey in accompanying the various numbers.

Dainty refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. Burnett, Mrs. Hazen Ritchie and Mrs. Coulthard, and a pleasant evening concluded by singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

Next Monday a literary evening will be provided by Mr. C. E. Jamieson, consisting of selections from Drummond's "Habitant" stories, and an interesting evening is assured.

Meetings open at 8 prompt, concluding at 9:30.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

Mr. O'Connell examined the witness.

"How far should a car be from any obstacle?"

"It should not run closer than three feet to anything."

Mr. George A. Graham; owner and driver of the motor car, was called.

"Were you driving in an automobile on Avenue Road the day of accident?"

"Yes; I was nearer the car track than the curb, but what I considered a safe distance away. My daughter, Mrs. Sinclair, another Mrs. Sinclair, and my wife, and another lady were in the car, and it was just as my daughter was entering the car that the accident occurred. As we were not going to stop long, I did not go so close to the curb as I otherwise would have done."

Mrs. James Sinclair, an occupant of the auto, was the next witness called, and stated that when the accident occurred, she examined the position of the auto and noticed that the front was close to the curb stone, while the rear was about a foot from it. She could not say, as to the distance between the car and the auto. She said also that the plaintiff was lying behind the auto and seemed to be suffering intensely.

Mrs. Smiley, another occupant of the auto, was called, but she stated that she was too excited to remember what took place.

Mrs. Porter, 308 Avenue Road, happened to be standing in the door of her residence at the time, and noticed what happened. She stated that being used to seeing the cars stop there, she did not take any particular notice, except the noise of the fare box, which attracted her attention. She saw the injured man after the accident. The rest of her evidence was similar to that given by former witnesses.

Moterman's Evidence.

Mr. George Gerlaic, the motorman who was in charge of the car when the accident occurred, was the next witness to enter the box. He explained his duties as motorman. He stated that he usually saw objects ahead for about three blocks, and it was almost that distance in the present incident. He explained how the street was congested with traffic at some points, and its normal conditions at others. He said that the plaintiff would have been safe enough on the top step, and even on the bottom one, had he not been swinging out. He stated that the plaintiff was unconscious until after he had been removed.

Mr. Bristo, an engineer, gave some evidence regarding the measurement of the road at this point.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

If onions are covered over while frying they will retain more of their moisture and will be of better flavour.

Hatpins should never be left in a wet hat, but should be taken out and rubbed perfectly dry to prevent rusting.

A gas stove can be kept nice and clean by wiping it each time it is used and washing it with turpentine once a week.

A tablespoonful of flour put into a kettle of ordinary boiled starch will cause cuffs, collars, etc., to be much stiffer.

Milky tumblers should be washed in cold water; putting them straight into hot water will cloud the glass permanently.

For a salad out of the ordinary mix cream cheese with chopped olives and a boiled dressing. Serve on hearts of lettuce.

If a lamp wick moves up and down with difficulty a simple remedy is to pull out a few threads on either side of the wick.

Two level tablespoonfuls of butter and two level tablespoonfuls of flour to a cup of liquid is the proper measure for thickening a sauce.

Never neglect to moisten lines that is to be drawn, using a damp rag or small sponge. The threads will pull more easily if the line to be drawn is rubbed with soap after being moistened.

When washing tins use soda and hot water. After drying them polish with a little dry flour or powdered whiting and a clean cloth.

Every kitchen should be provided with a small brush to be used for scrubbing potatoes, carrots, parsnips and other ground vegetables.

VAGARIES OF THE DANUBE

The shrinkage of the Danube in certain parts of its course is described in an article in The Sphere. The shrinkage has been gradual where the river crosses the frontier of Baden and Wurtemberg near Immendingen and Tuttlingen through the flowing away of the Danube water into the Lake of Constance. The interesting connection between the Rivers Danube and Aach has been well known to geologists for more than thirty years, but now the shrinkaging has become of general interest, and lively discussions have taken place in the parliaments of Wurtemberg and Baden.

If one visits the neighbourhood of Immendingen in the dry season one sees the Danube flowing through the valley as a stately river with a body of water of at least 2,000 liters. But at a distance of only a few kilometers down the valley one notices a series of most remarkable appearances which prove that the course of the Upper Danube is ruled by the most extraordinary conditions. Such is the case in the so-called marshy ground.

Near the Valley of the Aue the Danube bends with its right bank close to the steep forest-covered mountain slopes. Afterward it has on the left side of the valley the broad Aue, and from there it keeps on for a stretch of about a mile in an east-north-easterly direction until it turns rather abruptly to the north.

The spectator notices at this point the striking fact that the bed of the Danube is leaky. What was once a deep-water level has shrunk to a shallow water-course, and there has been a great swallowing up of water in the gravelly ground.

At some points one sees only a few damp places in which some fish are dead or at the last gasp. Further down the bed of the river is completely dry. For an entire kilometer it was possible recently to walk with dry feet on the bed of the Danube.

This complete cessation of the Danube has taken place every year for the last thirty years and has continued, as a rule, for months, even up to half a year.

While the Danube completely fails for a considerable stretch between Immendingen and Tuttlingen it reigns as an important water power in the neighbourhood of Aach.—New York Times.

Says He Has Solved Problem

NEW YORK, DEC. 12. — Walter Brookins, one time a star aviator for the Wright brothers, and one of the original pupils in their school, announced to-day, that he will soon fly a hydroplane of his own invention that will put all former efforts along this line in the shade. Brookins says he has solved the problem of his "sea-going winger" in a combination motor boat and biplane.

He says the fuselage will be constructed in the shape of a boat, and will contain the engine and passenger seats. He expects to get a speed of 75 to 80 miles per hour, and the side lines will be built to conform to those of a racing water craft. The biplane will be placed over the deck, and will be so arranged that in case of rough sea, it can be readily detached. The wings will be warped after those used on the Wright machines and will set well forward on the boat. A propeller for aerial navigation will be placed in front, while the one for marine purpose will be stationed at the rear. The craft will be designed to carry three or four persons.

Brookins says he has greatly simplified the details in the construction of his motor aeroplane, and has done away with a large number of unnecessary wires by using solid bracing. He says his idea is not wholly to interest the navy, but that he considers it will be practical for all purposes. By removing the wings it can be converted into a speed boat, as it is absolutely sea-going. He expects to be ready to fly by early spring. He says the difficulty with the present hydroplane is that in case of an accident the aviator is helpless, while his new machine can be repaired on water.

At one time Brookins held the world's record for altitude, and was one of the first aviators in this country to make a long cross-country flight.

Power To "Do Things"

Comes with a clear brain and steady nerves.

Tea contains a drug—caffeine—which fogs the brain and upsets the nerves of a great many naturally bright persons who don't suspect the cause.

If you are ambitious to "be somebody," try quitting tea for a while and go on

POSTUM

It is made of wheat, and contains nothing but pure, rich food elements, including the Phosphate of Potash (grown in the grain) which nature requires for the rebuilding of Brain and Nerves, as well as other parts of a healthy body.

There's nothing in this world quite equal to being perfectly well.

Then comfort and success are possible.

STRONG AS STEEL

The Kind of Nerves that can do Things.

A young athlete writes concerning the method by which he acquired steady nerves and also of some good missionary work he has done:

"About a year ago,' he says, "my nerves began to grow unsteady and I found myself troubled with sleeplessness. I set an enquiry on foot and became convinced that the coffee I drank was the cause of the trouble' (tea contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee, and is just as injurious) "and determined to quit right there.

"So I got a package of Postum and Mother and I prepared it. We did not boil it long enough the first time and were not much impressed by it. The second time, however, we followed the directions on the package carefully and were more than pleased with the result.

"I can sleep like a log now, since I am using Postum, my nerves are as strong as steel, and my muscles which used to tire easily, are hard and enduring as iron. Heavy athletics no longer give me pain in the side and chest as formerly.

"I have brought our whole family to use Postum, and it has done every one of them good. My Father has found his asthma almost entirely relieved since he gave up coffee and began to dring Postum."

Many Clubs In The O.H.A.

Belleville Settles Its Indebtedness With Trenton Club

Yesterday was the last day for entering the Ontario Hockey Association, and up to noon Secretary W. A. Hewitt had received 97 entries, with the entry fee accompanying them. There are over a hundred entries altogether, but some of the clubs have forgotten to send along the fee, and therefore cannot be counted in, although most of them will make up the deficiency.

The Belleville club has paid the Trenton club the $21.50 they owed them from last year, and are now ready to take their place on the O. H. A. roster for the coming season.

The entries received yesterday morning by Secretary Hewitt were:
Galt, intermediate.
Rosco H. C., Toronto, intermediate and junior.
Mount Forest, intermediate.
Berlin, intermediate and junior.
St. Helens, junior.
Newmarket, junior.
Brampton, intermediate and junior.

You will find that druggists everywhere speak well of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. They know from long experience in the sale of it that in cases of coughs and colds it can always be depended upon, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all dealers.

BASEBALL NEWS

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—President J. J. McCaffery and Manager Joe Kelley will commence at once to arrange the Toronto team for 1912. Three players have already been disposed of, but the names are withheld nutil officially confirmed.

Kelley is being sought by the New York Americans to take the managerial position recently vacated by Hal Chase. When he arrived from Baltimore last night he was besieged by newspaper men. Joe says that he has not been approached. President McCaffery declares that the Toronto directors will not interfere with any course Kelley may see fit to adopt by way of improving his position. Of course nobody in Toronto wants to see the Leafs' manager take his departure. His name is prominently mentioned in connection with the management of another major league club, which also sought his services last season.

Infielder Purtell, who was bought from Boston Americans by Toronto and who recently lost a salary suit against Boston before the National Commission, does not want to come to Toronto. He suffered from rheumatism last season, and was of little use to the Boston team. The player fears a recurrence of the trouble if he joins the Leafs' squad at the island. The Toronto management is determined that he will play with the Kelley crew or not at all.

Shortstop Tony Smith will not be retained. He is wanted to manage the Galveston team of the Texas League. In the meantime a deal is pending which when closed will effectually protect the shortstop position in the event of Purtell refusing to report.

One of the most talked-of ball players of the baseball meetings here is Second Baseman Ambrose McConnell, purchased last fall by Toronto from The Chicago Americans, for $4,000. His acquisition involves a knotty point of baseball law.

Waivers were asked and secured on him when Hugh Duffy was managing the White Sox. He was to report to Toronto at once, but Chicago players were injured, and the Leaf management generously offered President Comiskey the use of the player until the end of the season. His form with the Sox was little short of phenomenal and he was almost personally responsible for the sweeping victory of the Chicago Americans over the Chicago Nationals in the post-season series.

It is now contended that the waivers secured on McConnell were nullified by not being exercised in the prescribed thirty days. Jimmy Callahan, who succeeded Duffy as manager of the Sox, says that he needs McConnell and will fight for his retention.

Clark Griffith, recently appointed manager of the Washington Americans, also says that he wants the player, and will not waive on him if it be found necessary to again ask for waivers. In the meantime the Toronto Club forwarded a check for $3,500 to the White Sox, and it was returned accepted. It will be offered in evidence by the Leaf management.

Patience—"She got her musical education in Europe." Patrice—"Well, I guess her father thinks it was worth all it cost." "Why?" "Well, she practiced over there, too, didn't she?"—Yonkers Statesman.

"Why don't you be a reformer; a pioneer of though?" "I don't want to be a pioneer," replied Senator Sorghum. "I want to be one of the fellows who come along after he pioneers have cleared things up and organized syndicates to put the proposition on a paying basis."—Washington Star.

"Fifth grade this year, Tommy?" "Yes, sir." "You're in decimals or fractions now, no doubt?" "No, sir. I am in crochet work and clay modeling now."—Louisville Courier-Journal

NEW YORK, DEC. 11.—Three days of big doings in baseball circles opened here this morning, with meetings of the National Commission and the Eastern League.

Indications this morning were that no radical action, if any action at all, would be taken by the commission in regard to the rather formless charges made against the management of the New York Giants in connection with the sale of the tickets for the world's championship series. While there has been much gossip, the investigators say that it would be difficult to collect evidence definite enough to support formal charges.

Comparatively little business confronted the rulers of the Eastern League, outside of the election of officers. It was said that no club would be dropped from this league.

The two big leagues begin their deliberations here to-morrow.

HOCKEY

MONTREAL, Dec. 11.—"We will have twenty players in line for the opening of the National Hockey Association on 27th December," declared Mr. S Lichtenhein yesterday, when questioned as to the progress being made in signing up the Wanderers.

Fifteen contracts have already been received, and it is expected that the additional five will be received during the first of the week.

Among the players already signed up are: Riley Hern, Broughthoup, Boyce and Lawler, who will fight it out for a position in front of the nets. The other players signed are:: Art Ross, Sprague, Cleghorn, Purdy, Cameron, Hyman, Armstrong, Art Bernier, Soke Doran, Tighe, and the contract of Fred Scott is expected today.

Mr. Lichtenhein referred indignantly to the men who had gone west and the reports that they were spreading that hockey in the east would be dead this winter.

Hockey will live longer than any of these fellows, and the bulk of those who have gone west will be back here again very soon. Most of them have already commenced to go back, and according to my dope the Wanderers will not suffer by their absence. It is my belief that the public are de sirous of faster hockey and new faces. The arena patrons have become tired of the old faces and most of them at any rate would like to see the coming youngsters given an opportunity to break into fast company."

Speaking of the prospects of professional hockey in Toronto, Mr. Lichtenhein said that he had been unable to fathom the many contradictory reports which had been sent out from Toronto regarding the progress of the new hockey arena, and said that it was his intention to go to Toronto on meeting at New York and ascertain for himself and the Montreal public just what condition the new arena was in, and what the prospects were for hockey there this season.

All junior and intermediate players in the City are reminded of the workout to-night in the Y. M. C. A. at 7 o'clock. With the continued mild weather the training course has grown considerably in importance, as it looks as if the players will be only given a short time on the ice for a practice before the O. H. A. season opens. Those who have been turning out at the Y.M.C.A. will be in the best of shape and will therefore naturally be considered first when the line-ups are being decided upon. Don't forget to-night's workout at 7 o'clock, sharp.

HOCKEY IN THE WEST

VANCOUVER, DEC. 11. — The Western Canada Professional Hockey League, organised by Frank and Lester Patrick, will consist of three teams, as follows:
Vancouver,
Victoria,
New Westminster.

The original intention was to have two teams in Vancouver, but it was thought spicy rivalry would be aroused by calling one team a New Westminster team, though there is no rink in Westminster, and the team will have to practice and play their games in Vancouver. There are artificial ice rinks in both Victoria and Vancouver. The players will be divided as follows:

VANCOUVER

Goalkeeper—None signed yet. Expert to get Paddy Moran of Quebec.
Point—Skinner Poulin, formerly of Winnipeg Maple Leafs.
Cover point—Frank Patrick, formerly of Renfrew.
Rover—Si Griffis, formerly of Kenora, who has not played for some years.
Centre—Newsy Lalonde of last year's Montreal Canadian team.
Right wing—Tommy Dundeldale, of Winnipeg, of last year's Quebec team.
Left wing—Tom Phillips, who has not played for four years.

VICTORIA

Goal—Bert Lindsay, last year with Renfrew.
Point—Lester Patrick, formerly of Renfrew.
Cover point—Walter Smaill, formerly of Montreal Wanderers, spare man last year.
Rover—Donald Smith of Cornwall, who was with Renfrew last year.
Centre—Odie Cleghorn, of last year's Renfrew team.
Right wing—Bobby Rowe, of last year's Renfrew team.
Left wing—Harris of Kenora, an unknown.

NEW WESTMINSTER

Goal—Hugh Lehman, of last year's Berlin team.
Point—Barney Holden, last year with Quebec.
Cover point—Ernie Johnston of last year's Montreal Wanderers.
Rover—Pud Glass, of last year's Montreal Wanderers.
Centre—Oren Frood, of last year's Berlin team.
Left wing—Harry Hyland of last year's Montreal Wanderers.
Right wing—Jimmy Gardner, of last year's Montreal Wanderers.

It is expected that the players, thus divided, should furnish close games. The winners will challenge for the Stanley Cup. Some of the players have already arrived, and others are on their way.

A Festival of Nations will be held under the auspices of St. James Ladies' Aid on Dec. 14 & 15th, afternoon and Evening in the Market Hall. Hot Dinner will be served from 12 a.m. to 2 p.m. for 25c. Lunches at all hours. Concert Thursday at 8 O'clock. Admission 10c. Come and buy your Christmas presents and Christmas Cooking.

ABOUT CURVES

If you ask a big league ball player about the curves and benders thrown by the various pitchers he won't give orth a mine of information, says a Cincinnati writer. In fact he is likely o tell you that they don't really recognize such things as curves any more. In discussing it, Hans Lobert said: "We only figure on what ve call a straight ball and a ball with a hop on it. All the so-called curves are included in the category of 'ball with a hop on them." Most of the apparently wonderful curves are just balls slanted at the plate from a different angle. The fade-away is a slow ball that is dropping of its own weight. The in or out curves are simply 'fast balls with a hop,' and outsiders call them in or out curves, mainly as they see a left or right handed batter facing them.

"Here and there an occasional pitcher tries all sorts of grating shoots, usually to the detriment of his arm and the enlargement of the base-on-balls record. The veterans, and even the wise youngsters, however, just rely on the fast straight ball thrown from different angles and hence seeming to curve, or on the fast ball with a hop—a ball that makes a little jump as it nears the plate—that's the so-called breaking of the curve, or on slow ones chucked, like the fast, straight balls from different angles. The big wide curves that they used to throw don't happen any more. Wingo Anderson was one of the last to use a roundhouse curve, and he couldn't get control.

"Drop curves, so-called, used to be thrown with a jerk that wore a man's arm all to pieces. Beyond doubt Buffington and Ramsay threw actual drop curves that had speed on them, but the modern pitcher simply fires a slanting ball from overhead. Joe McGinnity was the last man to throw a genuine curving raise ball. Take it from me, there are very few curves now used—a tiny jump of the rotating ball has supplanted them, with the trick of throwing from and to the different angles. Just a straight ball and a ball with a hop on it—that's the pitching of to-day."

RUSSIAN POSTOFFICE

In Russia the post office is a very busy place. Not only do the employees distribute the letters, but they also make notes of the contents if they look in the least bit suspicious. One of the ingenious methods in force is to slit the top of the envelope. The letter is then abstracted, copied and replaced. The envelope is finally inserted in a machine which welds the two split edges so cloverly together again that it is practically impossible to see that they have ever been forced apart. Sometimes, it is said, in fits of absent-mindedness letters are put back in the wrong envelopes, which is apt occasionally to cause a little confusion!

In Lapland, among the Samoyedes who inhabit the tundras of the north, we find the mails travelling in sledges drawn by a picturesque turnout of four reindeer, writes Mrs. Herbert Vivian, in the Standard. The tundras are swamps on which strange snow-white moss and lichen flourish. In summer the district is an inaccessible morass covered with wild fowl and its own wonderful flora, but in winter it is frozen hard, and can easily be crossed. Indeed, such is the severity of the climate in these parts that the soil, only one or two feet below the surface, is frozen all the year around.

The reindeer will flourish where no other beast can. A horse must have a certain amount of his accustomed fodder even in Arctic regions, but a reindeer does not even need the dried fish that a dog will put up with. He is the most accommodatig beast, and will seek his own provender, lichen or seaweed, shovelling the snow on one side with his great flat horns and scraping the moss from the frozen surface.

REINDEER MAIL SLEIGHS

The harnessing of the reindeer mail sledges is quite unique. First goes a reindeer, and then comes a boat-shaped sleigh, in which a man sits. Next comes another reindeer, followed by a sleigh filled with letters and packages. Single reindeer and sledges follow alternately, the rear being brought up by a reindeer.

In the wild mountains of the Caucasus the postman holds a post of some danger, for he must be protected, not only against savage brigands, but also against the inclemency of the skies. There are few practicable routes across the precipitous ranges, and Mt. Elburs, the loftiest peak, is over 18,000 feet high. Nowhere in the world are there so many peoples, nations, languages and religions, and you will scarcely find so many daredevil ruffians elsewhere.

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medicinal, forest plants. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

GHOSTS IN FORMOSA

Then there is the postman of the Isle of Formosa, called Ch-ien li ma, or the horse of a thousand miles. This hard-working person often has to carry 100 pounds at a trot for many days and nights. He must not only be so smart and strong that he alone is capable of tackling half a dozen brigands, but he must, moreover, be ready to face a ghost, if necessary. In Formosa the natives are so superstitious and timorous that if they see or hear the smallest sign of anything uncanny they will not only run away from it as fast as they can, but they will throw down anything that hampers their flight in the least degree in order to be more hardy and enduring, the horse of a thousand miles never eats a full meal, but when he is hungry he will "eat himself seventenths full." Another way of training for fitness is to learn to run with bags of sand fixed to his ankles.

AUTOMOBILE AND CYCLE SKATES

Friday Evening. — The cantata, "The Other Wise Man" will be presented on Friday evening at Murray Street Church by the school. As announced in another column, only five hundred tickets wil be sold. One who happened in at the rehearsal declares that the work, both in music and in general presentation, is as far above the ordinary School Cantata work as can well be imagined. The church will be taxed to accommodate those who wish to see it and it cannot be repeated because the large platform must be removed the next morning.

Patronize Home Industry.—There is no need of sending to Toronto, or elsewhere, for showcases, or store-fixtures of any kind. Patronize the Peterborough Showcase Co., a well-equipped factory, for turning out large contracts, as well as small ones. The material and workmanship are of the best. Prices are right, and terms to suit all people. Any one intending to equip their stores with showcases, wallcases, etc., for the coming Christmas trade should send in their order as soon as possible, before the rush begins and not leave everything to the last two weeks.—W. THEOBALD, manager; Factory, 709 Water St. Telephone 1153.

BURGLARE BEWARE!

CHICAGO, DEC. 12.—If highway robbers believe with Kipling that "The Female of the Species is more Deadly than the Male," they will do well to stay away from suburban towns south of Chicago.

The men's vigilance committee of five towns last night gave their woman residents authority to carry revolvers and wear constables' stars, and if possible make arrests of robbers. They are given full permision to shoot night marauders.

AN EXPENSIVE LUXURY

"Yes," said the literary man with a sigh, "style is a fine thing for a writer to have; but when his wife's got is too, it takes all the profit away."—Harper's Weekly.

The End of Next Week is the Last Business Day before Xmas and the last day to Select your Xmas Goods

But don't you think that it would be wise not to leave it to the last day. The streets and the stores will soon seem too small to accommodate the bustling crowds. PRECEDENT IS WRONG

Error Has Crept Into Quebec Marriage Law, Says Counsel

HEBERT HEARING GOES ON

Montreal, Dec. 14.—That under the Roman law, French law, British common law, and under the law prevailing in the Province of Quebec before the cession of 1760, the one great essential for the validity of the marriage was the mutual consent of the contracting parties; that Catholic priests officiating at marriages in the province prior and subsequent to the cession acted simply as officers or witnesses on behalf of the state in the matter, and that, consequently, all attempts to read into existing statutes exclusive powers for Catholic clergymen to officiate at the marriages of Catholics could not be based on the contention that such exclusive privilege existed prior to the promulgation of the present civil code — such was the burden yesterday of a lengthy address delivered before the practice court by Arnold Wainwright, counsel for Mrs. Hebert, in the marriage annulment case. His address occupied the whole afternoon session and was resumed this morning.

According to the attorneys for Mrs. Hebert, the position of Hebert is that, taking into account the ancient practice existing in Quebec prior to the time when the French colony came under the dominion of the British throne, the marriage of Catholics, to be valid, had of necessity to be contracted before the parish priest or bishop. Hence, if it could be proven that such was not the case, the position assumed by Hebert in the matter would become automatically untenable. As it was it was a decree of the Council of Trent, as well as an ordinance of the French state, issued in 1697, that Catholics had of necessity to be married before their parish priest or bishop, all that had to be proven was that neither the decree nor the ordinance had ever been in effect in French Canada before the cession. This counsel endeavored to do.

Incidentally, as the position Messrs. Cousins and Wainwright are taking is in contradiction to existing jurisprudence as enunciated in judgments of Justices Jette and Lemieux, in two famous cases, they admitted that the task of confronting them was no small one, and, in this admission, they were confirmed by an expression of opinion from Mr. Justice Charbonneau, presiding at the hearing. That an extraordinary error had crept into the jurisprudence of the province, as exemplified in the rulings above referred to, was the view taken by Mr. Wainwright.

"It is incumbent upon me," says he, "to prove that, under the old law, the marriage of two Catholics solemnized before a Protestant clergyman was not illegal.

"In doing this I will prove that the marriage in the present instance cannot be attacked, and thus combat an extraordinary error which has crept into the jurisprudence of the province will be set aside."

Bouquet For Speaker Sproule.

London, Dec. 14.—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, at its regular meeting, placed on record its appreciation of the stand made by the Hon. Dr. Sproule in prohibiting the use of intoxicants at social functions. The membership also expressed its grateful appreciation of the part Mrs. Sproule played in bringing about this happy event.

Taft Still Hopes.

Port Hope, Dec. 14.—J. A. Culverwell, hydraulic engineer of this town, was a delegate to the convention of the Atlantic Deeperways Association held at Washington, and addressed the association on the subject of canals.

Mr. Culverwell met President Taft, and the President said to him that the U. S. would have reciprocity with Canada yet. Mr. Culverwell replied that Canada was not worrying about reciprocity, but was constructing canals, and busy thinking of building more.

PRINCESS IN PERIL

Eldest Sister of King George Nearly Loses Life in Wreck

SAILOR TAKES HER ASHORE

Gibraltar, Dec. 14.—Princess Louise Victoria, Princess Royal of Great Britain and Ireland and sister of King George V., and her daughters, had a thrilling experience yesterday when the Peninsular and Oriental steamship Delhi, on which they were voyaging to Egypt, struck the reefs of Cape Spartel, the northwest extremity of Africa. While being taken ashore by the long boat of the British armored cruiser, Duke of Edinburgh, they were thrown into the water by the capsizing of the boat, one of the daughters having a narrow escape from drowning. She was rescued by a sailor and carried to land with the others, all suffering severely from the bitter cold.

The Delhi struck at one o'clock in the morning in a thick fog. Immediately all the passengers hurried from their staterooms half dressed and put on life preservers. Water poured steadily into the cabins, while enormous seas, sometimes mast-high, broke over the vessel. Signals of distress were sent out by wireless, and the first warship to arrive was the French cruiser Friant.

It was long past daylight before the Friant's steam launch was able to come alongside the Delhi. In the meantime preparations were made aboard the stranded steamer to send the women and children ashore. One of the boats of the Delhi was lowered and filled with passengers. The launch succeeded in getting this in tow and then steamed to the British cruiser Duke of Edinburgh, where the frightened woman and children were safely taken aboard.

The cruiser Duke of Edinburgh with thirty-eight of the rescued passengers from the Delhi, arrived here last night. It was expected that the royal party would reach Gibraltar aboard the battleship London, but latest reports state that they had decided to remain for the night at Tangiers, where they are housed in the British legation.

One of the women passengers, in describing the wreck, said that there was not the slightest panic after the vessel struck. The passengers were summoned to dress and go on deck; but were assured that there was little danger. Arriving on deck they found the fog dense and the seas beating heavily against the ship. There was little confusion or excitement. They remained assembled on deck until 10 o'clock in the morning, when the Friant's boats, after considerable exertions, succeeded in conveying some of the passengers aboard the British cruiser.

All preparations had been made here for the reception of the royal party, which included the Duke of Fife, who, it is learned, remained aboard the Delhi until most of the passengers had been transferred. Wireless despatches say that they are in good health and spirits, but much fatigued and exhausted from their dangerous adventure, the ride on horseback to the lighthouse and the journey thence to Tangiers.

The Delhi is reported to be in a critical position. She is broadside on the rocks. The salvage vessel Gibelmusa, has sailed from here with lighters and will make an attempt to save the specie, mails, and luggage. The weather has moderated somewhat, but heavy seas are still breaking over the stranded vessel.

Hawkes To Report.

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—Immigration Commissioner Arthur Hawkes is in Ottawa to-day in connection with the report which he is to present to the Government. Mr. Hawkes, who has been appointed to prepare a report on the most scientific and practical methods of obtaining settlers for the Dominion, has been out west, and also in Quebec. He will be here for a day or so, and will then go to Toronto. His work will, after Christmas, take him over to England, and he expects to have his report ready about February.

He has already seen about six of the Provincial Governments with regard to overlapping in immigration.

"I was up in New Ontario last week to meet some of the incoming settlers," he said. "An idea has for some time prevailed that it is possible to dump immigrants into New Ontario like coal into a cellar, but this 'root, hog or die' scheme brings failure and discontent."

Royal Garden Party.

Delhi, India, Dec 14.—A royal garden party was held at the fort yesterday afternoon, King George and Queen Mary being given a great ovation by the 7,000 guests as they walked through the grounds. Later in the afternoon Their Majesties, wearing their crowns and coronation robes, appeared in a screened balcony on the wall of the fort, formerly used by the mogul.

The Emperor and Empress remained seated on golden thrones, while for an hour and a half a long train of religious and other native processions passed in review.

Thorold Beats Railway.

St. Catharines, Dec. 14.—The Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway Co., Tuesday night accepted the terms of the Town of Thorold as to renewal of the franchise of the Port Dalhousie, St. Catharines and Thorold Street Railway owned by the former company, and the service was resumed yesterday morning. The company grants all the terms, and the town leases a site to the company for a new station.

MAY ENLARGE FORCES.

Germany Afraid to Face Another Moroccan Crisis.

Berlin, Dec. 14.—The possibility that measures for strengthening the navy or the army or both will be submitted to the next Reichstag, which is to be elected on Jan. 12, 1912, as a result of the international crisis of last summer, is arousing the most intense interest in the press and among the public.

Until now not the slightest indication of the Government's intention in the matter has been evoked.

According to an apparently authoritative statement, which appears in The Boersen Zeitung yesterday, however, the navy and not the army is to be the chief beneficiary of the new program. The army at the same time will figure in the appropriations asked for. These were included in the last budget, but the Minister of War withdrew them out of consideration for the financial condition of the empire.

In connection with the published report that a new military bill which will add two entire corps to the army, is to be introduced instead of increasing the navy program (a statement which The Boersen Zeitung calls semi-official), the newspaper remarks that the remark in this sense is false. The building up of the navy is regarded in authoritative circles as more urgent and the reorganization of the army will be taken up only after what is necessary for the navy has been accomplished. A general military bill is not to be expected for several years In the meantime the Ministry of War will probably seek minor appropriations.

The statement of The Boersen Zeitung does not mention the nature of these appropriations, but it is believed that they concern aviation and the provision of more machine guns.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Hon. John Richards has been elected leader of the Prince Edward Island Liberals.

Senator Ellis and The St. John Globe celebrated their fiftieth anniversary together.

Restrictions on the production and distribution of opium, morphia and cocaine were agreed to at The Hague conference yesterday.

The Allan liner Hungarian, Havre, for St. John, N.B., put in at St. John's, Nfld., last night with one of her main steampipes broken.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy was excused from a Toronto court to be present at a reception in Montreal to the Duke and Duchess of Connaught.

Some Montreal aldermen who were not introduced to the Duke of Connaught at the civic reception, are going to bring the matter up in the City Council.

The American schooner Moowsen, from Bank Quero for Boston, struck on Pollock Point, at the western end of the Lunenburg coast, Tuesday night. The crew were saved.

Mr. John Bright, president of the Winter Fair, speaking at Guelph, said the Government must increase its encouragement of agriculture or the farmers would get behind Mr. Rowell.

The grand jury at Goderich found no bill against J. G. Armstrong, the Lucknow druggist, charged with criminal negligence in giving Miss Murray the wrong medicine and causing her death.

Labor Can Beat Liquor.

Washington, Dec. 14.—"The laboring man is the hope of the country in the fight against the rum traffic," declared John B. Lennon, treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, to the delegates at the annual convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America, here yesterday.

"The liquor forces had boasted," said Mr. Lennon, "that as long as organized labor stood back of them they had no fear of the church. This combination can be broken up," he said "just as soon as Christian men and women begin to interest themselves in organized labor."

IMPORTS INCREASE

Incoming Goods Ahead of Canadian Exports for Year

THE TOTAL SHOWS GROWTH

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—The section of the annual report of the Department of Trade and Commerce dealing with trade between Canada, Great Britain, France and Germany has been issued. The report shows that during the fiscal year, which closed on March 31 last, Canada's total trade with Great Britain amounted to $247,551,912 as against $245,313,984 for 1910. A considerable increase in imports of British goods, and a decrease in exports to Great Britain are shown.

The total imports amounted to $110,586,801 as compared with $95,679,877 in 1910. Exports last year amounted to $136,065,111 as against $149,634,107.

Canada's total trade with the U. S. for the same twelve months reached a total of $413,813,003, as compared with $359,221,327 in the previous year. Both imports and exports increased, the former from $230,070,540 in 1910, to $294,415,202 in 1911, and the latter from $113,150,778 in 1910, to $119,396,801 in 1911. The duty collected on imports from Great Britain amounted to $20,756,811, and on imports from the United States $37,854,728.

The figures of trade with Germany show a slight increase, the total for the year being $12,750,216 as compared with $7,958,264 in 1910.

The figures show that while Canada bought more largely from Germany, the increase in exports from Canada to Germany was very slight, the figures being $2,501,191 for 1910, and $2,863,017 for 1911.

Trade with France increased both ways. The imports amounted to $11,755,403 in 1911, as compared with $10,170,903 in 1910, and the exports $2,782,092 in 1911, as against $2,640,848 in 1910.

Canada's total trade in 1911 amounted to $769,443,905, as compared with $693,211,221 in the previous year, and the duty collected increased from $60,709,707 in 1910, to $72,935,639 in 1911.

The exports as well as imports of coin and bullion show very large increases, the imports being $6,017,589 in 1910, and $10,206,210 in 1911, and the exports $2,594,536 in 1910, and $7,196,155 in 1911.

Spies Heavily Sentenced.

Leipsic, Germany, Dec. 14.—Heavy punishments were meted out yesterday to the English spies arrested at Hamburg on March 16, and who have been on trial behind closed doors before the imperial court for several days.

Max Schultz, an English ship broker, was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude. One of his associates, an engineer named Hipsick, was condemned to twelve years in jail; another engineer named Wulff was sent to jail for two years; a merchant named Von Maack and Max Schultz's housekeeper each received three years.

Max Schultz was accused of using his profession as a ship broker as a covering for corrupting shipyard workmen and getting them to betray German naval secrets. He was for a long time closely watched by detectives during his frequent trips between Hamburg and Bremen, at which ports ten German warship of different types were at the time under construction.

It was said during the trial that incriminating material was found in his possession, but that this was not of an important character, although it is believed that he succeeded in getting documents of value to those who employed him out of the country. He is regarded by the German naval authorities as the most dangerous spy connected with an institution whose activities cover all the shipyards and arsenals of Europe.

On Eve of Revelations.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 14.—Nation-wide interest will centre here to-day when the weeks of work by detectives, attorneys and accountants who have compiled evidence alleged to show the complicity of others than the McNamara brothers in a dynamiting conspiracy, will be turned over to the federal grand jury for formal investigation.

Letters and records of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers have been abstracted and checked, against statements by O. E. McManigal, confessed dynamiter in the employ of John J McNamara, the convicted secretary-treasurer of the association.

Must Be Separate.

Lisbon, Dec. 14.—The Portuguese Government has informed the Catholic Patriarch of Lisbon, Mgr. Anthony Mendes Bello, that it will not pay any salary to the clergy unless the clergy submit to the law separating church and state.

This announcement was made in consequence of the receipt of advices from Rome that the Pope had authorized destitute Portuguese priests to accept stipends from the republic on the condition that they did not allow the Government to interfere in ecclesiastical matters.

Farmer Goes to Jail.

Chatham, Dec 14.—Grant Vanmeer, charged with assaulting James Chittem of Raleigh, was sentenced to one month in jail without the option of a fine by Judge Dowling yesterday afternoon. The assault was the outcome of a dispute over possession of a farm. The defendant started upon Chittem when he and his brother attempted to move a threshing machine into the barn on the property.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED
—BY—
J. W. BROWETT
Optometrist
Q. Why is it that glasses are worn so much more now than years ago?
A. Years ago the science of optics or correcting errors of sight was not understood as it is to-day; only old persons or those near-sighted were Glasses. Now we correct with lenses all errors of sight.
Q. Why is it that cheap glasses do not give satisfaction?
A. Cheap glasses are so faulty in construction and are of such poor quality that they distort the vision and cause pain in the eyes. The optical glass used by us is brilliant, clear and perfect, insuring comfort and ease to the wearer.
Q. Can my headaches be relieved with glasses?
A. A personal visit will be necessary. Let us talk it over.

Revenue Greatly Increased.

Toronto, Dec. 14.—Great increases in the receipts of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway are reported by the Provincial Treasurer.

During the month of September the net earnings of the Government railway amounted to $75,814, as compared with $21,604 during September, 1910.

The gross receipts for September, 1911, were $200,317, against $119,072 during September of last year.

The gross revenue of the T. & N. O. Railway from Nov. 1, 1910, till Sept 30, 1911, amounts to $1,562,646, as compared with $1,440,318 during the corresponding eleven months previous.

After all expenditures have been deducted, the net revenue of the Government railway from Nov. 1, 1910, till Sept. 30, 1911, is $492,822

Last year it was $384,841.

South African Cruisers.

London, Dec. 14. The Chronicle announces that the South African Government will build a fleet of cruisers, which will be employed in times of peace to carry the mails to England in place of the Union Castle Line, which is now receiving a subsidy of $750,000.

Compulsory Training Won't Do.

London, Dec. 14.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Truth disparages Dr. Logie's scheme for compulsory military training. It says "Compulsory training would quicken the procession of young Canadians to the United States. Neither the navy nor the militia arouses enthusiasm in Canada. Both problems threaten to be as difficult for Mr. Borden as for Sir Wilfrid Laurier."

"THE AVENGER"

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

He took the packet from his breast pocket and handed it over to the Baroness. The room seemed filled with exclamations. The Colonel beamed upon them all.

"Quite simple," he declared. "I have just taken them from Mr. Sydney Barnes upstairs. He in his turn took them from——"

The door was suddenly opened. Mrs. Morris Barnes rushed into the room and gazed wildly around.

"Where is he?" she exclaimed. "He has robbed me. The little beast! He got into my rooms while I was out."

The Colonel led her gallantly to a chair.

"Calm yourself, my dear young lady," he said.

"Where is he?" she cried. "Has he been here?"

The Colonel shook his head.

"He is in his room upstairs, but," he said, "I should not advise you to go to him."

"He has my packet—Augustus' packet," she cried, springing up.

The Colonel laid his hand upon her arm.

She rose to her feet, trembling with anger. The Colonel motioned her to resume her seat.

"Come," he said, "so far as you are concerned, you have nothing to complain of. You offered, I believe, to give it up yourself on one condition."

She looked at him with sudden eagerness.

"Well?" she cried impatiently.

"That condition," he said, "shall be complied with."

She looked into his face with strange intentness.

"You mean," she said slowly, "that I shall know who it was that killed my husband?"

"Yes," the Colonel answered.

A sudden cry rang through the room. Louise was on her feet. She came staggering towards them, her hands outstretched.

"No!" she screamed. "No! Father, you are mad! Send the woman away!"

He smiled at her deprecatingly.

"My dear Louise!" he exclaimed. "Our word has been passed to this young woman. Besides," he added, "circumstances which have occurred within the last hour with our young friend upstairs would probably render an explanation imperative! I am sorry for your sake, my dear young lady," he continued, turning to Mrs. Barnes, "to have to tell you this, but if you insist upon knowing, it was I who killed your husband."

Louise fell back into her chair and covered her face with her hands. The Baroness looked shocked but not surprised. Wrayson, dumb and unnerved, had staggered back and was leaning against the table. Mrs. Barnes had already taken a step towards the door. She was very pale, but her eyes were ablaze. Incredulity struggled with her passionate desire for vengeance.

"You!" she exclaimed. "What should you want to kill him for?"

The Colonel sighed regretfully.

"My dear young lady," he said, "it is very painful for me to be so explicit but the situation demands it. I killed him because he was unfit to live—because he was a blackmailer of women, an undean liver, a foul thing upon the face of the earth."

"It's a damned lie!" the girl hissed. "He was good to me, and you shall swing for it!"

The Colonel looked genuinely distressed.

"I am afraid," he said, "that you are prejudiced. If he was as you say, kind to you, it was for his own pleasure. Believe me, I made a careful study of his character before I decided that he must go."

She looked at him with fierce curiosity.

"Are you a god," she demanded, "that you should have power of life or death? Who are you to set yourself up as a judge?"

"Pray do not believe," he begged, "that I arrogate to myself any such position. Only, unfortunately, as regards your late husband's character there could be no mistake, and concerning such men as he I have very strong convictions."

Wrayson, who had recovered himself a little, laid his hand upon the Colonel's shoulder.

"Colonel," he said hoarsely, "you are not serious! You can't be! Be careful! This woman means mischief. She will take you at your word."

"How else should she take me?" the Colonel asked calmly. "I suppose her prejudice in favor of this man was natural, but all I can say is that, under similar circumstances, I should act to-day precisely as I did on the night when I found him about to sell a woman's honour, for money to minister to the degraded pleasures of his life."

The woman leaned towards him, venomous and passionate.

"You are a nice one to preach, you are," she cried hysterically, "you, with a man's blood upon your hands! You a murderer! Degraded indeed! What were his poor sins compared with yours?"

"I am afraid, my dear young lady," he said, "that I should never be able to convert you to my point of view. you are naturally prejudiced, and when I consider that I have failed to convince my own daughter" — he glanced towards Louise—"of the soundness of my views, it goes without saying that I should also find you unsympathetic. You are anxious, I see, to leave us. Permit me!"

He held open the door for her with grave courtesy, but Wrayson pushed him aside. He had recovered himself to some extent, but he still felt as if he were moving in some horrible dream.

"Colonel!" he exclaimed hoarsely, "you know what this means! You know where she will go!"

"If he don't let me tell him," she interrupted. "To the nearest police station! That's where I'm off."

Wrayson glanced quickly at the Colonel, who seemed in no way discomposed.

"Naturally," he assented. "No one, my dear young lady, will interfere with you in your desire to carry out your painfully imperfect sense of justice. Pray pass out!"

She hesitated for a moment. Her poor little brain was struggling, perhaps for the last time, to adapt itself to his point of view—to understand why, at a moment so critical, he should treat her with the easy composure and tolerant good nature of one who gives to a spoilt child its own way. Then she saw signs of further interference on Wrayson's part, and she delayed no longer.

The Colonel closed the door after her, and stood for a moment with his back against it, for Wrayson had shown signs of a desire to follow the woman whose egress he had just permitted. He looked into their faces, white with terror—full of dread of what was to come, and he smiled reassuringly.

"Amy," he said, "turning to the Baroness, "surely you and Wrayson here are possessed of some grains of common sense. Louise, I know, is too easily swayed by sentiment. But you, Wrayson! Surely, I can rely on you!"

"For anything," Wrayson answered, with trembling lips. "But what can I do? What is there to be done?"

The Colonel smiled gently.

"Simply to listen intelligently—sympathetically if you can," he declared. "I want to make my position clear to you if I can. You heard what that poor young woman called me? Probably you would have used the same word yourself. A murderer!"

"Yes!" Wrayson muttered. "I heard!"

"When I came back from the Soudan twelve years ago, I had been instrumental in killing some thousands of brave men, I dare say I had killed a score or so with my own hand. Was I a murderer then?"

"No!" Wrayson answered. "It was a different thing."

"Then killing is not necessarily murder," the Colonel remarked. "Good! Now, take the case of a man like Morris Barnes. He belonged to the class of humanity which you can call by no other name than that of vermin. Whatever he touched he defiled. He was without a single good instinct, a single passable quality. Wherever he lived, he bred contamination. Whoever touched him was the worse for it. His influence upon the world was an unchanging one for evil. Put aside sentiment for one moment, false sentiment I should say, and ask yourself what possible sin can there be in taking the life of such a one. If he had gone on four legs instead of two, his breed would have been exterminated centuries ago."

"We are not the judges," Wrayson began, weakly enough.

"We are, sir," the Colonel thundered. "For what else have we been given brains, the moral sense, the knowledge of good or evil? There are those amongst us who become decadents, whose presence amongst us breeds corruption, whose dirty little lives are like the trail of a fool insect across the page of life. I hold it a just and moral thing to rid the world of such a creature. The sanctity of human life is the canting cry of the falsely sentimental. Human life is sacred or not, according to it achievements. Such a one as Morris Barnes I would brush away like a poisonous fly."

"Bentham!" Wrayson faltered.

"I killed him, sir!" the Colonel answered, "and others of his kidney before him. Louise knew it. I argued with her as I am doing with you, but it was useless. Nevertheless, I have lived as seemed good to me."

"There is the law," Wrayson said, with a horrified glance towards Louise. He understood now.

The Colonel bowed his head.

"I am prepared," the Colonel answered, "to pay the penalty of all reformers."

There was a ring at the bell. Wrayson threw open the door. A small boy stood there. He held a piece of paper in his hand.

"The lidy said," he declared, "that the white-headed gentleman would give me arf a crown for this 'ere!"

Wrayson gave him the money, and stepped back into the room. He gave the paper to the Colonel, who read it calmly, first to himself, and then aloud.

"I leave you to your conshens. He may have been bad, but he was good to me! Agnes B."

The Colonel's eyes grew very soft.

"Poor little woman," he said to himself. "Wrayson, you'll look after her. You'll see she doesn't come to grief!"

There was the sound of a heavy fall in the room above. The Colonel's face assumed an air of intense irritation.

"It's that infernal window pole," he declared. "I had doubts about it all the time."

Wrayson looked at him in horror.

"What do you mean?" he demanded.

"Perhaps you had better go up and see," the Colonel answered, takin' up his hat. "Avery commonplace tragedy after all! I don't quite see what else he could have done. He was penniless, half mad with disappointment; he'd been smoking too many cigarettes and drinking too much cheap liquor, and he was in danger of arrest for selling the landlord's furniture. No other end for him, I am afraid."

Wrayson threw open the door.

"Don't hurry," the Colonel declared. "You'll probably find that he has hanged himself, but he must have been dead for some time."

Wrayson tore up the stairs. The Colonel watched him for a moment. Then, with a little sigh, he began to descend.

"False sentiment," he murmured to himself. "The world's full of it."

CHAPTER XLII.

Wrayson rode slowly up the great avenue and paused at the bend to see for the first time at close quarters the house, which from the valley below had seemed little more than a speck of white set in a deep bower of green. Seen at close quarters its size amazed him. With its cluster of outbuildings, it occupied nearly the whole of the plateau, which was like a jutting tableland out from the side of the mountain. It was of two storeys only, and encircled with a great verandah supported by embowered pillars. Free at last from the densely growing trees, Wrayson for the first time during his long climb, caught an uninterrupted view of the magnificent panorama below. A land of hills, of black forests and shining rivers; a land uncultivated but rich in promise, magnificent in its primitivism. It was a wonderful dwelling this, of which the owner, springing down from the verandah, was now on his way to meet his guest.

The two men shook hands with unaffected heartiness. Duncan Fitzmaurice, in his white linen riding clothes, seemed taller than ever, a little gaunt and thin, too, from a recent attack of fever. There was no doubt about the pleasure with which he received his guest.

"Where is Louise?" he asked, looking behind down the valley.

"Coming up in the wagons," Wrayson answered. "She has been riding all day and was tired."

A Kaffir boy came out with a tray and glasses. Wrayson helped himself to a whisky and soda, and lit a cigar.

"I'll get my pony and ride back with you to meet them," Duncan said.

Wrayson detained him.

"One moment," he said. "I have something to say to you first."

Duncan glanced at him a little anxiously. Wrayson answered the look.

"Nothing—disturbing," he said. "You learnt the end of everything from my letters?"

"I think so," Duncan answered.

"The verdict on your father's death was absolutely unanimous," Wrayson said. "He was seen to stagger on the platform just as the train came in, and he seemed to make every effort to save himself. He was killed quite instantaneously. I do not think that anyone had a suspicion that it was not entirely accidental."

Duncan nodded.

"And the other affair?"

"You mean the death of Sydney Barnes? No one has ever doubted that he committed suicide. Everything seemed to point to it. There is only one man who knew about Morris Barnes and probably guesses the rest. His name was Heneage, and he was your father's friend. He did not speak when he was alive, so he is not likely to now. There is the young woman, of course, Mrs. Morris Barnes. She has married again and gone to Canada. Louise looked after her."

Duncan took up his riding whip from the table.

"Now tell me," he said, "what it is that you have to say to me."

"Do you read the papers?" Wrayson asked abruptly.

"Only so far as they treat of matters connected with this country," Duncan answered.

"You have not read, then, of the Mexonian divorce?"

The man's eyes were lit with fire. The handle of the riding whip snapped in his hands.

"They have never granted it!" he cried.

"Not in its first form," Wrayson answered hastily. "The whole suit fell to the ground for want of evidence."

"It is abandoned, then?" Douglas demanded.

"On the contrary, the courts have granted the decree," Wrayson answered, "but on political grounds only. Every material charge against the Queen was withdrawn, and the divorce became a matter of arrangement."

"She is free from that brute, then?" Duncan said quietly. "I am glad."

Wrayson glanced down towards the valley. A couple of wagons and several Kaffir boys with led horses were just entering the valley.

"Yes!" he said, "she is free!"

Something in his intonation, some change in his face, gripped hold of Duncan. He caught his visitor by the shoulder roughly.

"What the devil do you mean?" he demanded. "What difference does it make? She would never dare to——"

"You can never tell," Wrayson said with a little sigh, "what a woman will dare to do. Tell me the truth, Duncan. You care for her still?"

"God knows it!" he answered fiercely. "There has never been another woman. There never could be."

"Jump on your pony, then, and ride down and meet them. Gently, man! Don't break your neck. . . ."

Later on they sat out upon the verandah. The swift darkness was falling already upon the land, the colour was fading fast from the gorgeous fragments of piled-up clouds in the western sky. Almost as they watched, the outline faded away from the distant mountains, the rolling woods lost their shape.

"It's a wonderful country, yours, Duncan," Wrayson said.

"It is God's own country," Duncan answered quietly. "What we shall make of it, He only knows! It is the country of eternal mysteries."

He pointed northwards.

"Think," he said, "beneath those forests are the ruins of cities, magnificent in civilization and art before a stone of Babylon was built, when Nineveh was unknown. What a heritage! What a splendid heritage, if only we can prove ourselves worthy of it!"

"Why not?" Wrayson asked quietly. "Our day of decline is not yet. Even the historians admit that."

"It is the money-grabbers of the world who belittle empire," Duncan answered. "It is from the money-grabbers of the Transvaal that we have most to fear. Only those can know what Africa is, what it might mean to us, who shake the dust of civilization from their feet, and creep a little way into its heart. It is here in the quiet places that one begins to understand. One has the sense of coming into a virgin country, strong, fresh, and wonderful. Think of the race who might be bred here! They would rejuvenate the world!"

"And yet," the woman at his side murmured, the woman who had been a queen, "it is not a virgin country after all. A little further northwards and the forests have in their keeping the secrets of ages. Shall we ever possess them, I wonder?"

In the darkness she felt his arms about her. Louise and her husband had wandered away.

"One thing at least remains—changeless and eternal as history itself," he murmured, as their lips met. "Thank God for it!"

(THE END.)

Distress From Indigestion

Tried in Vain to Get a Cure—All Medicines Failed

Old Trouble Disappeared When the Liver and Bowels Were Set Right by

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You cannot make a greater mistake than to think that indigestion is confined to the stomach. It is a disease of the liver and bowels, and it is only by getting these organs healthy and active that you can ever hope to cure chronic indigestion.

Here are two cases reported by Mr. Skinner, which tell of continued failure to cure indigestion by dosing the stomach. Both were cured thoroughly by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. A. C. Skinner, Atlantic St., Hardwoodhill, Sydney, B.C., writes: "My wife was troubled with indigestion and tried all sorts of medicines in vain. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I got her to try them, and to our great delight she was cured. We would not think of being without them in the house for use when the liver and bowels became sluggish.

I told a friend about them and gave him a box. He had suffered from indigestion for years and tried most everything he could get. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Bills were also successful in his case, and he says they beat any medicine he ever came across."

Two Minute Talks About

PANDORA RANGE

for Coal or Wood

Its Long Life

THE Pandora Range is for those who desire to make a permanent investment. The high quality of the materials and the superior method of construction assure long life.

The Body of the Pandora is very heavy. The Rods and Bolts are on the outside where they cannot burn or rust out. The Expansion Rings of the cooking section provide ample allowance for extreme expansion and contraction and eliminate the possibility of the metal cracking.

The Cooking Top is Burnished which toughens the surface of the metal and increases its strength. McClary Oil Cement is used between the joints. Unlike cheap, ordinary cement, it will not dry out and need replacing. The Nickelling will not tarnish and is many times more durable than the single coat of nickel on ordinary ranges.

The Semi-Steel Fire Box Linings are twenty per cent. heavier than cast or gray iron linings. Sulphur fumes, so destructive to cast iron, cannot penetrate the hard, smooth as glass surface of Semi-Steel. The Grates have Three Faces, which allows the wear to be distributed on three sides, insuring triple durability.

If you want a range of guaranteed quality get the Pandora. It's built to give you lasting service.

TALKING BACKWARDS

A certain restaurant keeper has had trouble with his help coming late to their work. To remedy this he speaks to them individually. To those who are on time he is careful to say a word of commendation. Here is what he said to one of the boys the other morning:

"Vell, vell! You are improving. Always before you vas behind. Lately you come early, and now at last you're first!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

PROUD OF THE NAVY

Lord Londonderry tells a tale, which conveys its own moral, about an Irishman in his employ. 'Twas on the subject of Ireland's wrongs. "We'll not get Home Rule for ould Oireland," said this son of Erin, "till Germany, France, Russia, and America give them blayguards of English men a good batin'." After a pause he added proudly: "And, begorra, t' whole lot uv thim shoved togither couldn't do it! Och, it's the grand navy we've got!" M.A.P.

THE JAP AND THE RUSS

Admiral Togo at a luncheon in New York told a story that recalled the Russo-Japanese War.

"In your city of Washington," he said, "in those troubled days when it was pretty certain Russia and Japan would have to fight, a Russian and a Japanese met at a dance.

"Politely enough the two men discussed the coming war and then, as they were about to part, the Russian said:

"'I won't bid you good-bye, but au revoir. I'll soon be in Tokio, you know, drinking your health in champagne.'

"'Oh,' said the Japanese, shaking his head and smiling, 'I'm afraid my country isn't rich enough to give her prisoners of war champagne.'"—New York Tribune.

CHIP ON HIS SHOULDER

The political game was wholly new to William C. L. Ziehn when Harrison Sears and Harlan fought it out for the Mayoralty. He was a pattern-maker and lived in the old Fourteenth Ward, now the Fifteenth.

Mr. Ziehn was persuaded to run for Alderman, and he succeeded in defeating George Mugler.

This was after he got going. At the outset campaigning was full of surprises to him, and he was naturally a bit suspicious of that which he did not understand.

It was arranged to give him a start off with a meeting. A vacant store was hired and filled with chairs. At the far end of the store a brewery table was stretched across, draped with an American flag, and behind the table was Joe Strauss.

The candidate's entrance was timed so that he should be greeted by a full house, and as he progressed down the aisle Mr. Strauss shouted in welcome:

"What's the matter with Ziehn?"

Mr. Ziehn paused, glared at Strauss and shouted back:

"What the —— is the matter with you?"—Chicago Evening Post.

IT DIDN'T WORK

Upton Sinclair, at a vegetarian supper at Arden, said of business:

"The Japanese daimios deemed business dishonorable on the ground that profit was theft. They said, for example, that if you had a hat worth $1 and you deluded a purchaser into the belief that it was worth $2 your profit of $1 on the sale was just so much stealing.

"The Japanese daimios went too far in their condemnation of business, but I must say that the morals of some business men are very, very queer.

"There's a Wilmington wholesale clothier who had 70 overcoats he couldn't get rid of, so a business man said to him:

"'Here's a good way to work off those coats, George. Mark them down 50 per cent., then select 10 customers; send each customer seven coats, with a bill for only six. They'll all be so tickled to think they've each done you out of a coat that they'll keep the lot.'

"'By jingo! A good idea!' the dealer exclaimed.

"So he did as his friend advised, and then, a few days later, he called the other up on the telephone:

"'Say, I'd like to kill you!' he roared. 'You got me into a nice mess over those 70 overcoats.'

"'Why, didn't the scheme work?'

"'Work? I should say it didn't work! Those 70 customers each held on to the seventh coat that hadn't been billed and threw the other six back on my hands.'"—New York Tribune.

THE QUAKER'S VOTE

A good story is told by Representative Smith, of Pennsylvania, about an honest old Quaker who was refused a vote because he could not show the necessary papers.

"The good old Quaker wanted to cast his ballot but was turned down by an inspector," says Mr. Smith.

"'Why, my friend, thee knows me, thee knows that I live in thy ward,' said the Quaker.

"'I know you by sight, but I must see your papers,' was the reply.

"'I would not tell thee a falsehood; I have the papers, and I will go and bring them to thee.'

"'Get the necessary papers and you can vote.'

"The old gentleman went home and got the papers, and cast his ballot. The next year he again appeared at the polls and the same inspector challenged his vote.

"'Surely thee would not have me go again a mile to get my papers?' asked the Quaker. 'Thee must know that I have a vote.'

"'No papers, no vote, sir,' answered the inspector.

"'I thought thee might be so vicious,' said the old man, as a smile played under his broadbrim, 'and I have brought them with me this time. Thee will not have the pleasure of having me walk a mile for them. I will bring them next year too.'"—Washington Star.

THE UNIVERSAL FRANCHISE

A small number of men sympathisers took part in the suffragist parade in New York City, among them several members of the faculty of Teachers' College. One of these professors had the honour of leading the male contingent and carrying a banner.

"Did you notice," he asked a friend afterward, "what the inscription was on that banner they gave me to carry?"

"No," replied the friend, "you carried it as if you were afraid someone would decipher it."

"It read," chuckled the professor, "'The men vote—why not we?'"—Success Magazine.

DRY HUMOUR

The Governor of Maine was at the school and was telling the pupils what the people of different states were called.

"Now," he said, "the people from Indiana are called 'Hoosiers,' the people from North Carolina 'Tar Heels,' the people from Michigan we know as 'Michiganders.' Now, what little boy or girl can tell me what the people of Maine are called?"

"I know," said a little girl.

"Well, what are we called?" asked the Governor.

"Maniacs!"—Norfolk Virginia-Pilot.

THE LIMIT

Jack Bradley, an Atchison travelling man, is a clever ventriloquist. The other day at Denton, Bradley had Forest Warran, an Atchison Globe representative, chasing up and down the street and through alleys, looking for a supposed farmer who kept up continual calls for the Globe man. When the "farmer" said "I want to pay him five years' subscription," Warran broke down the door in William Gillan's store in his search for the mythical voice.—Kansas City Journal.

"Aye, aye!" was he response; "but the warld wasn't sae weel drained as it is noo."—Strand Magazine.

ASTHMA

Mrs. Farndel of Clementsport, N. S., Suffered All Her Life From Asthma, But Was Permanently Cured by Catarrhozone After All Other Means Failed.

Mrs. Farndel gives the following statement of her case for the benefit of others who are suffering from asthma, and hopes that many will follow her example and use Catarrhozone:—

"I am now in my eightieth year, and cannot recall the time when I was free from asthma. I had always a choking cough, feverishness, spasms, difficulty in breathing, headache and nausea. My druggist advised Catarrhozone one day, and I bought a large outfit. It gave relief in five minutes, and helped me very much in one day.

"I inhaled Catarrhozone ten minutes every hour, and by the time two bottles were used I was completely cured. I am as free now from asthma as if I never had it. My perfect recovery is due entirely to Catarrhozone. I prize my Catarrhozone inhaler next to life itself."

DUTCH CHEMICAL INVENTIONS

A well known chemist of this city (Amsterdam) has recently invented a new kind of liquid soap, of fine quality and agreeable scent, for use in parlour cars, steamboats, hotels and other public places. It is claimed that one quart is sufficient for washing the hands 2,500 times at a cost of 80 cents.

The same inventor has also discovered the secret of extracting any desired percentage of nicotine from tobacco in the leaf, and caffeine from coffee, which removes the alleged cause of injurious effects from the beverage. A cafe in one of the principal streets of the city has recently been opened where only such coffee is sold, and it is much frequented.—Consular Reports.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES

BEAN SOUP

One cupful of lima beans, five cupfuls of cold water, one chopped onion, one sprig of parsley, one stalk of celery, one sliced carrot, four heaping teaspoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, salt and red pepper, one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, half a teaspoonful of white pepper. Soak the beans over night in cold water. Cook the beans, onion, parsley, celery and carrot in boiling water; when tender rub through a sieve. Blend the butter and flour together in a saucepan, add the milk and seasoning, cook for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Combine mixtures and serve hot. One cupful of cooked tomatoes added to this soup makes a pleasant variation.

* * *

JUGGED STEAK

Two or three pounds of beef steak, one large carrot, three large onions, one turnip, three sticks of celery, a small bunch of parsley and herbs, four cloves a strip of lemon rind, three-quarters of a pint of stock, or water, one heaping tablespoonful of drippings, a glass of port, if possible, a little flour, salt and pepper.

Cut the steak in three or four pieces. Wash and prepare the vegetables and cut them in thin slices. After wiping the steak with a damp cloth, cover it with flour. Melt the dripping in a frying pan, put in the steak, and fry it a nice brown on both sides. Put half of the onions in a stoneware jar, or casserole, put the meat on them, and on it put the rest of the vegetables and the herbs, cloves and lemon rind, tied in a piece of muslin. Pour in the stock, or water, and a seasoning of salt and pepper. Put the lid on the jar, and tie over it a thick piece of brown paper.

Then put the jar either in a slow oven or in a saucepan of hot water, and let it cook gently from two and a half to three hours. Then remove the lid, skim it well, and take out the herbs. Season it to taste with salt and pepper, and add wine. Serve it very hot.

PUMPKIN PIE

Two cupfuls of cooked pumpkin, half teaspoonful of salt, two-thirds cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls melted butter, two eggs, two cupfuls of milk, quarter teaspoonful allspice, half teaspoonful cinnamon, half teaspoonful nutmeg.

Mix the sugar, salt and spices together and stir into the cooked pumpkin, add the butter, milk and the eggs well beaten. There should be just one quart when finished and only enough milk should be used to make this quantity, usually two cupfuls. Line the pie plate with crust, pour in the filling and bake slowly, taking care that the heat is not so intense as to boil the pie. Sprinkle a little cinnamon on the pie, before putting in the oven.

PANNED OYSTERS

Cover the bottom of a baking dish with oysters and a very little of their own liquor, not enough to float them. Cover tight, and bake five minutes in a quick oven. Serve on buttered toast and pour over them the hot liquor from the pan.

THOUGHT COLD WOULD TURN INTO CONSUMPTION

LEFT LUNG GOT VERY SORE, HEART DID NOT FEEL ANY TOO GOOD.

Mr. Robert McLarson, Shawville, Que., writes:—"I am writing to tell you an experience I had with a bad cold and a bottle of your valuable medicine. I was up in the lumber camps teaming horses, and I caught a very bad cold. I thought it was going to turn into consumption, for my left lung got very sore and my heart did not feel any too good. I came home and tried some different remedies but they did me no good. A friend told me about Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I tried it, and when I had taken two bottles my cold was gone. I think it is a great remedy, and will advise any one with a cold to use it. I can't praise it enough."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, which combined with Wild Cherry bark and other pectoral remedies, makes it one of the greatest known preparations for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

MISTRESS OF A MOUSE FARM

Miss Abbie E. C. Lathrop Derives Profit and Pleasure from the Raising of Rodents on Her Ten Acres at Granby, Mass.

(Copyright, 1911, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

WOMEN lion tamers and women who handle serpents—women who do all sorts of strange and daring things that even men would quail at—are not uncommon. Yet, if a tiny mouse scampers across the floor of the cage where a woman of exceptional courage is putting a dozen savage beasts through their tricks she screams with alarm and rushes for the door.

The woman who is not afraid of mice is exceptional. The woman who raises mice and rats for a living and who handles hundreds of them every day is unique. There is only one such woman mouse farmer in America, if not in the world, and that is Miss Abbie E. C. Lathrop, of Granby, Mass. According to her letter head, she is a breeder of "white and fancy colored mice, English and Peruvian cavies, rabbits, rats and a general line of pet stock." Cavies are guinea pigs.

Miss Lathrop has grown passing wealthy from her strange industry. She gets a larger income from her ten acre mouse farm than other New England agriculturists do from farms of a hundred acres. The entire area of Miss Lathrop's fields is not covered with rats and mice, however. Most of the ground is devoted to raising food for her rodents. Her crop of mice and rats alone is about ten thousand annually.

One wonders what useful or ornamental purpose so many of these animals can serve. As a matter of fact, in every city there are one or more dealers who sell rats and mice; not the common gray rodents that scurry about at night in the walls and ceiling, but pure white ones with pink or blue eyes. Many of these mice and rats are bought by the medical research laboratories and are inoculated with the germs of the various diseases that the scientists are studying. They are kept under observation and cared for most carefully. In this way thousands of them are sacrificed each year to the cause of science.

Still others lead a happier and healthier life, although they, too, are used for experimental purposes. These mice are of various colors, and in such places as the Harvard Medical School and the Rockefeller Institute experiments are being conducted in the mixing of the breeds of these colored mice. Just what useful end is to be attained by this mixing of colors is hard to imagine, but some very curious results have been arrived at.

The guinea pigs and rabbits are used in much the same way in the medical schools as are the mice and rats. Guinea pigs are also employed by manufacturing chemists, who experiment on the animals with antitoxins before putting such remedies on the market. A standard of strength has to be arrived at and maintained in every antitoxin, else there would be variations that would be fatal when they were used on humankind. Rabbits are also employed in the study of anatomy.

Feeding Them.

Miss Lathrop is fond of animals and is opposed to any of her pets being tortured. Therefore she has insisted upon obtaining from each medical school that she supplies a statement that none of her rats, mice or guinea pigs be used for anatomical studies until they are so effectually etherized that they never awaken.

Miss Lathrop's going into mouse farming was one of the most natural things in the world. Many men and women have their work cut out for them from the very beginning if they only follow their natural instinct. It was so with Miss Lathrop. When she was a little girl she evinced her fondness for rats and mice. When her small companions would gather their scant skirts about them and run at the sight of a mouse Abbie Lathrop would stoop down and call the mouse to her. She seemed to have an extraordinary power over these small animals.

The first pets she had were a pair of dancing mice that she saw in a Boston dealer's window. She coveted these more than anything else on earth and saved up money until she could buy them, for her folk were plain farmer people and not at all well to do. The dancing mouse, by the way, is not at all like the mouse of household nooks and crannies. It is the product of centuries of careful breeding in China and Japan, where it is a household pet. It can be trained to do all sorts of curious tricks, the most remarkable of which is dancing to music. Music seems to intoxicate it and make it delirious with joy. The dancing mouse dances naturally, but it has to be trained in order to execute fancy steps.

Her Dancing Mice.

Miss Lathrop' pair of dancing mice raised a large family. At first she gave the mice to youngsters, but she soon found that there was a good market for them and that she could get high price for those that were trained. Therefore she began adding to the family income by selling her pets in the nearby towns.

As the years went on her father died and she was left with an invalid mother to support. Her fame as a mouse farmer had spread to such distant places as Boston, New York and Philadelphia. From these cities she began to receive inquiries not only for dancing mice, but for other varieties. So she decided to go into mouse farming as a business.

She Types Her Own Letters.

At first she had only a little place, but as her trade grew her bank account piled up, and it was not long before she was able to buy the ten acre farm that she now owns. From the road the house, outbuildings and fields look very much like any other farm. In the house and barns, however, there are innumerable cages of mice and rats. Miss Lathrop's business has grown to such an extent that she has to give her entire attention to it. She employs a housekeeper, but she attends to all of her own correspondence. She also spends much of her time in the fields during the summer.

Fresh air is highly essential to the successful growth of her crop, and so, every bright day the cages, covered with wire netting, are taken out in the fields and left until nightfall. Then they are brought back to the barns and stacked up in long rows, looking in the dim light like a lot of ride sectional bookcases.

It takes tons and tons of carrots and turnips and other vegetables and green stuff to feed Miss Lathrop's mice and rats. She enjoys nothing better than to go out in the fields herself and gather a wheelbarrow load for their meals. They are gluttons and never seem to get enough. Indeed, the ten acre farm does not raise quite half the amount of provender that these rodents require.

Miss Lathrop buys largely from neighboring farmers. As a matter of fact, her unique industry has brought unusual prosperity to that region. The mouse farm is four miles from South Hadley, Mass., which is about forty from the nearest large town. Granby is a little New England village, so small that it cannot be found on most maps.

Miss Lathrop buys large quantities of crackers, grain, bread, cheese and cornmeal for her "stock." The milk of one cow is devoted entirely to the baby rats and mice. A great deal of hay and straw is used also. These rodents are naturally very cleanly, and fresh beds have to be given them every day. They enjoy nothing so much as burrowing about in the straw and making nests.

When feeding time comes the mice and rats and guinea pigs all set up a tremendous squeaking. They seem to know exactly the hour. When Miss Lathrop's step is heard, the commotion in the cages is extraordinary. It is a crescendo of small sounds that could not be heard anywhere else except on a mouse farm.

Miss Lathrop still has her own especial favorites among the thousands of rats and mice that pass under her eyes every year. She is fond of taking these into her lap or her hands and feeding them and petting them. They seem to respond with every mark of affection. In fact, Miss Lathrop is inclined to ascribe greater intelligence to these small animals than to dogs or cats or horses.

Miss Lathrop does not raise very many dancing mice now. She says that she has no time to train them and that she cannot find any one who can take her place satisfactorily at this work. She has developed another branch of her industry, however, which seems likely to prove very profitable so long as women wear furs. That is the raising of rats for their fur. A rat is one of the most prolific of animals, and white rats are especially productive. Moreover, the fur of white rats will take almost any dye color perfectly. Therefore they are highly esteemed by manufacturing furriers.

No Place for Cats.

Most of Miss Lathrop's white rat skins find their way across the Atlantic to Leipsic. In this place there are several factories that make a business of taking white rat skins, dyeing the fur and transforming them into fur coats and other things for women's wear. They come back to America under many different names. Probably no end of women are wearing skins from Miss Lathrop's white rats in the belief that they are the product of rare and most costly fur bearing animals. The demand for these skins is so great that Miss Lathrop cannot raise white rats fast enough.

It is needless to say that there are no cats about Miss Lathrop's mouse farm. Miss Lathrop does not like cats. The farm is so isolated that cats never visit it, although if the news got about among the felines of the countryside there is no doubt that scores of them would hasten to make a raid upon this mouse farm, which probably is the nearest thing on earth that corresponds to a cat's idea of heaven.

Miss Lathrop is a New Englander, born and bred, and she has no patience with the farmers in her neighborhood who talk of hard times. She counsels all of them to go into "freak" farming of some sort, and points to her own experience to prove the money that there is in it. She says that every abandoned farm could be made to pay in one way or another, if the people who lived on it had a little energy. She points out that fur farming, fish farming, feather farming or game farming can be started on very little capital and bring big results. She is looking forward to the time when she can embark in one of these side lines as a diversion. But she expects mouse farming to be her true vocation as long as she lives.

LET US LAUGH AND BE MERRY

A POUGHKEEPSIE florist tells of a Vassar girl who came to him with a request for flowers to be placed in two large windows.

"They must be red and blue," said she, as she gave a critical glance about her at the blooms displayed. "That lot of lobelias will do very nicely. How much are those?" she added, pointing to some flaming geraniums.

"Fifteen cents, four for fifty cents," said the florist. "Might line geraniums, miss."

A glance of pity was bestowed upon him by the Vassar girl. "Then, most definitely, as if [illegible] the florist's feelings by the contrast," she added: "I will take a dozen of your best geranium."

A DEAR little thing in Baltimore but recently married insisted that the marketing for their first dinner at home should be done by herself.

Nice quarter of lamb, ma'am," politely suggested the butcher when she had announced her intention of seeing that Henry was to have "just the very best dinner ever." "Nice quarter of lamb, ma'am."

The bride's face wrinkled in thought. "But," said she, "there are only two of us. Don't you think an eighth would suffice?"

IN South Carolina, where the dispensary system obtains, there flourish various "clubs" where thirsty souls from other parts may after certain formalities obtain their liquid refreshments.

In this connection a prominent actor tells of his encounter with a dusky servitor in one such club.

"What have you," the player had asked of the darky, "in the shape of periodicals?"

"Corn liquor, suh," was the immediate reply of the attendant. "Beer an' wine, but mostly corn liquor, suh."

A MAN whose illness threatened to develop into typhoid was taken to the hospital. Instead of growing worse he improved, and at the end of the fourth day, when his wife visited him, he asked to be taken home.

"But you have paid for a week," replied his thrifty spouse. "They won't refund the money. You had better stay your week out."

Tree Surgery a Novelty in Modern Science of Forestry

IF the fine old trees on your family estate begin to look old and worn before their time, or if the newly planted shade trees bordering your suburban garden are not thriving as they should, you do not let them sicken and die, but you call in the services of a tree physician. The tree physician diagnoses the case and then operates or treats, as he thinks best.

Tree surgery is a novelty in the modern science of forestry. Not so much in the science, perhaps, as in its application to town and country places. Americans are beginning to appreciate the beauty and scenic value of their towering elms and maples and oaks and to realize that if these nature ornaments are always to look their best and to grow and expand they must have a little of that beauty treatment which stays the hand of Time.

A few months ago three young foresters, graduates of Eastern forestry schools, established themselves in New York city for the purpose of rejuvenating trees in the vicinity of the metropolis and of improving the newer plantings, which sometimes need only the slightest treatment to make them flourish magnificently. They had had a great deal of experience in the Maine woods and have already restored some of the historic college trees, without which there could be no college tradition, no wide spreading chestnut or oak, at least for many years, under which to welcome the newcomers or to say farewell to classmates grown dear.

The campuses of Yale and Bodwoin both show examples of the new tree surgery which is being done by these young men. The century old Thornedyke Oak, beneath whose branches the Bowdoin College classes say "goodby," was almost in the last stages of decay not long ago. It was cracked and a large cavity had appeared in one side. Bowdoin men, who are fond of the oak, with college memories clustered around its scarred trunk, decided to find out if the life of their favorite tree could not be saved or prolonged.

One of the trio of foresters was called into consultation, and he worked long over the oak, succeeded in restoring it to almost its original shape and contour and gave it many more years of life.

ONE OF THE YALE CAMPUS TREES WHICH HAS BEEN PRESERVED BY TREE SURGERY

HEADING A YALE FOREST SCHOOL TREE.

"The Yale trees have been affected by drought, which caused them to become stag headed," Mr. George W. Wakefield, one of the foresters, said the other day. "The campus trees began to die down from the top, and some were afflicted with borers. We put several of our men to work there and succeeded in preserving the original outlines of the trees. By heading them we destroyed the parasites and took away the dead wood, which does a great harm to trees.

"In the case of a large decayed hole, such as we found in the Thorndike oak and in some of the other campus trees it was necessary to put in a cement filling. One of these was exactly four feet deep. First we remove the decayed parts very fully, then clean out the cavity as well as we could, and fill with firm wood and cover the surface of the cavity with a substance which destroys all lingering decay and disinfects the cavity. When this preliminary work is done we begin filling in the hole with cement, making it conform to the outline of the tree, so that when all the cement is in the tree is almost in its original shape except for the bark covering.

A CAVITY FILLED WITH CEMENT

"In two, three or four years, however, the length of time depending on the age of the tree, the cement will be entirely covered by the new bark and the knife marks of the tree surgeon almost disappear, showing only in a thin line down the centre of the cavity opening where the bark has gradually grown toward the centre and finally met.

"The bark covering makes the cement filling perfectly watertight. In the first year after the filling is put in the average tree will lay down enough new wood to cover the edges of the filling. After that each year decreases the size of the visible piece of cement work, and not only is the tree's beauty preserved but the trunk is made strong and secure again.

"The Thornedyke oak at Bowdoin College was so far gone that it was unsafe. The trunk had split far above the top of the cavity and the tree was in danger of splitting through entirely. The cement filling we put in made it solid again. In many of the trees there and at Yale we also did some bolting work, which is a part of scientific forestry. It is a common practice to use bands around limbs that show a tendency to split or break away, but disastrous effects are sure to follow in such cases, as the bands check the limb's growth and eventually cause death.

"The work may appear easy and simple to the layman, but it really calls for exceptional skill and care on the part of the workman or results will be neither effective nor permanent. Each tree presents its own peculiar difficulties, each offers a new problem for solving, and scientific treatment is invariably required to bring it safely back to health, symmetry and durability.

"The average lifetime of a city maple tree, I mean one of those growing on the side of the curb stone, is about twenty-five years. But with careful treatment the tree's life can be prolonged sixty years, or even more. The ordinary life of an elm tree in the city is about sixty years. By being properly attended to before it is too late such an elm can be made to live one hundred and fifty years.

"In a city where the streets are dug up frequently for the laying of pipes, tracks and wires it is to be expected that the trees will be injured and show the effects of this rough treatment. Only by having the work watched and supervised by an expert forester can much of this injury to trees be avoided."

Village improvement societies have been enlisting the services of these tree specialists, and the owners of large estates are turning over the care of their fruit and shade trees to these young men, who promise to restore them where restoration is possible and to cure those that are ill, if there is any power known to their science which will do it. The trees are pruned, trimmed, renovated and cavities are filled wherever necessary. No tree is allowed to die of old age or to become decrepit so long as there is a way to brace it in shape, kill out its hollows and give it a new lease of life.

Fruit trees are studied by these foresters with a view to making them bear as much fruit as they ought to bear by proper pruning, cultivating, fertilizing and the banishing of insects or other pests. In fact, any tree ailment or problem is handled by these practical tree men.

ANECDOTES TO DRIVE AWAY DULL CARE

THE friends of Madame Schumann-Heink, the great, tell of an incident in the friendship of the artist with a Princess of one of the minor courts of Europe. The Princess was extremely fond of Schumann Heink and the two were on the most intimate terms.

On one occasion when the two had breakfasted at the palace together, Schumann Heink was going to the court baby as she sat on the floor with it. Just then the Prince, whom the singer had never met, entered the apartment. The Princess introduced her friend, and Schumann Heink with ready wit said, from the floor:

"Your Highness, I must either disregard court etiquette or drop the court baby."

Whereupon the Prince with a low bow smiled and rejoined:

"Madame, do what you like with etiquette, but regard the baby."

"I ENCOUNTERED a youthful sociologist in the slums," says a mission worker, "in a ragged youngster of ten.

"I had approached this youngster just as he was concluding what must have been a most illuminating discussion with references to the question of wealth vs. poverty. I congratulate myself that I was enabled to get as much of the conversation as I did.

"'What's de reason,' the lad's companion was asking, 'dat de poor is allus willin' to help its fellow-man de rich?'

"Promptly and with great feeling my youthful sociologist responded: —

"'Dem's de only kind givin' is de ones wot stays poor.'"

SENATOR John Sharp Williams tells of an aged negro preacher in Mississippi who was asked what he thought of his two sons, both preachers, too.

"Well, suh," replied the old man, "George has a better show in his shop under dan John, but den John he's got a larger stock in his warehouse."

THE ASCENT

(Short Story)

He lay unconscious on the very margin of the shingle, where the waves crashed down upon him—a forlorn figure flung up on the shores of the land he had come to invade. His clothes were heavy with sea water, and clung about his limbs. There was a deep gash in his forehead, but it did not bleed.

His helmet and his gorget and breastplate were of fine Spanish steel, inlaid with gold. There was no other such suit of armour in all this Irish land. But helmet and armour were of little use to him now.

He lay very still, and visions of sunlit hills and the far country from which he came flitted across his dreams.

And behind him a mass of spars drifting upon the boiling surface of the sea showed where the great galleon had plunged into the depths.

He lay face downward, his arm outstretched, his forehead pressed into the shingle.

He alone had reached the land.

At last his fingers stirred; one convulsive movement, and they were buried deep in the sand.

It was his first sign of life, and for 10 minutes he gave no other.

The waves had receded a little, and no longer plucked at him to drag him back to death; but the thunder was still in his ears. He was too spent to care.

He found it in his heart to wish that he had never awakened. Had he gone down into the green waters he might have been dreaming still. Now it was cold—bitterly cold.

He was wet through, and the wind cut him to the bone. He wondered how long he could endure it and yet lie still.

It was the agony of a thousand years concentrated into a moment to move a muscle. Yet he did it. Slowly inch by inch, he raised himself into a sitting posture and looked about him.

His eye travelled onward and upward to the cliff itself, worn and hard and black, carved into columns and great buttresses like some monster fortification piled by giant hands in the forgotten days of the world. The sea-mists clung about it, hiding the summit. Only now and again the wind tore a funnel through their white curtains, and he had a glimpse of a ragged sky-line and a dazzle of light above it where the clouds had thinned for a moment to allow a pale glint of the sun.

Fear was behind him—fear of the sea, of the waste of hungry waters which had swallowed his companions, and still panted after him. Up there, and only up there, would he find rest and peace.

Trembling, he staggered to his feet. Gradually he became less stiff, though even more weary, and he moved a little more quickly, and came to the base of the cliff itself and fumbled over the rock surface like a blind man, seeking a way to go up.

It was hard—hard to find. But at last he discovered a crevice leading upwards and he followed it, clinging desperately to rock and weed and tufted grass.

He went on and on.

A momentary difficulty in his path brought him to a stop and he clung to a pinnacle of rock, considering it.

Yet at last he found a way out. By struggling continuously to the right he found the path again, and went on and up always up—to the place where light and warmth and safety awaited him.

There was no sun to tell him the hour, but from the wan light in the sky he judged it to be the late afternoon. The day was dying and night was coming on. He must not be left on that cruel face of rock in the darkness.

The very thought of it set his heart thumping within his breast and caused him to top for lack of breath. Then, with a new fear upon him, he set himself once more to his task.

He clutched and sprawled and scrambled on.

Sky, cliff, and sea had suddenly become menacing and unfriendly. Nay, more—there was one watching from beyond the sky who was unfriendly, too; one to whom all those things belonged, who it seemed had suddenly bent himself to the destruction of one of his most insignificant creatures.

The thought awoke a fear beyond all the fears he had yet experienced. Yet with that fear came a fury that was akin to despair and yet banished despair.

And out of the mists strange figures took shape, drifting toward him with still, white faces, whispering in his ear and vanishing.

"Let go!" they whispered. "You are weary, you are hopeless, you are in pain. You will never reach the top. Let go! It will be easy. You will go down, down in a moment. End it all. You will know nothing. Let go!" He fought the fancies, shuddering. And after a little time he went on.

The wind tore the mists apart, and he shouted with hope. For there above him, not 15 feet away, was the summit.

He had come out of despair into life.

The strange white figures were down there in the blinding sea-fog, and he had vanished them. One further effort and he would gain his end.

end. The worst of his task was over. A little grassy pathway led directly to the top.

Then a gleam of sunlight came through the torn clouds, giving him hope and courage.

He did not know that he had shouted, but his cry echoed along the cliff face. He felt all a madman's energy. He set himself to the slope with fury. Up, up he went! And at length, with a cry of wonder and thankfulness, he came out on the summit of the cliff and fell full length upon the grass.

And there, at the very margin, strange, savage-looking men, clad in saffron-coloured garments and skins, with leather belt stuck full of arrows, gathered around him and put their hands about his throat and choked the life out of him.

Because he was a stranger and wore fine armour which they coveted, they strangled him where he lay.

And so he found the peace he sought.—Adrian Selmo in Buffalo Enquirer.

WONDERFUL ROCK GARDEN

Englishman Has a Three-Acre Reproduction of the Matterhorn

The largest rock garden in England is that of Sir Frank Crisp, at Friar Park, Henley. It is a faithful reproduction of the Matterhorn on a scale of about three acres. Seven thousand tons of limestone were brought from Yorkshire to make it.

The snow capped peak is represented by quartz. Below it are thousands upon thousands of Alpine flowers growing in pockets between the rocks and filling every chink in the trails that ascend the mountain. There must be two hundred different species in bloom at once.

At the base of the mountain, says Country Life in America, is a miniature Swiss chalet, where one may sit and enjoy the scene, comparing all the main features with a little bronze model of the Matterhorn, which Sir Frank had made for the entertainment of his guests. A brook courses down the mountain side, and just before it reaches the chalet it forms a pretty cascade and then spreads out at your feet in a miniature lake decorated with pigmy water lilies and richly margined with pinks, primroses, gentians, and other Alpine flowers.

HADDOCK AND TOMATOES

One medium sized dried haddock, one ounce of butter, one onion, three large tomatoes, pepper. Remove all the flesh from the haddock, taking care to remove the bones also. Peel and slice the onion, thinly, and slice the tomatoes. Melt the butter in a saucepan, put in the onion, and fry it a pale brown, then add the sliced tomatoes and cook it slowly for 15 minutes. Now add the fish and pepper to taste. Stir the mixture over the fire for a few minutes, then pile it up in a hot dish, sprinkle over a little chopped parsley, and serve it very hot.

WAS TERRIBLY NERVOUS.

WOULD START AT THE LEAST NOISE.

Wherever there are people who are troubled with deranged nerves they will find that Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will restore the equilibrium of these deranged centres, and bring back the shattered nervous system to a perfect condition.

Miss Emma Read, Laskay, Ont., writes—"I have great pleasure in writing to tell you about the great benefit I have received by using your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. About a year ago I was very badly run down and could hardly do my work. I tried different medicines but none of them did me any good. I was terribly nervous, and would start at the least noise, and even start in my sleep, which made me very weak. I used two boxes of your pills and I am now well and strong again."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25. For sale at all dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CROWDS AT GUELPH.

Winter Fair Is Biggest In History of Institution.

Guelph, Dec. 14.—With the entries larger than ever before, and with increased accommodation, all that was necessary to make the winter fair of 1911 the greatest in its history was for the attendance figures to be larger than that for any previous year and this bids fair to be the result. The attendance figures for Tuesday were 5,547, being an increase of 2,105 over 1910, when there were only 3,442 on the first day of the fair. Yesterday the station platforms were black with people when the trains discharged their passengers, and an enormous crowd thronged the buildings all day long.

In the evening a big public meeting was held in the City Hall, over 1,500 people being in attendance. Hon. J. S. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, who acted as chairman, in a brief address, stated that this year the show was the best ever held in the Dominion, the attendance being greatly in excess of other years.

Hon. Adam Beck followed, dealing with the Hydro-electric power question as regards the supplying of electricity for use on the farms of the province. He gave a heart to heart talk with exhibitors from the rural districts and described the many ways in which it was used in Europe, especially in Genrmany, in many sections of which is was used on every farm and showed how the farmers of Ontario would be benefited by its installation, as it was the intention of the Government to extend main lines through other parts of the province from which municipalities and townships could secure power at a very low rate.

"It will relieve the burden of household work and will lighten work on the farm," declared Mr. Beck. "Cheap electric power will work wonders and benefit the farmer greatly, as he will be able to cook, wash, milk, heat his dwelling and operate his machinery with electricity, and even do his threshing and plowing with it."

Continuing, the speaker stated that he knew a farmer in Germany who farmed 23 acres who did all his plowing and farm work even to milking his cows, by electricity.

President Creelman of the O. A. College, spoke on the benefits received by the counties where graduates of the Ontario Agricultural College were sent as experts. There were not twenty experts at work all over Ontario. There should be more for everywhere they went they were received with open arms by the farmers, who were anxious to receive the "gospel of agriculture," which they carried. Every farmer and farming community was entitled to the services of these graduates.

Among other speakers, who addressed the meeting were Mayor Thorp, H. C. Scholfield, M.P.P., and W. Smith, M.P. for South Ontario.

'Phones Rates In Manitoba.

Winnipeg, Dec. 14.—The Manitoba Government Telephone Commission yesterday announced a new schedule of rates, the essential feature of which are as follows:

The old rates and methods of charging for service will be abandoned.

No more payments of six months in advance. All bills in future will be paid monthly.

Twenty thousand telephones are now in use in the city of Winnipeg, but with the new low monthly rates 10,000 more places should have telephone connections as fast as they can be installed.

Old rates will remain in force for present subscribers up to April 1, 1912. New rates apply to all new subscribers after Jan. 1, 1912. The rate for business telephones will be $4 a month which includes 100 calls free, or 1,200 a year. Additional calls will be charged at the rate of 2 cents each. The rate for residence telephones will be at $1.50 a month, which includes 30 calls, free, or 360 a year. Additional calls, 2 cents each, or $4.00 a month unlimited calling.

Party lines are abolished.

Chicago's Big Terminals.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—Details of a plan that would involve the most comprehensive grouping of railway terminals ever contemplated are being worked out by railroad officials here, following a suggestion of President F. A. Delano of the Wabash System. The plan provides an expenditure of from $150,000,000 to $250,000,000 and includes the abandonment of several terminals now in use.

This outlay would provide for the construction of a transcontinental railway from coast to coast.

State Cable Not Yet.

London, Dec. 14.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Postmaster Samuel, replying to questions in the House of Commons, said that after viewing all the circumstances, the Government had no present intention of embarking on a large capital expenditure involved in the laying of a state cable.

"Is the postmaster aware," asked Major Archer-Shee, "that one Canadian railway's telegraph facilities are not controlled by the American Telegraph & Telephone Co., and is fighting them in fact, and that now is our opportunity to arrange through traffic for the Pacific cable?"

Mr. Samuel replied that the Pacific Cable Board had already leased a wire between Montreal and Vancouver.

Out on $10,000 Bail.

Hamilton, Dec. 14.—After remaining in jail for nearly two weeks, Joseph Acheson and J. D. Chilman, the two young men charged with the theft of $8,000 from the Canadian Express Co. last September, were released from custody yesterday afternoon on bail in the sum of $10,000 each. They appeared in the police court yesterday, and at the request of the crown attorney were remanded for another five days, at the end of which time the police expect to be able to proceed with the charges against them.

No More Live Men.

Briceville, Tenn., Dec. 14.—With the passing of another day without the discovery of any more live men in Cross Mountain mine, hope for the safety of the fifty odd men still unaccounted for reached its lowest ebb. Late yesterday the report spread through the village that three more survivors had been found and practically the whole population flocked to the mine for news, only to be disappointed in finding that it was untrue.

Chicago's Big Terminals.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—Details of a plan that would involve the most comprehensive grouping of railway terminals ever contemplated are being worked out by railroad officials here, following a suggestion of President F. A. Delano of the Wabash System. The plan provides an expenditure of from $150,000,000 to $250,000,000 and includes the abandonment of several terminals now in use.

This outlay would provide for the construction of a transcontinental railway from coast to coast.

State Cable Not Yet.

London, Dec. 14.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Postmaster Samuel, replying to questions in the House of Commons, said that after viewing all the circumstances, the Government had no present intention of embarking on a large capital expenditure involved in the laying of a state cable.

"Is the postmaster aware," asked Major Archer-Shee, "that one Canadian railway's telegraph facilities are not controlled by the American Telegraph & Telephone Co., and is fighting them in fact, and that now is our opportunity to arrange through traffic for the Pacific cable?"

Mr. Samuel replied that the Pacific Cable Board had already leased a wire between Montreal and Vancouver.

Train From Canada Wrecked.

Portland, Me., Dec. 14.—A special train bringing several hundred passengers to sail for Liverpool to-day, was wrecked yesterday at West Parish, Me., on the Grand Trunk Railway. Several passengers were hurt, but no one was killed.

The passengers came from points in the Canadian Northwest and were on their way to spend the holidays with relatives in their native countries. They were taken to West Parish to remain there until the tracks were cleared. They will be among 1,000 passengers to sail from Portland to-day on the Teutonic and Sicilian for Liverpool and Glasgow.

Lieutenant-Governor at Brantford.

Brantford, Dec. 14.—Lieutenant-Governor Gibson formally opened the new children's shelter here yesterday, the gift of Mrs. Peter Wood to the Children's Aid Society. His honor was tendered a luncheon by civic representatives and was escorted to the new shelter by the cadet corps and scouts.

The shelter, which is the residence of the late Rev. Dr. Martin, is said to be the finest in Ontario and congratulating references were made to the work of the society in Brantford. His honor was accompanied by Sheriff Middleton, Hamilton, and J. J. Kelso, Toronto.

Here is a New Kind of COFFEE

And We Give You A Pot To Make It In—Free

Never sold in Bulk

To get to the heart of the coffee question, you must do as we did—get to the heart of the coffee berry. The coffee berry is protected by Nature from the insect world, by a tough inner shell or coat. This shell contains tannin and other bitter substances.

It is this shell, roasted and ground up with ordinary coffee, that causes indigestion, headaches and other ill-effects so common with coffee drinkers.

Yet there is no other beverage in the world so thoroughly wholesome healthful and delicious as good Coffee when properly made.

Never sold in Bulk

Dalton's French Drip Coffee

is this good, wholesome, delicious coffee. It contains no chicory and by our special process of grinding, every particle of the bitter tannin-bearing shell is removed. We take out all the injurious parts. We leave the meat—the heart—the flavor—the aromatic essences that mean so much to coffee-lovers.

The Percolator, or French Drip Process, is the only way to make really good coffee. We have secured sole rights at last for a practical, economical, reliable French Drip Coffee Pot.

We will give it to you free so that you can try Dalton's French Drip Coffee as it should be made. Read our offer. We have put up Dalton's French Drip Coffee in two Blends

This is the Coffee Pot we are giving away with 2 tins of Coffee at 80c. per tin.

—MILD and STRONG. You can't tell which one you will like best until you try both. Dalton's French Drip Coffee is better and costs less than any other if made in Dalton's French Drip Coffee Pot. That is why we make this special offer.

SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER

We have authorized your Grocer to give you one of these handsome pots (worth $1.30) absolutely Free with your first purchase of a tin EACH of Mild and Strong Blend at 50c. per tin. You buy two tins of our Coffee—one of each blend—to give it a fair trial and we give you the means of testing it FREE, satisfied that you will use nothing but Dalton's French Drip Coffee thereafter.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Miss Helen Clay Frick, pretty and heiress to millions, who has been known for her philanthropies since she was a tiny girl, is a culinary expert.

Mrs. William Keith, who recently gave $3,000 to the suffrage campaign fund in California, has devoted about $1,000 a year to the cause for more than ten years.

Miss Elizabeth Kendall, professor of history at Wellesley college, recently returned from a trip through Turkey, China and India. She is said to be the first white woman to make such a trip alone. She made the trip for the purpose of research.

Miss Beatrix Jones is a pioneer among women landscape gardeners in this country. Her most notable work in landscape gardening was the restoration of the George Washington gardens at Mount Vernon.

Mrs. Wordsworth, an English dancing teacher, has taught dancing to royalty in England and other countries since she was fifteen. She now has a class composed entirely of children whose grandparents took lessons of her just before making their debut at Queen Victoria's court.

Sporting Notes.

The polo players of America and Great Britain have joined hands to bring about a uniform code of rules to govern the game.

Eddie Durnan, professional sculling champion of America, who recently defended his title against John L. Hackett of Minnesota, is ready to row William Haines or James Wray, coach of Harvard.

Cornell university has added a course in wrestling for which gymnasium credit will be given. For the benefit of beginners in the mat game a novice meet, from which all intercollegiate athletes will be barred, will take place in December.

The New Orleans Young Men's Gymnastic club will hold monthly boxing and wrestling contests of all weights and classes under the amateur rules until April of 1912. The winners will be sent to the National Amateur Athletic union championships.

Ben Tillett's Career.

Few men have had a more strenuous struggle for existence than Mr. Ben Tillett, general secretary of the Docker's Union, and leading figure in the latest great strike. As a boy he traveled the country with a circus troupe, afterwards being sent to work in a brickyard. At twelve years of age he was one of the crew of a fishing-smack. Then he was apprenticed to a bootmaker, served for some time in the navy, and after being invalided from the service, and making some voyages in merchant vessels, settled down to labor organization. He organized the Dockers' Union, and his interferences with foreign strikes have not been relished by Belgian or German authorities, who imprisoned him and ejected him from their territories.

A Curious Herb.

In New Caledonia there is a herb which has the rare property of revealing one's secrets. It is known as the Datura stramonium and has white flowers and rough berries full of dark grains. They are treated of in the "Annals of Hygiene and Colonial Medicine." A person who has swallowed the tea made of this herb will after falling asleep tell where his money is hidden and will also arise and go direct to where his treasure is concealed. Robbers often use this tea as knockout drops with which to rob their victims.

Private Ships Immune.

At a recent meeting of the council of the London Chamber of Commerce Lord Avebury moved "that, in the opinion of this chamber private property at sea should be declared free of capture and seizure." The motion was carefully discussed and then adopted by a unanimous vote.

THE THEFT CHARGE AGAINST JOHN WEST WAS DISMISSED

Jury at Quarterly Sessions Brought in a Verdict of "Not Guilty" After a Large Amount of Evidence Had Been Heard---Case Took Up Most of Yesterday.

The case of the King vs. West lasted all yesterday afternoon, and the Jury returned after seventy minutes' deliberation, with a verdict of not guilty, and the accused was accordingly liberated at once.

Prisoner's Evidence.

Yesterday afternoon's sessions opened by West giving evidence.

The prisoner stated that he was a Scotchman, and this was his first trouble. He was 62 years of age, and had lived in Lindsay prior to moving to Cobourg. While in Cobourg, he was physical instructor in the Collegiate institute in Cobourg, prior to going to Port Hope, where he occupied a similar position, afterwards coming to Peterborough. He stated that he knew the note was for three months, from October. He stated that he had written for the pedigrees of the animals several times, but did not receive them. He said he intended to show the animals at the Peterborough show, but was unable to on account of the pedigrees not coming, and therefore the animals were useless to him, except to sell as working horses and for cattle. One of the horses had a puffed hock, or curb hock, and the other had a stolypin joint. He said he did not know he was doing anything unlawful when he sold the animals, and had no intention of doing any illegal action. He said he was not aware that either of the notes were conditional sale notes, and at the time he made an offer to Mr. Watt advising him that if he did not wish to accept it, he could take whatever proceedings he wished, but did not make the statement that he would not pay the money at all. He explained that he had property in Australia, and when he purchased the animals he hoped to get some money from there, but, as the money did not come, he was unable to make a payment. He said that he consented to a judgment of $400 some time ago, because he considered that Watt was at considerable loss, as was he, himself. As regards his trouble in Lindsay, he said it was simply a he[illegible] of the medical laws, and after he explained it, Mr. Wood, Crown Attorney, who was then questioning, said it was unimportant, and passed on. He was then asked as regards his boarding with Mr. and Mrs. Millan, in the city. He stated that he had heard that it was said he was staying there free, and the City Relief Officer had refused to help the family until he left, but he said that he was paying his board and assisting the family all the time.

This was all the evidence offered in the case.

Mr. Kerr then addressed the Jury. He defined "old fools" and "young fools," and pointed out the folly of the plaintiff in sending the animals to West, whom the Bank reported not being even able to locate the man. But he was getting a fancy figure and he was going to take a fancy chance. He pointed out the carelessness of the plaintiff in not filing all letters received from the prisoner, and also the extremely careless manner in which the whole transaction was carried on. He said that West sent Watt a note, for which he could get no endorser, and Watt, not wishing to accept this, sent another note, upon which was the plain condition in large type, and some other conditions in very small type, as a snare. Even this had been quite plain. Where does he commit theft? Where does he steal? Mr. Kerr further pointed out that no matter what the monetary loss the plaintiff suffers, that is no theft. He said that practically the whole case hinged on the question, "Did West know that he was [illegible] and could not legally dispose of [illegible] without first redeeming it." Mr. Kerr pointed out that if they [illegible] a verdict of not guilty, it did not mean that he was [illegible] owing to the peculiar circumstances of the case, it could be [illegible] in the civil courts.

Mr. R. E. Wood, Crown Attorney, then addressed the jury at some length, [illegible] behalf of the [illegible]

GRAND JURY RECOMMENDS NUMBER OF IMPROVEMENTS

Presentment Made to His Honour Judge Huycke Suggests Alterations to the Court Room

TO MAKE IT LESS NOISY

The Grand Jury made the following presentment to His Honour Judge Huycke at the Quarterly Sessions yesterday.

To His Honour Judge Huycke—

The Grand Jury of the County Court and General Sessions of the Peace for the County, beg leave to present—

That we congratulate you and your Honour in congratulating this county on its prosperous condition, and it is but an additional evidence of the general prosperity of the Dominion of Canada.

Occupying the exalted position of Judge of our Province, you are largely responsible for the impartiality and integrity of our courts.

We are proud of the Imperial representative, the Duke of Connaught, a member of the Royal family. His appointment being a recognition of the importance of our Dominion and adding dignity thereto.

Comparatively speaking, our duties [illegible] and it is very gratifying to note so little serious crime in our midst at the present time.

In accordance with our duties, we visited the following institutions, namely:

The gaol, St. Joseph's and Nicholls Hospitals, the Protestant Home, the Children's Aid, the Orphanage, and the House of Providence. Concerning our visit to the gaol, we can repeat what other Grand Juries have reported. That is, everything is clean and [illegible]-factory in so far as comfort, is concerned and attention of the different officials.

We look forward to a provision being made by the city for their old poor other than the gaol.

The hospitals appear to us as being conducted in a manner consistent with the object of providing such institutions.

We cannot speak too highly of the good work carried on in the Children's Aid and Orphanage, and would [illegible] speak a liberal support from the citizens in the future for these homes of protection. We also visited the House of Providence and the Protestant Home and are pleased to report most favourably on both and congratulate these institutions on having a more appropriate and suitable building near completion to take the place of the present Protestant Home that has served its day of usefulness.

We would [illegible] that the

HORTON IS NOT GUILTY

After Considerable Evidence Jury Failed to Convict Lakefield Cheese Maker

TO-DAY'S PROCEEDINGS

When the case was resumed at this morning's session of the county court, Mr. Johnston, sec.-treasurer of the Lakefield Dairy Co., was examined by Crown Attorney R. E. Wood.

"Did you ascertain how this shortage was caused?" ased the Crown.

"Yes; he gave in the wrong returns."

The witness was then examined by Mr. G. N. Gordon, the defence lawyer. The witness stated that Horton often took money from the patrons, on account, and transacted business for the company along those lines. He denied having any knowledge of mistakes taking place last year. He denied that Horton worked 12 days repairing pipes in the factory. He admitted that Horton had put in the summer ice and cut wood, etc. He said that the last wages paid Horton was on the 20th of Sept. The money was received from Spragg, Belleville, on the 28th of Sept., but witness did not hear of it being received until October. He denied drawing up a cheque for Horton to pay a grocer's bill about that time. Last year Horton was hired for making cheese at 9c. per cwt., while this year he was hired to make butter at so much per lb. Witness stated that Horton made a transaction about twice per week, and the transaction with Spragg was not a surprise to him, but this charge was laid because no returns had been made. Witness admitted that he laid the charge because he knew Horton had no money, and was unable to make the return now. He admitted that he was of the opinion that when the charge was laid that the prisoner would hand over the money if he had

BLACKLISTERS ON THE CARPET THIS MORNING

Man Charged With Supplying Liquor to Them Was Assessed $25 by Police Magistrate Dumble

CASE OF FURIOUS DRIVING

A blacklister pleaded guilty in this morning's police court to having been found under the influence of liquor at his home yesterday. With him were two other men, one of whom was charged with having supplied the liquor and the other, a blacklister also, with being under the influence of liquor. The memory of the man who pleaded guilty utterly failed him when he was put into the witness box. He had no recollection of where he procured the liquor, though he admitted having had a little supply in the house. Some very damaging evidence was produced in the shape of four empty liquor bottles, an empty tumbler, a corkscrew and a seal belonging to one of the liquor bottles.

He presented a very dilipidated appearance in giving his evidence, and stated that he had been discharged from the hospital on Saturday morning, and in the afternoon he purchased a quart bottle of gin. He was not put on the black list until Tuesday. He was under the impression that it was the remains of this bottle of gin which led to his arrest last night.

The other blacklister, when put in the witness box, admitted having had a few drinks with the former witness at his home last night. He had been on the Indian list since Sept. 2nd, and when arrested last night was decidedly under the influence of the cup that cheers. He has a wife and several small children, and the former is in a very serious condition. The chief was in receipt of a letter from his wife asking that leniency be shown.

The third member of the party, who was charged with unlawfully supplying liquor to the other two, pleaded guilty. He procured the liquor at a local hotel, he said, but he pleaded ignorance of the knowledge that the two men were on the Indian list. He made some damaging admissions to the police when they arrested the trio last night, which were largely instrumental in securing his conviction.

His Worship imposed a fine of $25 to be paid forthwith, in default of payment 30 days in gaol at hard labour.

Italian Farm Hand Goes Suddenly Insane and Wipes Out a Whole Family

MURDERER ESCAPES

Special to The Examiner.

TROY, N.Y., DEC. 14.—Arthur Morner, a prosperous young farmer at Defrestville, six miles from Albany, with his mother and two sisters, were all murdered some time since Monday by an Italian farm hand who was known as Ed. Dennis. The alarm was raised last night by neighbours who had not seen any signs of life about the place for some time. The relatives searched and found the terribly mutilated remains of the women in a cow barn and manure pile, while Arthur's body was found in another outhouse. The motive of the murder is unknown as the money was still in the house. The farm hand was quite an industrious sort of a chap, and it is thought he must have gone suddenly insane. Armed parties are now scouring the country for the murderer, but no trace of him has been found. The whole neighbourhood is in terror.

A FARMER SHOP-LIFTER

Special to The Examiner.

Toronto, Dec. 14. — Lyman B. Dillman, a middle aged farmer from the neighbourhood of Lindsay, was helping himself liberally in the jewellery department of the Robert Simpson store, when he was arrested by Detective Tipton and charged with shop lifting. He had seven pairs of gold cuff links, 12 belts, 3 brooches, and a tie pin. Dillman goes to gaol for 60 days.

SIR CHARLES ILL.

Sir Charles Tupper is ill in England, at the advanced age of 90 years. Canada has a special interest in the staunch old veteran, whose tenacity of life has added many supernumerary years to a distinguished service, in the interests of his native land. About ten years after he should have been dead, according to the Psalmists's age limit, Sir Charles, was leader of his party, and led the Conservative hostilities, with astonishing vigour, in the general election of 1900. Sir Charles was then 79 years of age. Sir Charles is suffering from a sharp attack of bronchitis, and his advanced age makes his medical advisers consider his condition critical. It is to be hoped that he will yet fool the faculty, and be spared to finish out the century.

THE BOLD SIR JAMES.

Sir James Whitney, with all his "honest" "boldness," was not above adding a little transparent political trickery to his already strong position in regard to the elections.. He not only displayed negative cowardice by withholding Dr. Merchant's report on bilingual schools, but he took a deceptive position in the matter of a Hudson Bay Post for Ontario. He led the electors to believe that the action of the Laurier Government, in giving extension of territory to Manitoba, had deprived Ontario of a port on Hudson Bay. Sir Wilfrid made, and Parliament endorsed, a proposal to Manitoba, which was not accepted, and the matter was left in the hands of the Conservative Government, which Sir James helped put in power. They had the settlement of the matter in their own hands, and if, as announced, they have decided upon a division of territory that cuts Ontario out of a Hudson Bay port, they are to blame. And they, no doubt, were to blame, for, at the very time Sir James, to make political capital for himself, was denouncing the leader of the Liberal party for his injustice to Ontario, the Conservative Government at Ottawa, had come to a decision to "hand out the lemon" to Ontario, and only delayed the announcement till two days after the election, so that Sir James Whitney's use of a bogus appeal would not be robbed of its effect—assuming, as is the true partizan way that the party interests of Sir James Whitney were more important than giving justice, in the form of a port on Hudson Bay to the Province of Ontario.

BEATEN, BUT NOT SUBDUED.

The small wits, journalistic and lay, the unthinking and unreflective elements of the Conservative party, are chortling with great glee, over which they consider the reverses and despondent condition of the Liberal party. They gloat with rather premature glee over its reverses, and profess to regard it as a moribund ingredient in our political life. Without resorting to the tu quoque argument as a satisfactory rejoinder, it may be pointed out that the Liberal party, prostrate as it is pictured by its enemies, is an infinitely more important factor in our national life than the Conservative party, triumphant for the moment, and raised to that bad eminence by the operation and co-operation of opposing, and even antagonistic froces, whose only common bond of affiliation is the spoils of office and the shadow of power. The Liberal party of to-day—in its comparatively and apparently low estate, is far greater, occupies a far prouder position in the eyes of patriotic citizens, than the triumphant Conservative party of the hour.

The Liberal party, humble as its position is to-day, owns itself, it is its own master; it owns no man master, recognizes no over-lord, but the will of the people. The Liberal party to-day pleads guilty to no truckling to faction and passion, and prejudice, to gain and hold power. It is not the bound slave as is the Conservative party of a Nationalist faction. The Liberal party in Canada is not degraded to be the tail of a Nationalist kite. It is not the betrayer of a great trust, it does not outrage the will of the people.

The people gave Mr. Borden, as head of the Conservative party, a great majority—seventy in Ontario—in order that he might govern Canada according to the will of the people. And what do we see? Mr. Borden is the titular Premier of Canada. But Mr. Bourassa, a man not in parliament, not invested with a tittle of power by the people, is the real master of the Conservative party, the real ruler of Canada. Borden reigns, but Bourassa rules. Ontario piled up a big majority for Mr. Borden on grounds diametrically antagonistic to the vicious tenets and ideals of Nationalism. Mr. Borden was sent, with a mighty warrant from Ontario, to push Sir Wilfrid Laurier from his seat and rob him of this power to pander to forces antagonistic to British and Imperial ideals. Mr. Borden was sent to Ottawa to upholster the Premier's chair with the British colours. We all know with what result; we know what and whom he took to his political heart—it wasn't the "British born." It wasn't the flag wavers—it was the declared enemies of everything British and Imperial. Mr. Borden does not represent the people of Canada, especially of Ontario. He has not given them what they voted for, but has yielded to, placed uppermost, precisely what they voted against.

The Liberal party occupies the position it is in by the will of the people, and bows to the will of the people. The Conservative party occupies a position contrary to the will of the eople, contrary to what the people voted for.

On the narrow grounds of party, the unthinking Conservative may gloat over the position of the Liberal party; but the Liberal party is not dead; because the principles it stands for cannot die. Reverse may come, but the face of Liberalism is, as always, set forward. The proud position the British ideal occupies in the world to-day, is due to the operation of Liberal forces; through the centuries Liberalism has fought and won the battle of popular enfranchisement. We owe all of the freedom and high political privileges we possess to Liberalism. In the struggle to the goal, victory and reverse have alternated; and the present reverse of the Liberal party in Canada is only temporary, as will be the reign of Conservative opportunism. The Liberal party would rather eat dust for a day than revel in power enjoyed as a breach of trust, and by the sacrifice of the ideals of the people that placed it in power. The Liberal party is beaten, but not subdued.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Victoria Colonist, a Conservative paper, makes the statement for the benefit of Premier Whitney and the people of Ontario, that local option in taxation exists in British Columbia now "and is acted upon in many municipalities entirely to the satisfaction of everyone". This would be valuable evidence were it not for the fact that Premier Whitney, having made up his mind and stamped his foot, does not need any evidence.

Mr. Armand Lavergne, the chief speaker at the Pelletier banquet, next to the guest of honour, accused Sir Wilfrid Laurier of importing 600,000 immigrants, "in order to drown the French-Canadian element". Four cabinet ministers — Messrs. Pelletier, Nantel, Hughes, and Burrell — heard the sentiment, applauded and sanctioned it by their presence. This is the sort of stuff in which the coalition Government is trading in Quebec.

THE SPOILS SYSTEM.

(Toronto Star.)

By its eager adoption of the spoils system, and especially by its dismissal of Sir George Gibbons and the other members of the Waterways Commission, the Borden Government abandons all pretence of being a broad-minded national Administration. It was helped into office by many thousands of Liberal votes, and it now practically says that it has no further use for Liberal supporters. It is well that this should be clearly understood.

Mr. Foster's plea that the commissioners ought to be politically in accord with the Government will not bear examination. Upon the same ground, the whole diplomatic service of the British Empire ought to be changed with every change of Government. What is the difference in policy between the Government and Sir George Gibbons?

A SENSIBLE PROTEST.

(Montreal Herald.)

It is a pleasure to note that Le Devoir has no patience with the decision of its party allies to keep Hon. George Graham out of the House if they can manage to do so. Le Devoir holds, as the smaller matter, that it is bad and petty tactics to try to keep him out, or to make him fight for a seemingly safe seat, when all the new ministers were returned unopposed. On broader grounds, Le Devoir holds Mr. Graham to be the kind of a man who ought to be in the House, no matter who else is or is not there. It is too much to hope that the men in power will pay enough heed to such a warning to make them alter their attitude. Men who think themselves powerful are prone to get the idea that they have only to speak to be obeyed. It is something, however, to see that at least one of the newspaper supporters of the coalition is not so abjectly devoted to its fortunes as to want Mr. Cochrane, Mr. Hughes, Mr. Reid, and other narrow gauge statesmen to be the only accredited spokesmen of Ontario in Parliament. Quite probably enough their objection to Mr. Graham's coming back is not lessened any by the numerous indications, which they cannot fail to see, that in the Province of Quebec the people of all parties take very kindly to the idea of Mr. Graham being designated for eventual succession to the Liberal leadership.

Mr. Borden's Surrender To The Spoils Element Of His Party

The Prime Minister of Canada, Hon. R. L. Borden, expressed admiration for the American civil service system, ina carefully-worded speech in New York the other night. In the light of his own and his Government's record on civil service matters in Canada that admiration is significant. If Mr. Borden approves the old-time American theory that "to the victors belong the spoils" he falsifies every principle of political decency sanctioned by British precedent. If, on the other hand, his commendation is for the spasmodic but not altogether futile efforts of American Presidents in the direction of civil service reform his own actions as head of the Government of Canada belie his words.

The American civil service situation was scandalous, and both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft, following up the efforts of President Cleveland, did good service in the way of reform. In Canada the degradation of the civil service never was quite so widespread as in the United States, although under the eighteen years of Tory rule it was bad enough. When the Liberals took office in 1896 The Globe protested against the adoption of the Tory spoils system. Real progress was made. The rights of public servants were respected. The dignity of Canada before the nations was uncompromised. In due time the civil service act was made law, and, under the administrative leadership of Professor Adam Shortt, marked advance was made in deliverng both civil servants and the politicians themselves from the curse of patronage and the vices of the spoilsmen.

Not everything desired was attained under the Liberal Government, but a genuine and encouraging start was made. Now comes a Conservative Government, and with it comes back all the evils that afflicted Ottawa before 1896. With a cold-bloodedness unequalled elsewhere in life, four or five of the new Ministers have set themselves to dismiss capable and trusted public servants without even allowing them the pretence of defending themselves, and for no other reason than to appease the hungry office-seekers whose selfish demands shocked even a veteran Tory like Mr. E. B. Osler. Men and women chosen because of fitness for the work to which they had been assigned, and who were never active in politics either before or after their apointment, have been dismissed without consideration and without reasonable excuse. Even men of unexceptional standing, whose services justified their selection, have been dismissed from positions on international commissions. The humiliation of Canada in the eyes of the public men in Britain and the United States involved n the dismissal from the International Waterways Commission of Sir George Gibbons is only aggravated by the impertinent excuses offered by Hon. George E. Foster.

And why all this? Either Premier Borden has accepted for his Government the discredited spoils system of which the Americans are trying to rid themselves, or, while approving the British system of non-partisan service, he has neither the strength of character nor the decision of purpose to be master in his own Cabinet. In either case he is making for his own undoing.

As leader of the Opposition Mr. Borden never revealed strength or mastership. His disposition and natural desires made him prefer the decent to the indecent in politics and in Parliamentary practice, but his followers were always able to crowd him into a temper which ill became either him or his position. In the notorious manifestations of hoodlumism which disgraced Parliament several years ago, in which Mr. Foster, Mr Bennett, and Mr. Fowler were ringleaders, Mr. Borden, instead of taking command, left his place in the House and allowed the disreputable members to have their way. So, too, in the anti-reciprocity campaign; he knew better, but the reckless adventurers of his party, pressed on from behind by Hon. Clifford Sifton and the "Big Interests," forced his hand.

And it would seem that in office Mr. Borden has no greater strength than he had out of office. It is still the self-seeking, the persistent, the pushful who compel his decisions. He talks amiably and with appreciation of civil service reform, but he does or allows to be done things which the brute-force philosophy of the spoilsmen alone will justify. And with men in his Cabinet of the type and known record of Hon. "Bob" Rogers, and his Ontario superior as a self-seeking and callous patronage manipulator, Hon. Frank Cochrane, and Hon. J. D. Reid, who only needs the larger opportunity, and the "lean and hungry Cassius," Hon. George E. Foster, who never gave loyalty to any chief if disloyalty seemed safe—with such men about him and of his own choosing, the undoing of Premier Borden is only a matter of time.—Globe.

QUEBEC LIBERALS AND ULTRAMONTANISM

MONTREAL, DEC. 12.—The interference of a considerable portion of the Roman Catholic hierarchy of Quebec in politics, their persistent, though covert antagonism to the Liberal party both in the Federal and Provincial arenas, and their palpable alliance with the Nationalist-Conservative leaders in the Province have cost the Canadian Roman Catholics the honour of having a Canadian Cardinal, to say nothing of the concomitant evils which have followed the unwise and uncalled for political activities of the anti-Laurier and anti-Liberal section of the Church.

The alliance of Mr. Bourassa and his fellow-Nationalists with the Ultramontanes has long been an open secret in Quebec. From this alliance Mr. Borden has profited and Sir Wilfrid Laurier has suffered. The temporary political results were seen in the last election. The effects on the Church itself are not so generally known. Some inside history on this point which comes to your correspondent from an authoritative and absolutely reliable source is illuminating.

When the list of new Cardinals was announced at Rome some days ago considerable surprise was manifested in Quebec that no Canadian prelate had been honoured. It was expected that the display of Roman Catholic strength in the country, made at the Eucharistic Congress at Montreal last summer, and the solidarity, authority, and orthodoxy of the Church in Canada, would be recognized by the appointment of a Canadian Cardinal. His Grace Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal, was probably the most disappointed of all, for, according to well-defined rumour, he has for some years been anticipating appointment to the College of Cardinals.

The reason for the passing over of his claims, as well as those of other Canadian possibilities, may now be told. Some months ago the activities of the anti-Laurier, anti-Liberal, and pro-Bourassa Ultramontanes in the Church became so pronounced and unfair as to compel action by the Liberal leaders in self-defence. Repeated protests and sincere advice given to the partisan section of the hierarchy pointing out the unwisdom both on national and religious grounds of the course being pursued had been without avail, and finally recourse was had to Rome as the last resort. A petition signed by all the Catholic Federal Ministers and their followers in Parliament, by the Quebec Premier and his Ministry, and by many of the leading Liberals of the Province, all of whom were faithful adherents of the Church, was sent to Rome protesting against this undue interference of the Ultramontanes in Canadian politics, giving warning that this course, if pursued, would lead to disastrous results, and urging that the supreme ecclesiastical authority be exerted to restore normal conditions.

Cardinal Merry del Val, the Papal Secretary, who was intimately acquainted through his former residence here with Canadian Church and States problems was made fully acquainted with the facts. His clear judgment was against a continuance of the policy embarked upon by the section of the Church, which had closely allied itself with the unfair attacks upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier Gouin, and Liberalism generally. But the interference of the Tory-Nationalist plotters in the Church continued right up to September 21 last, and one of Premier Borden's greatest embarrassments now is how to temporize with the demands of his Ultramontane allies, and at the same time not antagonize his Protestant majority.

The whole situation is clearly known in Rome, and the non-inclusion of a Canadian prelate in the list of new Cardinals is undoubtedly the direct result of the attitude assumed by Archbishop Bruchesi and his political allies in Quebec.

who made the arrests, also gave evidence relative to the apprehension of the prisoners. Detective Newhall stated that when the officers entered the house they found one of the blacklisters at the top of the stairs in a drunken condition and the other in the room in a similar state. Ten empty beer bottles were strewn about the floor, also several whisky bottles.

This closed the case. His Worship then imposed sentence.

Edward Parks pleaded guilty to having been found drunk in a public place. He was fined $2, to be paid forthwith. He paid the fine.

Isaac McNiveran, of Otonabee, was charged with having while under the influence of liquor, driven a horse and rig at a furious pace within the corporation. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was assessed $5, to be paid forthwith, in default of payment 10 days in gaol. He paid the fine. P. C. Brown arrested the prisoner at the Munro House.

Wm. Anthony was remanded, and George Mien fined $10 and costs. He paid the fine.

of the case, after which Judge Huycke then addressed the jury. He showed clearly the difference between a civil and criminal action, and showed them their duty in the case, warning them against any action, merely for the sake of sympathy, nor to be in any way influenced on the other hand, by the loss sustained by [illegible] Now could there be influenced by the carelessness of Watt. He said that their only duty was to ascertain whether West did steal the articles from Watt. After making some other remarks, instructing the jury as to their duty, he left the [illegible]

The Jury then retired to consider the evidence, at 4.55, and returned at 5.37 with a verdict of not guilty. The prisoner was then discharged from custody.

GRAND JURY RECOMMEND IMPROVEMENTS

chairman of the County Property committee of the County Council bring before his colleagues the necessity of matting for the aisles of the court, thereby doing away with the noise that now interrupts the court as the people pour in and out during the session.

We would also recommend that the Judge's room be repainted and papered and provided with proper lavatory, etc., as also should the Judge's chambers.

The above we recommend, believing the same to be absolutely necessary and on a par with similar provisions in other counties.

Signed on behalf of the Grand Jury.

W. J. BUCK, Foreman.

Peterborough, Dec. 13, 1911.

Judge Huycke then thanked the Jury for their prompt attention to their duties and the efficient report, and after a few other remarks, discharged them from further service, wishing them all a merry Christmas.

HORTON IS NOT GUILTY

ct, and would save the company a costly law suit. He admitted that he not paid Horton for his work in repairing the building, and also that he had had trouble with the man he had before Horton, when a bill for repair work was presented. In this case, however, he claimed that Horton had not put in any claim for wages for the repairs he had made. The witness stated that Horton had used the company's engine and boiler to run a saw to cut his wood, and he red three pigs on whey, and he thought that all this was equal to the extra repair work that Horton had done.

MR. PATRICK'S EVIDENCE

Geo. William Patrick was the next witness called. He had charge of the patrons' accounts and was familiar with all the returns made. He had the shipments all totalled up but no individual ones. He stated that the transaction with Spragg of Belleville, first came under his observation in October when he learned of the 400 lb. shipment. He admitted that he had learned from Horton that there had been another shipment of 500 lbs. in September. In looking over the book, however, he and Mr. Johnston noticed two 400 lb. shipments and came to the conclusion that they were both the same shipment.

ASKED FOR DISMISSAL

Mr. G. N. Gordon then asked that the prisoner be dismissed on the ground that it was evident that the prisoner did not intend to steal. He held that it was a civil matter and not a criminal one. He stated that the president, even, had made mistakes and showed that the books of the business were kept in such a manner as to make it impossible to ascertain how much the company owes the prisoner or how much he owes them.

Judge Huycke then asked that the prisoner be put in the box, which was accordingly done. The prisoner stated that he was being paid so much per lb. for making the butter. He said that he charged 25 cents per hour for the time he worked at filling the pipes, as it was a hard job and required expert knowledge. He also constructed tables, but did not charge so much for that. About $1.50 per day. He also repaired a waggon. He also claimed that he sold about 20 cords of wood to the company, at $2.50 per cord. He stated that he calculated that there would be $115 coming to him for making butter during September, October and November alone, without any other work at all. He said that Mr. Johnston refused to pay him for the butter he had made during those months, but asked him to hand over the $115. He stated that in his opinion if all accounts were settled and the business straightened out, he thought the company would owe him about $100. He said that this wasthe only money he ever got that he did not turn in to the company, and he would have turned this in, only he was afraid the company, when closing up at the end of the season, would fix up a bill against him, and he would be done out of his money.

Mr. Gordon, defence lawyer, then addressed the jury, setting forth and summing up the defence evidence briefly, after which Mr. Wood, Crown attorney, offered the prosecuting evidence for the Crown.

After a few remarks from the Judge, reminding them of this duty and adding the usual precautions, the jury retired at 12.25 and brought in a verdict of not guilty at 12.40.

The prisoner was then discharged.

The jury empannelled for this case was then dismissed.

At the conclusion of the (King vs. West case in the County Court yesterday afternoon, the case of the King vs. Gilbert Horton came up. It will be remembered that some time ago Gilbert Horton was arrested on a charge of stealing $115 and a quantity of butter from the Lakefield Dairy Co. He was arraigned in the Police Court and did not plead not guilty, but sufficient evidence was taken to send the accused up for trial.

The charge was read to the prisoner and he pleaded not guilty. He was represented by Mr. G. N. Gordon.

The following jury was empanelled: John Hope, George Leisure, Alex. Gillespie, W. H. Pearson, A. J. Morrison, Geo. O. Heyward, Jas. Montgomery, George E. Hensley, Charles W. Garbutt, Wm. E. Packenham, R. Mullegan, W. B. Hutchinson.

Crown Attorney R. E. Wood explained to the Jury how the Criminal code had been amended in 1902, changing embezzlment to theft. Mr. Wood explained the case, as follows:

"In the spring of 1911, Horton was engaged as cheesemaker with the Lakefield Dairy Co., and although he was not authorized to sell any cheese, he did so, and nothing was said, so long as the money was turned in to the Company. In September Horton shipped 500 lbs. of butter to Mr. Spragg, at Belleville, at 25 cents per lb. Spragg said the butter was not up to the standard, and it was arranged that he pay 23 cents, amounting to $115. Horton got the money and did not turn it in, and refused to do so, denying having received it, and the Company took this action, as a result.

Mr. Mark Spragg was then called. He testified to having had a conference with Horton in Belleville, and having contracted for the purchase of 500 lbs. of butter at 23 cents per lb. He stated that he paid Horton, by cheque, for the butter.

Mr. George E. Johnston, Secretary-Treasurer and Manager of the Lakefield Dairy Co., was put in the box. He stated that the accused got so much per cwt., for making butter. He stated that when Horton presented his monthly report, he thought there must be something wrong. He did not deny sending the butter to Mr. Spragg, but denied getting any money for it. He stated that when he examined the express book, at the station, he found another shipment of 400 lbs. billed to Mr. Spragg. This was on Horton's return be s, but there was no shipment of 500 lbs. mentioned.

The court then adjourned until to-day.

A verdict of "not guilty" was brought in by the jury in the theft charge of the King versus Gilbert Horton at the Quarterly Sessions this morning.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

RICHARD HALL & SON. LIMITED

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

According to the point of view which characterizes fiction, poetry, religion, "the melancholy days, the saddest of the year," have just passed, and the season of rejoicing, holidays and happiness, Peace on Earth, Good will towards men, is at hand.

I wonder if the shop girls would agree with that point of view.

I wonder what the expressman thinks of it.

And the postman.

I wonder what the truck horses that haul the express wagons would say, if they could think and speak.

I am afraid that some of these burden bearers of the holiday season would be more likely to transplant the description of November to December.

I should think all of them would, and yet I know from past experience that many of them have so much of the true holiday spirit, that despite the extra burden the season means, they seem to enjoy it.

Surely the least we can do for all these overtaxed creatures, is to make the inevitable burden as light as possible.

How?

Well, here are a few suggesttions:—

In the first place, permit me to repeat the old truism—you should get your shopping done as early in the season as possible. You should have had most of it done in November, but if you haven't done that at least you can "do it now" and not leave anything to be done between the twentieth and the tweny-fifth. Even if you plan to leave nothing for the last minute, there will surely be some unexpected errands, so don't add any deliberate ones to them.

Do your shopping as early in the day as possible.

Decide as accurately as you can, just what you want before you start to hunt for it. Dont' try to make thealready overburdened shop girl do your thinking and find out what you want for you.

Carry small bundles instead of having them sent. Last year in the Christmas week, I saw a woman order a little piece of ribbon sent out. She had an ample handbag, and I heard her say afterwards, "I suppose I could have carried that as well as not, but if they will send things one might as well let them." Surely that woman must have known that the expressmen work until nine and ten o'clock every night for weeks before the holidays.

Put on your packages, "Not to be opened until Christmas," and start them a week or two early whether they go by express or mail. You don't think it's nice to have things coming so much ahead of time? You'd rather have them get there just on Christmas or a day or two before? Suppose, my dear madame, that you were the postman's or the expressman's wife and wanted a little of your husband left on Christmas day to enjoy it with you—how would you feel about it then?

Remember, we are supposed to be doing all this to celebrate the birthday of Him whose teachings are focused in the great rule, "As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them."

Do you think we shall be celebrating that birthday rightly if we consistently ignore and forget that rule in our preparations?

TORONTO AD'S CLUB HOLDS FIRST LUNCHEON

(Toronto Star)

Over eighty members of the above club were present at the first weekly luncheon held in the new clubrooms yesterday, when Frank H. Rowe of the Russell Motor Car Company spoke on "The Considerations That Govern the House Policy in Regard to Advertising."

In general considerations of such a policy the speaker pointed to the necessity of determining the exact character of the goods to be sold. Care must be taken to realize whether they are to appeal to the classes or the masses—to men or to women—whether they will be all-year-round sellers, or merely seasonable goods.

He impressed upon his audience the necessity of giving sufficient time in the preparation of a campaign, and pointed out how many campaigners had fallen down through the lack of sufficient preliminary work.

He thought that, as a rule, an advertiser at the commencement should spend more money to make a good impression than he need do once his product was firmly established, but even standardized products found it necessary to keep everlastingly before the public to maintain their sales.

As regards selling goods by mail, a frank statement, the giving of a guarantee and bank references, and the offer to take back unsatisfactory goods were indispensable in a successful campaign.

The character, as well as the size of the circulation of any medium should be studied, keeping in view the character of the product to be advertised.

In automobile advertising Mr. Rowe thought the weeklies and monthlies were especially useful in giving prestige, while the dailies stirred things up and actually promoted sales.

The morning paper, in his opinion, was best for articles of men's consumption, the evening paper for those goods appealing to women.

Out-of-door advertising was an important feature in the advertising of goods of daily consumption—the public was fickle and soon forgot.

Travelers should be kept in the closest touch with a firm's advertising department, and advertising agencies should supplement the advertising manager and not attempt to supplant him.

Mr. Rowe eulogized the work of the genuine advertising solicitor and up-to-date advertising agencies.

W. G. Rook of the Dallas Convention Committee reported that a five days' tour had been successful in organizing ad. clubs in Peterborough, Berlin, Guelph, Galt and Brantford, and more meetings would be arranged in the immediate future.

The Quickest Cough Cure-Cheap, But Unequaled

Sixteen Ounces of It for 50c. Saves You $2. Does the Work Quickly or Money Refunded.

For quick, positive results the 16 ounces of cough syrup that you make with a 50-cent bottle of Pinex, cannot be equaled. It takes hold instantly and will usually stop the most obstinate deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. Even croup and whooping cough yield to it quickly.

The user of Pinex mixes it with home-made sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of better cough remedy than you could buy ready mixed for $2.50. Easily prepared in five minutes—full directions in package.

Pinex soothes and heals the inflamed membranes with remarkable rapidity. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative and tastes good—children like it. Excellent for hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, and has a wonderful record in cases of incipient lung trouble.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-oz. bottle, and it is ready for use. Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

HONOUR PAID TO VETERAN MEMBER OF THE MURRAY STREET BAPTIST CHURCH

Mr. B. R. Matthews is Presented With an Address on the Occasion of His Eighty-second Birthday

OLDEST CHURCH MEMBER

An interesting ceremony took place last night at the Murray Street Baptist Church. At the close of the prayer meeting, Mr. B. R. Matthews, the veteran in years and church affiliation, was presented with an address, in recognition of his having reached his eighty-second birthday, which fell on that date. Mr. Matthews is well deserving of the touching and appropriate recognition of his high standing, not only on the membership roll of the Baptist church, but on the roll of respected and worthy citizenship. If, as is the case of Mr. Matthews, all church membership were based on as high ideals of duty, translated into as effective practice in quiet, unostentatious piety, profession ennobled by practice—showing forth the praise of his Divine Master, not only with his lips, but in his life—church membership would be a beacon—a living sermon—a city set on a hill. If, as in the case of Mr. Matthews, all citizenship should, as it should be, be based on the true Corner Stone, society would be revolutionized; judges, courts, and all the punitive machinery of justice would rust in functionless idleness, and the boast "Civis Canadensis sum" would be in a far more exalted sense, than now, an infinitely higher vaunt than "I am a Roman citizen," invoked, in his hour of peril, by the Apostle of the Gentiles. The congregation and officials of the Murray Street Baptist Church did a noble and graceful thing in recognizing Mr. Matthews' birthday, and in so doing they honoured him less than they honoured themselves.

The address was read by Mr. Wm. Aldridge, senior deacon of the church, and was supplemented by a few coincident remarks by Mr. E. Elcome, an ex-deacon. The address is as follows:

Mr. B. R. Matthews,

Dear Brother,—The officers, your fellow-officers of Murray Street Baptist Church, have remembered that to-day is your eighty-second birthday, and we feel that we should have the opportunity of expressing to you our affection and good wishes.

You are the Senior Officer of our Church, and one who has, through long years of service, been most faithful in your attendance, devoted to your duties, and in every way earning the respect and love of the congregation.

Your influence, which we realize will be felt long after you are moved to another sphere and to our Father's House, is being felt every Sunday and at our Prayer meetings by your very presence, while your words are an inspiration to us all. This address is intended to express in a few simple words the love which we bear toward yourself and your dear wife, and to express the hope that you may be spared to us for many days, and finally have an abundant entrance into the Kingdom of Him, "whose you are and whom you serve."

Yours sincerely,

Chicago Murder

Special to The Examiner.

CHICAGO, DEC. 12.—A chauffeur arrested last night in connection with the murder of Mrs. Hattie Kaufman, wife of a wealthy commission merchant, took the police last night over the route which he had described in a confession, and operated a hired machine, as he said he did the stolen machine in which he carried the murderers of the woman away from the scene of the attack a week ago.

Mrs. Kaufman was shot by a hold-up gang while returning home from the theatre. The murderers escaped by an automobile, and the police later arrested a young man who admitted that he had operated the machine. He at first gave his name as Jones, but it developed later that his correct name is Roland Chanel.

Chanel took the police and Mr. Kaufman over the route last night, and Kaufman, who witnessed the murder, said the machine proceeded exactly as events followed each other when his wife was killed. Chanel then took the police over the route he said he followed in escaping after the shooting. Two men arrested on suspicion of being "Rabeneau" and "Fred" were released late last night.

Some Objects Of The Local Health Association---How One Can Help It

To provide medical attendance, comforts and necessaries for the sick.

To disseminate information relative to household and public sanitation for the preservation of health.

To employ a district nurse. The services of a nurse will cost about $1,200 per annum. Will you help by paying an annual membership of one dollar, or a life membership fee of one hundred dollars?

The above are among other reasons why the Peterborough Health Association has been incorporated. If you do not feel disposed at present to pay an annual membership fee, there is yet another way of helping along its good intentions. The little Christmas stamps and pretty calendars, issued on behalf of this local organization to help care for needy patients, serves a very practical purpose in securing funds for the association. But the educational value of circulating these stamps among citizens is not to be overlooked. For this reason it is urged that a one cent stamp be placed on every letter and package that is mailed between now and the New Year.

With the stamps only costing one cent each the door is open to every one to have some part in the fight against consumption. Every buyer of a Christmas stamp or calendar will be lending a helping hand in the campaign in our own city. The stamps and calendars are on sale in the city drug stores, the city banks and with several merchants.

CAUSES MUCH DISEASE

Advice About Stomach Troubles and How to Relieve Them.

Do not neglect indigestion which may lead to all sorts of ills and complications. An eminent physician once said that ninety-five per cent. of all the ills of the human body have their origin in a disordered stomach.

Our experience with Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets leads us to believe them to be among the most dependable remedies known for the relief of indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. Their ingredients are soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes of the stomach. They are rich in pepsin, one of the greatest digestive aids known to medicine. The relief they afford is very prompt. Their use with persistency and regularity for a short time tends to bring about a cessation of the pains caused by stomach disorders.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets help to insure healthy appetite, to aid digestion, and thus promote nutrition. As evidence of our sincere faith in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, we ask you to try them at our risk. If they do not give you entire satisfaction, we will return you the money you paid us for them, without question or formality. They come in three sizes, prices 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain them only at our store—The Rexall Store—McDermid and Jury.

WEDDING BELLS

BRADY—FLYNN.

At St. Luke's Church, Downeyville, on Tuesday week, Miss Annie Flynn, daughter of Mr. Cornelius Flynn, Emily Township, was married to Mr. James Brady, Ops. Rev. Father McGuire conducted the ceremony, and Miss Mary O'Brien played the wedding march. The bride wore a tailored suit of dark blue, with hat to match, and carried a white prayer-book. Miss Maggie Hickson of Lindsay, was bridesmaid, and Mr. Jos. Cain, nephew of the groom, was best man. The wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Brady will reside in Ops.

ROSS—MCDONALD

On Tuesday morning, at 8 o'clock, in St Joseph's Church, Miss Mary Christine, eldest daughter of Mrs. McDonald, became the wife of Mr. John Lewis Ross. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father O'Leary. The bride, who was given away by her brother, looked very charming, dressed in blue, trimmed with satin and hat to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Mary McDonald, cousin of the bride, wore a navy blue suit of ladies' cloth and hat to match. The groom was supported by Mr. Harry Riched. After the ceremony the happy wedding party were driven to their new home for the wedding breakfast, about 75 guests partaking of this repast. The tables were decorated with chrysanthemums and geraniums. The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Ross, of Indian River, and Miss Marie and Katie McDonald, of Powassan. The presents consisted of valuable and useful articles, showing the high esteem the young couple were held by their many friends. The Bird Woollen Co. presented the bride with a beautiful dining-room set, the Dramatic Club of St. Joseph's Church a china tea set, the girl employees of the Bird Woollen Co. gave her a linen shower. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl brooch, to the bridesmaid a birth stone ring, and to the best man a set of gold cuff links and tie pin to match. Mr. and Mrs. Ross will make Bracebridge their home.

MEHARRY—JEWELL

A pretty but quiet wedding took place yesterday afternoon at 3.30 at St. Paul's manse, when Miss Millicent P. Jewell, of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Mr. George E. Meharry, also of Peterborough.

GUY—LEE

A pretty wedding took place this morning at St. Paul's church, at 7 o'clock, when Miss Adeline Lee, of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Mr. Richard Henry Guy, of Ocean City, N.J. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Pogue.

The happy couple left for their home in Ocean City.

THE POSTMASTER SICK FOR YEARS

BUT HE FOUND PERMANENT RELIEF IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Mr. John Nolan had Backache, Nervousness, and Rheumatism, but cured them so they didn't come back.

Point La Nim, Restigrouche Co., N B., Dec. 13.—(Special).—That as a renewer of youth Dodd's Kidney Pills has no equal is the experience of John Nolan, the veteran postmaster of this place. Sixty years of age but still strong and healthy, Mr. Nolan declares he owes his health to the great Canadian Kidney Remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"For ten years I was a sufferer with Backache, Nervousness and Rheumatism," says the Postmaster. "I was so bad at times that I was confined to my bed. I felt heavy and sleepy after meals, had flashes of light before my eyes and had difficulty in collecting my thoughts. After using several medicines without benefit I began to take Dodd's Kidney Pills, taking in all fifteen boxes. That was four years ago, and though I stopped taking the pills two years ago I have had no return of my trouble."

Backache, Nervousness and Rheumatism are all caused by diseased Kidneys. To cure them to stay cured you must cure the Kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills.

FIRST GRADUATING EXERCISES OF ST. JOSEPH'S HOSPITAL

Diplomas Were Presented by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor ---Medical Men Testify to the Efficiency of the Graduating Nurses---Event Was a Most Interesting One.

The first graduating exercises in connection with St. Joseph's Hospital were held on Tuesday evening, when the graduates of the class of 1911 received their diplomas and medals.

The spacious operating room was converted into a veritable bower for the occasion. His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, who graced the occasion by his presence, personally presented the diplomas and in his remarks, dwelt on the dignity of the nurses' calling, and the sacredness of the duties entrusted to them, and urged them to be always faithful to the high ideals of their profession.

The graduates' medals were then pinned on by Rev. Father Antionette, under whose supervision the nurses have been so efficiently trained, and whose untiring efforts were rewarded by the high standing taken by them at their recent examination.

Dr. McNulty then gave a resume of the evolution of the nursing profession, pointing out its early association with religion, its more widespread development as a result of Florence Nightingale's work during the Crimea war and the more recent influence of science in raising the profession to its present high pedestal.

Short addresses were also given by Rev. Father McGuire, of Downeyville, Rev. Dr. O'Brien and Rev. Father Galvin of Apsley, and by members of the staff present, including Dr. Cameron, Dr. McClelland, Dr. Galvin, Dr. Neal, Dr. McCullough, Dr. McPherson and Dr. Frederick, all of whom spoke of the efficiency of the hospital training, the aptitude of the graduating class and predicted success for them in their chosen work. The first part of the exercises was brought to a close by Rev. Father McColl, who acted as chairman and who, in his remarks, expressed the gratitude of the Sisters and nurses for the many kindnesses of the staff, and for the deep interest in and generous support accorded to the hospital by them.

Those present then adjourned to the dining room, where the Sisters had provided dainty refreshments, while an hour was spent in music and social enjoyment.

The graduates were Sister M. Bernadette, Miss M. Hurley, Lakefield and Miss D. McGuire, Lindsay.

Announcement is Made That the Dominion Government Will Proceed to Construct the Northern End of the Canal and That the Severn River Route Has Been Selected

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, DEC. 14.—It has been announced that the Dominion Government will proceed at once with the opening of the northern end of the Trent Canal. It is also stated that the Severn River route has been selected. Plans and specifications for the locks and dams required on the Severn River will be prepared without delay, and the contracts will be let early next summer. It is intended to have the work on the Severn River rushed along in order that it may be finished concurrently with the Ontario-Rice Lake Division.

Note.—The announcement that the Hon. Frank Cochrane has decided to proceed without delay in the opening up of the Trent Canal to Georgian Bay will be hailed with pleasure by the people of this district. However, he is only carrying out the energetic policy in regard to the Trent Canal, adopted by his predecessor in office, Hon. G. P. Graham. Under Mr. Graham's administration the contracts for finishing the Canal from Rice Lake to Trenton were let some four or five years ago, and most of these contracts are now about completed. In fact, in two years' time, the Canal should be open to Trenton. If it is Mr. Cochrane's intention to have the Severn River end of the Canal finished concurrently with the Southern Division, it will be possible, in about three years' time, to travel by boat from Georgian Bay and Port Arthur, or Fort William, to Trenton, by way of the Trent Canal.

It is reported in Peterborough today that one large engineering staff will be assembled on the Severn River at once, to prepare the work for the letting of these contracts.

As a tourist route the Trent Canal promises to outrival the St. Lawrence route, while as a barge Canal for the carrying of grain, it may surprise the friends of the Welland Canal, or the Georgian Bay-Ottawa River scheme.

If the Borden Government would follow the lead of the Laurier Government in other matters, as well as in the work of completing the Trent Canal, the country would be a gainer. It is much better to divide Ontario with a great commerce-bearing canal, than divide it on lines that mean disaster to national unity.

RAILWAY NOTES

But for the promptness of the engineer, the local freight from Belleville would have come to grief last evening, when several of the cars ran wild.

It is said that some of the cars had been placed on the main line not far distant from the local station, while the engine was engaged in switching elsewhere. By some means, the cars proceeded on their own mission down the grade towards the south. They were steadily gaining momentum when the engineer of the incoming freight becoming aware of the approaching danger, applied his brakes and backed off and the cars were stopped without damage. Fortunately the night was clear, otherwise a serious accident might have resulted.

The G.T.R. yard engine ran off the track yesterday near the C.G.E. The engine was soon replaced and no damage resulted.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

OBITUARY

MRS. ROBERT EAGAN.

The death occurred early this morning in the House of Providence of Mrs. Robert Eagan of Lindsay, aged sixty-nine years.

The deceased was born in Smith and on her marriage to Mr. Eagan, went to reside in Downeyville. From there she went to Lindsay, living there for a considerable number of years. She has been ill for some three or four months; her end, therefore, was not altogether unexpected.

Mrs. Eagan is survived by a son, Richard; three brothers, John Galvin Smith, James of Peterborough, and Matthew of Campbellford, and one sister, Mrs. James Duffus of Otonabee. The remains will be conveyed to-morrow morning, per the 8.25 G. T. R. train to Lindsay, where, interment will take place.

EXHAUSTIVE ENQUIRY INTO CONGESTION

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, DEC. 14. — Chairman Mabee and the members of the Dominion Railway Commission, this morning began an exhaustive enquiry into the causes of freight congestion in all parts of Ontario and the Northwest. There was much evidence on both sides to go through.

FELL 80 FEET TO DEATH

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, DEC. 14.—Peter Lindore, aged 26, unmarried, and Wm. Lovegrove, aged 50, married, both of this city, were instantly killed here this morning when constructing a cement floor, which gave way, letting them fall eighty feet through the elevator shaft of the Royal Ontario Museum to the basement.

MANGLED IN A SHAFT

LONDON, ONT., DEC. 14.—Lawson Moore, aged 31, unmarried, was terribly mangled by being caught in the shafting in the McCormick Biscuit Factory to-day, dying shortly afterwards.

RECEIVES APPOINTMENT

Special to The Examiner.

WINNIPEG, DEC. 14.—John Tait, Supt. of the Canadian Pacific Telegraph, Winnipeg, and formerly of Ontario, has been appointed Assistant General Superintendent of the western lines.

DEAD BEATS AND DEBTS.

The Rev .W. C. Riddiford will give the second sermon in the series on "Some questions the people are asking." The question of dead beats and debts will be discussed next Sunday evening. The subject arose out of a question put into the pastor's question box. Should the house of God be in debt too; if so, how far. This will be a practical discussion of the crime of going wilfully into debt.

GAME CONFISCATED

Special Wire to the Examiner.

OTTAWA, ONT., DEC. 14.— Game Warden Loveday is reported to have seized a large quantity of game alleged to have been illegally shot by a hunting party from eastern Ontario in the wilds of New Ontario and Quebec.

SHOT A BEAR

The carcass of a young bear weighing about 100 pounds was shipped to Lindsay from Donald on Tuesday. The animal was shot by a farmer named Stewart, who was roused from his slumbers one night last week to discover his bearship carrying away a nice little pig from underneath the barn.

Bruin, on finding he was discovered, started away at a brisk walk on his hind legs, bent for the woods, some distance away. He had got in advance of the farmer quite a distance, owing to Mr. Stewart having to repair to the house for his rifle, before engaging in any conflict with the bear. Loading himself with a goodly supply of ammunition, he started, accompanied by a large collie dog to capture bruin, and assert his rights to the ownership of the pig.

The dog at once took up the trail and attacked the bear, who was forced to drop his breakfast in order to protect himself from the fierce rushes of the dog. The animal struck wildly at the collie, any blow of which would mean annihilation had they landed on the animal's body. Mr. Stewart, by a well-directed aim, put him out of business with one bullet, the ball taking effect behind the foreleg. The carcass was offered for $25, but most fur traders thought the price too high to make any profit out of handling the skin, and bear meat is not in much demand around Lindsay.—Warder.

WITH THE WITS

"This condition of affairs is acephalous." "Not so bad as all that. It only wants a head."—Baltimore American.

Hokus—Brownsmith was after a political job for a long time. What's he doing now?

Pokus—Nothing. He got it.—Life.

Son—What kind of a man is a drone, papa?

Father—One who stands in a revolving door and waits for someone else to push it around so he can get in, my son.—Judge.

"The coal supply of the earth is limited," said the scientist. "No one can say how long it will last." "Great Scott!" exclaimed a man in the back row; "and here weve gone and wasted more'n a bushel of it heatin' the hall fer this lecture."—Washington Star.

"In financial trouble? What is it?" "Oh, I promised to pay Brown $10 to-day and I've got it, and he knows I've got it, and he knows I know he knows I've got it!"—Puck.

"Do you favour limiting the powers of the courts?" "Just now," replied the statesman, "I'm in favour of extending them. What I want is some way to get an injunction that'll prevent publications from putting all the funny stories into print before I get a chance to tell 'em to my constituents."—Washington Star.

CHURCH GETS THE RING

CHICAGO, DEC 12.—As her part in assisting to pay the debt of $5,000 on a church, one young woman last night placed in the contribution box her diamond engagement ring. Another parted with a gold brooch of quaint workmanship and still another sacrificed a hand-painted china set. An aged woman, one of the oldest members of the church, gave a mahogany parlour set. One young man gave his guitar and another a camera. A third who had belonged to the church only a week, pledged his salary for next week. The gifts were made during a revival at the Moody Church, founded by the late Dr. Dwight L. Moody.

STEAMED OYSTERS

Select large oysters, clean and put on a plate. Place in the steamer over a kettle of boiling water. About 20 minutes will be sufficient to cook them. Season with pepper and salt; serve on soft buttered toast.

PIE CRUST

Take six tablespoons flour, one-half teaspoon salt and two tablespoons of lard and enough milk to make a stiff paste to roll over. Handle as little as possible. Bake from twenty to thirty minutes. This is invariably good. I never make but one pie at a time. By that I mean, should I want two I make both crusts in separate mixings.

34,700 Mile Walk Wins Him $35,000

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Having completed a walking tour of 34,700 miles to win a wager of $35,000, Captain H. M. Seaton, who styles himself "the Prince of Tramps," has arrived in Penzance.

He undertook to walk around the world, because he was told it was impossible, and that nine previous attempts had failed. The conditions were that the Captain should walk 35,000 miles in four years, cross every country, and earn a living by lecturing. Backed by a stout heart and a good constitution, Captain Seaton set out on his journey from New York on 9th April, 1908.

According to a statement made by him to a press representative, he has had some perilous times, especially in Tibet. Twice he tried to reach Lhassa but failed. On one occasion he was bound hand and foot and tortured on the chest and legs with red hot irons. He escaped by chewing through the thongs which bound him.

Terrible as these experiences were, he suffered greater pangs from hunger and thirst in his journey over the Australian continent, where for hundreds of miles he did not meet with a human being. Despite these experiences, Captain Seaton says Australia is the finest country he has ever struck.

No Changes In Baseball Rules For 1912

Baseball fans will not have to spend any time next spring getting acquainted with the rules of the game if they were conversant with them last fall. No changes have been suggested so far by any of the critics or any of the followers of the game, and instead of the Rules Committee being conspicuous because of some important action they are expected to take regarding some new rule of the game, the Rules Committee this winter is conspicuous because of the lack of any work there is for it to perform.

Every winter for the past decade there have been a lot of suggestions for the consideration of the rule-makers at the annual meeting of the big leagues. So far this winter the only mention that has been made for any alteration in the laws governing the national pastime is a whisper from Manager McGraw, of the Giants, that pitchers be prevented from doing any coaching because of the advantage it gives them to study the action of the opposition pitchers and tip what is to be pitched to teammates while they are at bat.

Last year there was an attempt made to legislate the spitball out of business. Attempts were made by some critics to have the Rules Committee declare the spitball delivery unlawful. The pitchers that used the moist delivery came back in a hurry to defend their craft and charged that the move was started by partisans of the National League because the spitball pitchers were numerous in the American League and not so strong in the old league.

There was no chance in the world for any such a switch to be made in the rules of the game after that. The American League members as a unit stood out against any effort on the part of the National League members to pass any such legislation and all the talk died down in a short time.

Very few changes have been made in the playing code since the adoption of the present national agreement. It is a good thing for the game that it is safeguarded in this manner, also, for the fans and the partisans of one league or another would be continually seeking to gain some advantage for themselves if it was an easy matter to make changes.

There has been an effort made in the last two years to increase batting. This was agitated last year, and all kinds of suggestions were made, and some of them sounded very fair. Most of the ideas advanced, however, were to handicap the pitcher in some way and give the batter a little the better of it.

FEW BALL PLAYERS GET OVER $5,000

The season for hold-outs has started. The athletes who make a living by playing baseball are asking for additions in their pay envelopes next year, the owners of the clubs are refusing them, and the usual "I'm through with the game" statements are issued, north, east, west and south, wherever the disappointed athlete may reside.

The larger number of disputes over salary matters in baseball never become public. Those that are published come from the players; the owners do not care to tell about them. Every club in the country has its arguments over the salary question just as every business house has, and they are always settled.

Vean Gregg, the phenomenal left-handed pitcher from the coast; Grover Cleveland Alexander, from the thriving west, whom the Philadelphia Nationals secured for $500 and who proved the biggest pitching sensation of the year; big Ed. Sweeney, the tall and muscular backstop of the New York Highlanders; they are among the hold-outs already announced. There will be others, for the season is just starting.

National League moguls look upon Gregg's demands as a joke. This is not his first dispute with the Cleveland club over salary. He had a few before this. What he wants for pitching for Cleveland in 1912 is $5,000. Several club owners in the National League, when they heard of Gregg's demands, laughed

In the National League there are but five players outside the managers who are getting $5,000 or more a season. They are;

Christy Mathewson, of the New York Giants, whose salary is said to be $8,000 a year, and who gets the top figure paid a National League player. He will get the same amount next season

Hans Wagner, of the Pittsburg Pirates, gets probably $1,000 less than Mathewson. He again led the National League in hitting this year, and will probably sign for the same figure next season.

Mordecai Brown, the veteran member of the Cubs' pitching staff, is paid about $6,000 a year. His work last season will allow him to demand an equal salary figure in 1912.

Sherwood Magee, of the Phillies, one of the best hitters in the game, pulls down $5,000 a season. He will demand and undoubtedly receive the same salary next year.

Tommy Leach, of the Pirates, got $5,000 last year, but all he hit in 102 games was .238, and his salary will be cut by Barney Dreyfuss.

Only four clubs in the National League are paying as much as $5,000 to any one ball player. Take the Cincinnati Reds, for instance. The highest salaried man in the team is Larry McLean, the giant backstop. Besides being one of the best catchers in that league McLean is a great slugger. But all he gets is $4,500.

Daring Burglary At Lindsay

Another daring burglary was perpetrated Tuesday night, when the Lindsay Fair, a toy store, on Kent street, was broken into. The burglar gained admission to the store through a rear window. The glass was broken out of the window sash, which was a pane about 20 inches by 14. The window was protected on the inside with iron bars firmly attached to the inner frame with screw nails. It would not require any great strength to displace these bars, but the thief preferred climbing to the top of the window and descending the bars, which formed a good ladder for his ascent and descent. This act would prompt one to think the burglar possessed more agility than strength, and that he was of slim build, as the space between the window and bars could not have been more than nine inches. The robbery is evidently that of a boy, as no man could possibly squirm through the aperature unaid and climb the bars on the inside of the window.

On entering the premises the thief took a tour through the store, as some goods were displaced, but none taken away. Toys are of little use to a burglar so he confined himself to loot that was easy of concealment, departing with a tin cash box, containing $41.35

No clue to the thief has yet been found.—Warder.

104, He Would Wed Again

Examiner Special:

GOSHEN, N.Y., Dec. 13.—"Dr." James N. Vann, who, when he swore in his vote on election day in this place, declared that he was 104 years old, and who insists that he has been married fourteen times, desires to wed again!

Some of his wives have died, he says, and some have left him because of "incompatibility of reasoning," but so far as he knows all are dead, and there is nothing to prevent his again taking a bride into his little cabin.

"Dr." Vann, who claims that in the course of his world travels, he was given his medical degree in Liberia, has for the past ten years lived wifeless and childless. Pictures of several of his wives have places about his living rooms, but in the place of his children, most of whom died when they were very young, he has had as a mute companion a doll that is larger than any little girl ever mentioned in her prayers the night before Christmas.

For years this doll has occupied a high chair in Dr. Vann's room.

Dr. Vann remembers clearly when, in 1833, he shipped on a whaling vessel, the Eagle, and for five years never saw these shores.

No one hereabouts knows much about Dr. Vann's history. He conducts his correspondence on letter heads which state that his name is "James Nicholas Vann, a Centenarian, Slayer of Wild Beasts, Author, Lawyer and Physician."

DREAMING

Must be withheld, that none might know
I hate to read of millionaires,
Because such reading seems
To hypnotise me utterly
And start me dreaming dreams.
How many times I've figured out
What I'd be apt to do
If I were in that fellow's place
And had a million too.
Of course, I'd use my fortune well,
More sensibly than he,
For I'd give 10 per cent. at least
To worthy charity.
Another 10 per cent. would go
To help along a few
Of my deserving relatives
Whose bills are overdue,
And then my duty to the church;
Of course, a good share—
Say, 25 per cent. or so—
Would be devoted there.
I'd give this latter quietly,
Insisting that my name
Must be withheld, that none might know
Whence this donation came.
I'd only let the pastor know—
He'd have to know, you see—
Because my name upon the check
Would show it was from me.
Another 25 per cent.
Woul ddo myself and wife;
The income we'd derive from that
Would keep us both for life.
Then after that—well, after that,
I'd dream away and plan
To spend still other 10 per cent.
To help my fellow man.
And finally my dreaming gets
A bit confused, and then
I take a tumble and my feet
Touch solid earth again.
And common sense assures me, as
It slops me with a jerk,
I've wasted time enough to do
A dollar's worth of work.

Germany Modified Her Demands Says French Minister

BIG DEBATE IN CHAMBER

Paris, Dec. 15.—The German, British, Russian and Spanish ambassadors were present in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday afternoon when Foreign Minister DeSelves, before a crowded House, delivered France's contribution to the German-British debate and made some additions to the revelations concerning the Moroccan crisis.

Among other things M. DeSelves declared that Germany at the outset of the crisis had asserted that she would not accept or abide by a new Algeciras conference as a means to the settlement of the Moroccan question.

The discussion followed an interpellation by the Count DeMun and other members to the right or Conservative side, which wished to postpone the ratification of the Franco-German accord in regard to Morocco until after the negotiations now going on with Spain are concluded.

Count DeMun in a long speech condemned the sacrific to a rival power of part of a French colony equalling in extent two-thirds of France and conquered by the spilling of blood of French soldiers. He condemned the making of secret treaties as a method of diplomacy and wanted to know where France had been heading for forty years. The world, he said, had not seen Europe in a more menacing condition. He hoped that France did not dream of a dangerous Utopia involving the substitution of the friendship of England by the friendship of other powers.

M. DeSelves, in opposing the motion for the postponement of the ratification of the Franco-German agreement, traced the negotiations between France and Germany since the beginning of the crisis. He admitted that there had been a moment of tension due to the excessive demands of Germany. Reasonable negotiations ensued upon this and M. DeSelves denied that Germany had become irritable and tried to start a conflict. On the contrary her attitude had been conciliatory. French interests had been constantly guarded while the dignity and calm of public opinion in France had revealed the force of French patriotism.

M. DeSelves then defended the Franco-German accord, saying that the world realized that France had emerged from the negotiations far from being worsted. However, he continued, the chief advantage of the agreement is that it frees foreign politics from the Moroccan question, which has been a permanent source of conflict.

"The advantage is not a small one at an hour when the external political situation demands particular attention." He then continued: "We have no intention of abandoning our friends or our alliances. On the contrary we shall bind them closer." In conclusion he said that the negotiations with Spain had been taken up in a friendly spirit.

Count DeMun's motion was defeated by 448 to 98.

Liners' Crews Too Small.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Wm. H. Frazier, secretary of the International Seamen's Union of Boston, startled the House committee on merchant marine and fisheries yesterday, by declaring on a majority of the passenger carrying ships on the Atlantic coast, there were not enough members of the crew to man the life boats. He said most ships carry only boats enough for 75 per cent. of the passenger capacity of the ships.

Pope Excepts Germany.

Berlin, Dec. 15.—(Can. Press.)—It is announced officially that the Papal Legate to Prussia was informed by Cardinal del Val, the papal secretary of state, when the special order of the Pope relating to court proceedings against the clergy was issued, that it did not apply to Germany. The order has been subjected to bitter attacks by newspapers on every side except the Catholic organs.

PERSIAN SITUATION

Sir Edward Grey Explains it in House of Commons

SAYS SHUSTER MUST GO

London, Dec. 15.—Referring to the Persian question during a discussion of foreign affairs in the House of Commons yesterday, the Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, said that the Anglo-Russian agreement was not intended to impair the independence and integrity of Persia. A declaration to that effect had been made to the Persian Government, but, he added, Great Britain was not undertaking any obligation to protect the integrity of Persia.

The Russian Government, continued the Foreign Secretary, had demanded that Mr. Shuster should be withdrawn. The British Government had said that it did not object to that demand. Mr. Shuster's intentions in appointing British officials in Northern Persia were good, but the spirit and intention of the Anglo-Russian agreement could not be permitted to be upset, and two great nations embroiled by the action of an individual, no matter how good the intentions were.

After what had happened he agreed with Russia's demand that the consent of the British and Russian legations should be obtained for the appointment of foreign advisers to Persia.

In conclusion, Sir Edward said that as Persia was unable to pay an indemnity, he hoped Russia would be induced not to press that demand.

Philip Edward Morell, Liberal, said that a poorer excuse for taking away the independence of Persia than that advanced in the case of Mr. Shuster had never been put forward in the House of Commons. The exact crime committed by Shuster, said Mr. Morrell, was that he did not call at the Russian legation as often as he ought.

The Foreign Secretary said that if the difficulty were mismanaged or rashly handled by those concerned larger issues of policy might become involved. The British Government strongly opposed the restoration of the ex-Shah and Russia had given categorical assurances that it had no intention of that kind.

In this connection Sir Edward read a communication from the St. Petersburg Government stating that the troops would not advance from Kasbin for eight days, unless extraordinary circumstances should force an advance, and that when Persia complied with the demands the further presence of the troops would be superfluous. The communication concluded with assurance of adherence to the Russo-British agreement.

Sir Edward insisted upon the importance of Treasurer-General Shuster being replaced without delay by a foreign financial adviser acceptable to Great Britain and Russia, and that the latter countries should co-operate to assist Persia in securing loans and restoring order.

Criticism of Policy Unreasonable.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 15.—M. Sazanoff, Foreign Minister, said yesterday: "The Morocco agreement and the Turkish and Persian questions have strengthened the European combinations, especially the triple entente, which has passed the test with honor. Under the circumstances there is no desire in any quarter to change the groupings of the powers.

"No one is safe from reproaches, but criticism of the Persian policy is unreasonable.

"Should the ex-Shah attempt to usurp the throne," said M. Sazanoff, "Russia will refuse to recognise him."

On the question of the indemnity demand he asserted that the poor financial condition of Persia had been taken into consideration in making the demand.

Archduke Disciplined.

Vienna, Dec. 15.—Another romance connected with the imperial house of Hapsburg is contained in the announcement that the Emperor Francis Joseph has placed the Archduke Henry Ferdinand, brother of the Princess Louise of Saxony and of Archduke Leopold Salvatore, "on leave with the stoppage of all emoluments."

Archduke Henry Ferdinand, who is a painter with great distaste for court life and military duties, has been living some some time in Munich. He has desired for a long period to abandon his rank and title in the same way as Archduke John Orth, Archduke Salvatore, and more recently Archduke Ferdinand Charles, in order, as is reported, to marry a Munich girl belonging to a family not of noble rank. Finding this to be most difficult, the archduke has taken the easier course of throwing up his military career.

The family of the Hapsburgs has experienced a series of romances. The first among the more recent was that of the Archduke John Salvatore, known as John Orth, who completely disappeared after giving up his rank and title and marrying an actress named Milly Stiebel. He was said to have sailed for Chile on board the Santa Margaretha in July, 1890, and no trace of him has since been found.

A Home-Stayer's Death.

London, Ont., Dec. 15.—Mr. George Burridge Peacock, a shoemaker, of Delaware, died in that village on Wednesday night at the age of 75 years, without ever having spent a night away from his home or ever been on a railway train.

Sir Charles Tupper's Condition.

London, Dec. 15.—Sir William Barlow and the physicians attending Sir Charles Tupper, at Bexleyheath, yesterday morning issued a bulletin stating that their distinguished patient is maintaining his condition.

TOO SERIOUS A STEP

Asquith Approves of Stand of Anti-Suffragists

OPINION IS AGAINST IT

London, Dec. 15.—(Can. Press.)—The anti-suffragists have been roused to action by the recent violent demonstrations of the suffragettes.

An important deputation of the National Anti-Women's Suffrage Society, under the leadership of Lord Curzon of Kedleston, was received by Premier Asquith at his official residence on Downing street, yesterday morning.

The object of the deputation was to secure the Prime Minister's co-operation in blocking the threatened enfranchisement of women by means of an amendment to the Government's forthcoming Franchise Reform bill, which includes the granting of votes to women.

Mr. Asquith expressed his hearty sympathy with the object of the deputation and agreed with them that to grant the franchise to women "would be a political mistake of a very disastrous kind."

The Premier said that he did not reject the suggestion that a referendum should be held on the subject of women's franchise, but he feared that the verdict of such a referendum would not be accepted by the suffragettes unless women were permitted to vote in the referendum.

Mr. Asquith thought that the public opinion in the British Isles was so much against such a gigantic change as the granting of suffrage to women that it would prove a dominating factor in ultimately defeating the proposal, even should a franchise bill, including the women's vote, be carried through the House of Commons.

Will Settle Coal Strike.

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—Hon. Charles W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, has taken what will probably be final action on the part of the Government in connection with the settlement of a strike which several months ago tied up the coal mines of Alberta and Eastern British Columbia.

On the suggestion of Mr. Crothers, H. Bentley, a well-known merchant of Lethbridge has consented to act as chairman of a committee of arbitrators. It is agreed that the findings of the committee will be accepted by both parties.

Central Vermont Spur Line.

Montreal, Dec. 15.—E. H. Fitzhugh, president of the Central of Vermont, and 24 others, have asked for a charter to build a railroad from Barre, Vt., to Williamstown, Vt. It is proposed to call the new road the Barre Granite Railroad, and to incorporate with capital stock of $100,000.

Donovan's Majority 449.

Brockville, Dec. 15.—The official count of the polling in Brockville riding on Monday, gives Donovan, Conservative, a majority over Smart, Liberal, of 449, and over Wing, Socialist, 1,577.

Too Easy For Prisoners.

London, Dec. 15.—Dr. R. W. Bruce-Smith, inspector of prisons, has filed his report of his inspection of the jail with Sheriff Cameron.

The report states that the amount of work provided for the prisoners is not sufficient, and that there is altogether too much idleness. Governor Carter explains in this connection that the prisoners who were not at work were either those on remand or those sentenced to serve terms in the Central Prison.

Rev. Dr. Scott For British Columbia.

Brantford, Dec. 15.—Rev. Dr. Scott, pastor of Colborne street Methodist Church, has been called to the pastorate of the Metropolitan Church, Victoria, B.C., and has accepted the call. Exchange of pulpits will be effected by Rev. P. E. Holling, assuming Brantford pastorate, exchange to take place after the July conference.

The official majority of W. S. Brewster has been declared by Returning Officer Wade, at 364.

The Duke at McGill.

Montreal, Dec. 15.—His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught paid a visit to the medical buildings of McGill University yesterday morning and was received there by Dean Shepherd, Principal Peterson, Dr. Saskay, Col. Carleton Jones, and Dr. Adams. The royal visitor was shown through the different departments. His Royal Highness expressed his surprise and satisfaction with the magnificent new buildings.

Building Floating Drydock.

Port Stanley, Ont., Dec. 15.—A floating drydock will be built in Port Stanley by Oscar C. Smith of the village, to provide facilities for the repair of vessels coming into port, as well as to care for the local fleet. Hitherto, owing to its absence, the boats had to go elsewhere to have their troubles attended to. The Tug Owners' Association will give financial assistance to the undertaking.

THE CHRISTMAS SHIP

A Short Story

(By Virginia Blair)

It was not until Capt. Amos Bruce fell in love with Miss Priscilla Duguid that he ever thought of his fellow men. The captain had always been a crusty fellow, even in his youth. But underneath his crustiness there had been a sensitive soul, and, strange as it may seem, the captain's failure to do good had been a matter of ignorance rather than of evil intent.

Then men on his ship never complained of the captain's crustiness! To them he was a fair and just officer, giving every man his due, and having hard words for none of them.

But, to the outside world, Capt. Amos Bruce showed prickles like a porcupine.

When he fell in love with Miss Priscilla everything was changed. The captain, in spite of his forty-five years, had never been in love before, and at once his head became as full of dreams as a boy.

"I just want the whole world to know how happy I am," he said to the little lady, who was thirty-five, and had no lack of lovers, but who had found no one to her liking until the bluff captain had given her one day a glimpse of his tender, manly inner self, and in the joy of that discovery she had accepted him.

"I want the whole world to know how happy I am," the captain repeated, and Miss Priscilla laughed softly, and said, "then the way to do it is to make the world happy."

The captain rubbed his gray hair until it stood up like a spiky crown. "But how?" he demanded.

"Oh, I've thought of something," said Priscilla. "I believe our special mission is to lovers—there are so many unhappy ones."

"But how in the world?" asked the astonished captain.

"Well," said Miss Priscilla, who had a mind of her own, in spite of her gentle manner, "there's Jack Dobbs, for example. He's in love with Amelia Marston, and she won't have a thing to do with him, and then there's Mary Macy, who is growing thin and pale because Arthur Green is too dense to know that he really cares for her. Now what I propose to do, is for you to fit out a Christmas ship and ask them to take a voyage with us."

"I'll do anything you say, Priscille," he said, adoringly.

"Of course," Miss Priscilla said, doubtfully, "there's the trouble about doing a thing of that kind at this time of the year. I'm not sure that Mary Mace is a good sailor."

The captain thought it over. "Why go outside of the harbur, my dear?" he asked. "We can anchor the Wanderer just inside and have a house party."

"There—I knew you'd think of something, Amos," said Priscilla.

The captain and Miss Priscilla were married in November. They came back from their honeymoon on Christmas Eve, and the next day the whole town was startled to see a ship riding at anchor in the quiet harbour, with a red flag flying on which in white letters was the greeting, "A Merry Christmas."

Two four unsuspecting young people were welcomed on board by the captain and his wife.

"It was such a jolly idea," said Jack Dobbs, "to think of having us on your Christmas ship," and little Mary Macy glowed and sparkled as she echoed, "Oh, it was a lovely idea, Capt. Amos."

"You can thank the first mate," said the captain, waving his hand toward his radiant bride, "she's got it in her head that because we are happy, she's got to make a lot of other people——" He stopped, for his wife was winking and nodding at him.

"It will never do," she told him afterward. "To have them think we are trying to marry them off. Just as sure as they suspect, they'll get self-conscious and then everything will be spoiled."

It looked that night as if things had gone wrong. Mary Macy sat dejectedly in a corner of the cozy cabin with Jack Dobbs, while Amelia Marston flirted with Arthur Green.

"You don't suppose," said the captain that night as he came in from a walk on deck with Arthur Green, "you don't suppose they'll pair off wrong, do you? Arthur seems to be taken mightily with that little Marston girl."

"Arthur is in love with Mary Macy," said Mrs. Priscilla decidedly. "Only he's got to be waked up to the fact, and I don't know who's going to do it."

"You leave it to me," said Capt. Amos. "This ship isn't called a Christmas ship for nothing. If that little Mary Macy wants Arthur she shall have him, Priscilla. And you know when I say that, that I mean it. I'm a man of my word."

The next morning the captain hung a great bunch of mistletoe in the main cabin. Arthur strolled up and watched him.

"I suppose," he said, loftily, "that you expect me to kiss somebody under that, captain. Well, I'm not sentimental—so you needn't be setting any traps."

The captain peered at him over the big bow of red ribbon. "You?" he questioned. "I'm not setting my traps for you. It's Jack that will jump at the chance."

"What chance?"

"To kiss Mary Macy?"

For a moment Arthur was silent. Then he asked with some effort: "Do you mean to say that Jack Dobbs is in love with Mary Macy?"

"Looks like it," said the captain.

"But—Mary isn't in love with him," securely.

"She isn't?" the captain demanded. "Why, where are your eyes, my boy?"

Arthur stared at him. "But—but!" he stammered. "Mary——"

"Mary's like all other girls," said the captain decidedly, "when she knows that a man worships her, she likes it. No girl is going to waste her love on a man who doesn't take any pains to keep it."

Meantime Mrs. Priscilla was helping the plot along. Just before dinner she carried a bunch of crimson carnations to Mary. "When you go in to the dining room," she said, "you pin one of these on Jack's coat."

"Jack's?" asked Mary doubtfully.

"Yes. I know you'd rather pin one on Arthur's—but—I want to bring Amelia to her senses. She has flirted outrageously lately with Arthur. And poor Jack is miserable. Perhaps she'll realize what she is doing when she thinks some other girl likes him."

Wire-pulling on the part of the captain and his wife made possible a pretty tableau which greeted the eyes of four of the party as they came out into the main cabin on their way to dinner.

Mary and Jack stood under the mistletoe. Her face was raised to his, and he was smiling down at her as she pinned a red flower on the lapel of his coat.

"It couldn't be better," said the captain gleefully, as his wife took his arm.

"Look at Amelia and Arthur," was Mrs. Priscilla's happy response. "They are positively struck dumb!"

The Christmas feast was not a hilarious one. Blushing Mary and puzzled Jack, indignant Amelia and irate Arthur ate silently through six courses.

Coffee was served in the main cabin. And when the captain came to get his cup, he found his wife alone.

"Arthur has carried Mary away for a walk on the forward deck, and Amelia and Jack are att," she announced.

And on the forward deck Arthur is demanding of Mary, who looked like the spirit of Christmas in her big white coat, with a bit of holly in her buttonhole: "Did he kiss you?"

Mary blushed. Her lashes dropped over her eyes. "Why——?"

"Because nobody else has a right——" Arthur floundered. "I—I mean—will you kiss me, Mary?"

And somewhere astern, Amelia was asking: "Did you kiss her, Jack?"

Jack, rising to the occasion, asked, softly: "What if I did? But—I couldn't—there are no other lips for me but yours, dear heart."

And the captain, having made short excursions fore and aft, came back and reported to Mrs. Priscilla: "There'll be two more weddings when the Christmas ship sails into port," he said, "and now, my dear, if you'll step this way, I'll claim my privilege and kiss you under the mistletoe."

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

NEXT DOOR

A Short Story

Anthony Wadsworth was too well that is, ordinarily—but on returning from the opera after latch-key hours one night he was startled from his normal state of composure.

Seated on his doorstep was a bewilderingly beautiful young person. She wore a long, white evening coat, and on the steps beside her were gloves, opera glasses and programme.

She rose to her feet as he began to ascend the long flight of stairs.

"Oh, pardon me," she said, "but have you a key?"

Anthony, whose pose of composure had been disturbed for a moment, gazed admiringly at the eager, excited face upon which the electric light cast its full rays.

"Yes," he replied, lifting his hat, "I have a key."

"Oh, I am so glad! then I needn't wait for my escort. I can watch him from the window and let him in."

"Haven't you made a mistake?" he asked, courteously. "This is a private residence."

"Oh, what is the number?"

"Twelve hundred and forty-seven."

"Mine is 1249. It is next door, then?"

He laughed.

"I am glad to find that I am not the only resident in this absurd block of houses to go astray, but suppose we sit down here and wait until the person you are looking for arrives. It really seems inhospitable not to open my door to you, but——"

She laughed gaily.

"I couldn't expect nor accept an invitation under the circumstances. That is, inside. If I may sit on your steps until Bob comes, I'd be glad."

"Of course you may. And will you allow me to remain, also?"

"If you would! I told Bob I wouldn't be afraid, but I began to feel strange. I wasn't afraid of the policeman, for when Bob and I passed him at the corner below he was fast asleep. But I think I should explain matters."

"You needn't," he replied, politely. "It isn't necessary; 1249 is a boarding house. You are visiting there and have been out to the opera and have lost your key. Bob is your opera escort, but I would like enlightening as to his present whereabouts. Has he gone to awaken a locksmith, or is he scaling the walls of 1249?"

She laughed—the free, mirthful, unrestrained laugh of a child, and Anthony thought it sweeter than the music of the opera.

"Of course, you know it is a boarding house and my outfit suggested the opera. Bob thinks and hopes that he has left the key at a little cafe where we had supper. He has gone back to see. He won't be gone long."

"Why didn't he ring?" he asked.

"I wouldn't let him. I came only yesterday and this morning the landlady spoke of a new rule, and that was that the bell would not be answered to persons who forgot their latchkeys. Aunt Helen said she knew we'd lose our key, and so Bob and I made up our minds that sooner than awaken the landlady and her wrath, or invoke Aunt Helen's taunts, we'd stay out all night."

Anthony welcomed the thought of an aunt, but wondered that she would let her young niece, a stranger evidently, go to the theater and supper with a young man. Possibly he was a relative.

"You haven't told me yet who oBb is," he said.

"But you guessed, you know. Bob is my opera escort."

A very ingenious remark, but not enlightening, thought Anthony.

"Why didn't Bob take you with him in his search for a key instead of leaving you on a doorstep at this hour?"

"I was too tired to go with him. Besides, the heel came off one of my slippers as I came up these steps. There are so many persons in the boarding house at all hours, I thought someone would come and let me in before Bob returned, and then I would go inside and let him in when he came."

"He lives at 1249, too?"

"Yes; he boards there."

"And he didn't recognize his own house?"

"I came right up these steps, and he was so busy searching his pockets for the key, I suppose, he didnt notice which house it was. When he found the key was gone he was too dippy to know anything. If he had seen the mistake, he wouldn't have disputed me, he is so sweet!"

Anthony was auspicious of disapproval again. Such open expression of her fondness for her swain was in poor taste, to say the least. Then there came that delicious little laugh that made his heart warm to her.

"Now I've told you all about myself and Bob, why don't you identify yourself?"

"You haven't told me your name even!" he protested.

"My name is Nora Grandon," she replied.

"Miss Grandon, I'm Anthony Wadsworth. I live in this house with my parents and have just returned from the opera."

"Oh, were you there? Wasn't the music grand! Bob almost cried. He is so sensitive to music. It always moves him."

Wadsworth's backbone stiffened again.

"You seem very fond of Bob!"

"I love him better than anyone in the world!" she cried.

"Fortunate Bob!" he said, mockingly.

"Oh, here he comes now!" And she jumped to her feet.

Anthony rose and, without looking at the approaching Bob, inserted his key in the lock.

"Good night, Miss Grandon. I hope your troubles are over."

"Oh, wait, you must see Bob. He'll want to thank you for your protection—Hello, Bob. This isn't our house, but come up here. I want you to meet Mr. Wadsworth, whose doorstep we appropriated. Mr. Wadsworth, let me introduce you to my uncle, Mr. Bellingham."

Anthony turned swiftly. A little, elderly gentleman with pink cheeks and silvery, flowing hair, was extending his hand. Anthony was more cordial in his handshake than he usually was on first introductions.

Mutual explanations followed, and Mr. Bellingham gave the welcome information that he was acquainted with Wadsworth's father. On the strength of this fact Anthony asked permission to call the following night and received a hearty proffer of hospitality in return.

"But," he said, perplexedly to the young girl, who was hopping down the steps as best she could in a heelless slipper, "is he Bob and why Bob?"

The laugh he loved rang out on the clear air.

Her uncle turned to Anthony. "My name," he explained, "is Benjamin O. Bellingham. My initials spell Bob and so my little girl here will call me nothing else."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Had Boils

On Neck and Arms.

Had Them Lanced But, Got No Relief Until He Used

Burdock Blood Bitters.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still, at the same time are very painful. They are caused entirely by bad blood, and for you to get rid of them it is absolutely necessary to put the blood into good condition. For this purpose there is no remedy that can compare with Burdock Blood Bitters. This preparation has been on the market for about 35 years, and has a reputation unequalled by any other for the making of pure, rich, red blood. Mr. H. J. Patten, Stratford, Ont., writes:—"I have been troubled for several weeks with boils on my neck and arms. I had them lanced by the doctor, but as soon as one went others came. I tried all kinds of so called remedies, but could get no relief till I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I am pleased to say I am now quite free from those most painful things, and feel much better in every respect.

"My boy, of nine years, had a rash come over his back and legs, so we gave him a few doses and now he is all right again."

RETURNED FROM NEW YORK

OTTAWA, DEC. 12—Robt. L. Borden and Mrs. Borden returned from New York at noon, and the Premier will resume his business this afternoon. There will, however, be no meeting of the Cabinet until to-morrow, by which time the Ministers who went down to Quebec to attend the banquet in honour of L. P. Pelletier, and others who have been to their homes, will have returned.

It is expected that an early announcement will be made of the rearrangement of several of the departments, as well as of the National Transcontinental Railway Commission, of the Montreal Harbour Commission, of the Board of Management of the Intercolonial, and of the Ottawa Improvement Commission. It is practically decided that in all these cases changes will be made by which the Liberal nominees will be replaced by Conservatives.

There are also persistent rumors that the Ministers have determined upon a practically wholesale decapitation of the deputy Ministers, and that the present incumbents will get their notices before the end of the year. There is undoubted pressure upon the Ministers to that end, but whether Mr. Borden, in view of his previous attitude upon the question of patronage, will stand for such a wholesale adoption of the spoils system, remains to be seen.

There will, however, be interesting developments before the houses meet again.

BUFFALOS IN SIBERIA

In marshy parts of Asiatic Russia we may find the buffalo post. Great shaggy beasts draw the antediluvian-looking two-wheeled wagon, while men almost as shaggy, in long, rough, white garments and astrachan caps, act as postmen. The carts sometimes carry a passenger as well, but it need hardly be said that progress by this mail coach is neither rapid nor agreeable. Buffaloes are far more powerful than oxen, and are useful in the swamps of Siberia. They can tread with ease where most animals would fear to venture, for their broad splay feet seem made on purpose to wade through mud and morass.

In Kamschatka and on Lake Baikal the post bags are carried in sledges drawn by a whole army of dogs, intelligent creatures of the same race as those which dragged Peary to the Pole. One of them acts as leader and goes on ahead unharnessed and quite alone to encourage and point out the way to his companions. He is really just as good as a postilion, for he requires little guiding beyond being told right or left, fast or slow.

This mail service of dogs can do a hundred miles in 24 hours and, moreover, take two travellers with luggage. A team will often do 60 miles day after day without fatigue. They are only fed once in 24 hours, usually at night, when the journey is over. A good deal of fighting goes on among the dogs, and when an Eskimo dog is thoroughly annoyed no tiger can equal him in the ferocity of his expression. He does not bark, but he gives a long and hideous howl, the real wolf cry.

Another strangely picturesque post travels across Asiatic Turkey from Aleppo to Karaman. The country is mountainous and romantic, and the little, gayly-caparisoned group of horsemen is even more romantic still. This is the Tartar post. Three unmounted horses, laden with packages and letters, fill the middle of the picture. Behind them gallop the postmen, whip in hand, as if their lives depended on their speed. No doubt they often do, for that wild country teems with brigands and warring tribes. At the head and tail of the procession ride zaptiehs, or Turkish policemen, to guard the mail.

There is something impressive and mysterious about a procession of camels, and in the dreary desert of the Tarantas a slow, stately procession makes its deliberate way at appointed times, carrying the post across the sandy wastes. All camels have not, however, the distinguished appearance of the fleet dromedary.

STILL THE WORLD'S WORKSHOP

Lord Avebury contributes a remarkable article to the December number of the Nineteenth Century, taking as a text Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's speech in October, 1903, particularly this passage:

"Agriculture has been practically destroyed; sugar has gone; silk has gone; iron is threatened; wool is threatened; cotton will go."

Against this jeremiad, Lord Avebury sets with withering effect the following table of British exports for the years 1902 and 1910:

	1902	1910
Silk	£1,600,000	£2,300,000
Wool	23,000,000	38,000,000
Iron and steel	29,214,100	43,000,000

of our Protectionist friends. Take France, Germany, and the United States: France has a greater area than ours but her population is somewhat less; Germany has a much larger area, and half again as large a population; the United States have thirty times the area and twice the population; yet while the exports of France have increased £70,000,000, those of the United States £91,000,000, and of Germany £116,000,000, ours have gone up no less than £140,000,000!"

This marvellous increase of British trade in the past decade is a hard fact against which the tariff reformers have more than once broken their shins. Mr. Balfour had no conviction for the task of leading his party against the free trade citadel, and his operations were obviously half-hearted. It remains to be seen whether Mr. Bonar Law's frontal attack will be more effective.—London Advertiser.

Cotton	72,500,000	106,000,000

Lord Avebury admits that the production of grain has diminished, but so far from agriculture being destroyed the land under cultivation has actually increased. As a Unionist, he is not disposed to dwell on the "back-to-the land" movement, which the present Government is promoting, but all the indications point to a renascence of British agriculture through the breaking up of the great estates in England and Scotland in the interests of small holders. In Ireland there has been a beneficent revolution in the past few years. Taking British commerce as a whole Lord Avebury puts the figures in a nutshell as follows:

Exports:	1903	1910
Unit. King.	£290,800,000	£430,590,000
France ..	170,092,000	240,229,000
Germany .	250,730,000	367,133,000
U. S. A. ..	290,048,000	380,662,000

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES

FRIED CAKES

One-half teaspoonful of thick, sour cream, one cupful of buttermilk (or sour milk), one egg, one cupful of sugar, one level teaspoonful of soda, one of salt. Flavour to suit. Flour to roll—fry in hot fat.

HERMITS

One cupful of thick, sour cream, two cupfuls of brown sugar, one cupful of chopped raisins, two-thirds cupful of butter, two beaten eggs, one teaspoonful each soda, cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg. Flour to make stiff as can be stirred. Drop by teaspoonfuls on well-buttered pan, leaving plenty of room for them to spread

CHICKEN A LA CREOLE

The following is the West Indian creole method of cooking chicken, the recipe being by a native cook: Boil a large chicken in just enough water to cover it. When tender remove from the fire and add to the chicken water a half can of tomatoes, some minced parsley, two red pepper cones, two chopped onions, a little black pepper to a rich gravy. Then make a stuffing of mashed potatoes, moistened with this gravy, adding a cup of raisins. Stuff the chicken and brown inside the over. When done serve with what is left of the tomato gravy.—Knickerbocker Press.

WILL BURTON'S GHRISTMAS LUCK

A Short Story.

Christmas was coming. So was Will Burton's birthday, for he had made his appearance in this world on Christmas Day, and his happy parents had declared that never, never had a couple been so blessed by Santa Claus—or the Stork—before. (Of course, many boys and girls come to bless their parents on Christmas, but the Burtons—like all foolishly-proud young parents—did not realize it.)

And as Will Burton sauntered through the park on a crisp December morning, his face clouded, he soliloquised thus:

"Fifteen years ago this coming Christmas, I came into the world. I have heard dear Mother tell how happy she and my dear father were to have a little son. And as the first seven years of my life went by, how blessed was our home. And I can remember a lot of the time after my fourth birthday. I can see as plainly as though it was yesterday my first Christmas tree, and how Papa assisted a huge Santa Claus to lift the many gifts from the tree, and to hand them around to the many friends who had been invited for the celebration. And what a load of pretty things I got!—soldiers, dolls, Noah's ark, too many things to remember. Ah, that seems a long time ago, so it does!"

Will sighed and found a seat beside a playing fountain. The weather had not been cold enough to warrant the city's turing off the water in the public fountains in the park, and the thousands of sparrows delighted in ice-cold baths, desporting themselves in the fountain. Will fell to watching the birds, but continued his mental soliloquy. "And when I was seven—ah, the dear Father got injured in a railroad accident. A few months later he died of his injuries. Then came the first hard times we had ever known. The small amount of money Father left us, and the added small sum the railroad company paid as damages for Father's death, soon dwindled, and when I was ten, dear Mother had to go to work by the day as a seamstress in a cloak factory. Since then—well, there's been no Christmas festivity as of old. Occasional invitations to some friend's house on Christmas Eve, or a tree at the church, has been all that we have had to recall the days when we were once so happy. And now—I'm a big, strong chap, almost fifteen, and have done nothing to help Mother to earn our living. Bless her dear heart, it has been her wish that I remain in school till I graduate. But I shall stop school and go to work for her. She has slaved long enough for me. It is time that she should rest."

But Will's soliloquy came to an abrupt end. Sitting a few feet from him was an old gentleman, in furlined coat and silk hat. Everything about the aged man indicated wealth and refinement, and on taking his seat, Will had observed him with a feeling of admiration and veneration—the latter being due to the gentleman's advanced age. Will had always loved old people, and be they rich or poor, his heart yearned to be of service to them in some small way.

The interruption of Will's soliloquy had been caused by a sudden movement made by the old man. He had half risen from the bench on which he was sitting, and had as suddenly staggered and dropped back upon it again. His face became ashen in colour, and Will thought he was about to fall to the ground. Rushing to the aged man's side, Will asked in solicitous tones: "Are you ill, Sir? And can I be of any assistance to you?"

"Why, yes," replied the gentleman feebly, putting his hand to his head. "I feel rather faint. It will pass away, however. I am subject to such spells. I'm not a young chap like you." And he smiled into Will's anxious face. "Thank you, my young man, for your kindness. And if you have the leisure, I shall ask you to accompany me to my home, which is not far distant. But tell me, why is it that you are not at school?"

"This is a Saturday, Sir," reminded Will, as he assisted the old gentleman to his feet. "But I am quitting school, anyway. I shall go to work Monday—if I can secure a job."

"Well, well, well!" The old man spoke slowly, seeming to be much interested in what his young companion was saying. "And why do you stop school? You cannot have finished your education yet—you cannot be over fifteen!"

Will explained that he would be fifteen on Christmas Day. Then the old gentleman paused and looked at him through his eyeglasses. "Well, how singular," he remarked, smiling. "I happen to be seventy-five on Christmas Day. We'll have to celebrate together—that is, if you live in the city, and can come to celebrate with me. You see, I've taken a great fancy to you. And our birthdays bring us together, too. Ha, ha, ha!"

Then they walked along again, and Will thanked his new-found friend for his proffered hospitality. "But, Sir, I fear I shall not be able to come to celebrate with you. There are but two of us at home—Mother and I. And we try to stay together on all our holidays. To be sure, we shall not celebrate in a very big way, for I'm just looking for my first job, and may not be earning much when Christmas comes. But you have no idea how much pleasure it would give me to accept your invitation——"

"Say no more, my young man," interrupted the old gentleman. "I understand fully your position. You are right—the mother first. Outsiders must come afterwards. But—how would it be for me to come and celebrate at your house? I have no family. My house is lonely, only servants and—and—portraits and— memories. I could manage it to come to your house, you see."

Will turned a bright scarlet. His confusion was noticeable to his aged companion, who pretended not to see it. "You see," spoke Will, "my father has been dead for many years, and our living has devolved upon Mother. We're in rather close circumstances—Oh, not very poor, you know," he hastened to explain. "We aren't hungry, nor anything like that. We just have to live very simply till after I get to earning something."

They finished the last half block of their walk in silence, and Will feared he had hurt the old gentleman's feelings by openly showing him that he could not invite company to his poor home on Christmas. He was on the point of trying to explain more fully their circumstances when the old man turned into a deep lawn which surrounded one of the handsomest residences in the city. Will's face changed suddenly. He recognized the place as belonging to one of the richest men in the state—the president of a bank, and owner of many great enterprises.

"Come in, won't you?" asked the old gentleman, ringing the door bell. "I want to show you some family portraits—all that's left of my family. You see, I have passed through the fire—I have bowed to the rod. My only son died when about your age. My wife followed him within a year. I have suffered. Only business has kept my mind off my sorrows."

A house-maid opened the door, and Will followed his host into a bright warm library. As soon as they were seated the old gentleman touched a bell. Another servant came, and was given an order for luncheon to be served for two in the breakfast room.

"Oh, sir, I thank you—ever and ever so much," cried Will, rising, to his feet. "But—I—I—really cannot stop to luncheon, if I am the second person you mean when you say luncheon for two."

"You are not the second one, young man," smiled the old gentleman. "I am the second party; you are the first, seeing that you are my guest. Surely, you will at least allow me that little pleasure, since you have been so good as to conduct an almost helpless old man home."

There was a quaver in the old gentleman's voice, and it touched Will's heart. He was weakening when a thought of his mother's anxiety came to him. "I should love to stay," he said gently, "but my mother will be expecting me for lunch. She always comes from the factory at noon and fixes something for us. She'd be worried if I were not there. You understand, Sir?"

"Indeed I do," cried the old man warmly. Say, tell me your name, young chap. I appreciate a good boy when I find one. You are as good as gold. I'm not flattering you, my fine young fellow. I believe in giving praise where it is due. Now, tell me your history—what you can tell of it during the fifteen minutes you have to stay with me. It wants half an hour till twelve. You can stop half of that time, cannot you?"

And Will found himself telling of his life, of the hardships suffered for so many years by his mother. "You see, Sir, she always spared me—Mother did. Now I must begin sparing her."

The time being up, Will was about to depart, when the old gentleman rang for a servant and ordered his motor car to be brought to the carriage entrance. "I mean to take you home in my car," he informed Will. "And on the way there, we'll talk over your future. You must continue in school, and after graduating from there, enter a university and take up whatever profession you desire. A boy of your metal shall not be wasted by being deprived of an opportunity. I need just such a fellow as you in my offices—a little later on, after you have been prepared for the work. And we'd better know each other's names, while we're about this business." The old gentleman smiled as he said this.

"My names William Burton," informed our young hero.

"And my name is Charles Gray Goodman."

"Yes, Sir, I knew who you were when we turned into this fine home. And I have learned something else, too, if you don't mind my saying it. You are not the hard, cold man I have heard you are, but as kind and generous as a human can be. But—how can I accept all you are offering me? I would become dependent, and that would ruin me, absolutely ruin me. One must be independent and self-supporting to be of any worth in this world."

The old man looked the admiration he felt for his young visitor. "You shall be independent as soon as you have received your education, my dear William. And while you are getting it, I have decided on this plan: Have your mother come here and look after my house, for I certainly need a woman of refinement and good sense at my table. That will throw us—you and me—together a great deal. My son's room will be at your disposal. It has been closed since his death—twenty-five years ago. Ah, it has been a long twenty-five years! But henceforth I shall have someone to take his place in my home, a young fellow to bring up-to-date ideas and warm life to me. We shall get on famously—the three of us. And your mother will find her duties very easy—looking after four servants and keeping them busy. And best of all, watching her own son's advancement."

Then a servant announced that the was at the carriage entrance, and Will, Mr. Goodman leaning on his arm, followed the servant to the door. car was at the carriage entrance, and

"We'll begin our good work on Christmas, then," said Mr. Goodman. "Will that suit you, my son?"

"Yes, yes," declared Will. "And I shall certainly say that I have had Christmas luck. And could one want good things to come to them on a better day?"

"A day when all men should purge their souls of sin," said Mr. Goodman slowly. And his eyes were moist when they drew up in front of Will's home in a cheap rooming house in a poor side street. And Will was overflowing with happiness when his mother came to the door, surprise and pleasure in her eyes on beholding her boy enjoying a ride in a great touring car beside such a splendid-looking and dear old gentleman.

In long observation, Prof. H. C. Cowles has found that the travelling sand dunes of Lake Michigan often exceed 200 feet in height. They advance so rapidly that most plants are destroyed and the survivors, very curiously are swamp plants. These, unlike dry region plants, have great capacity of elongating and producing new roots.

The first lunar exhibition to be held in Barcelona in May, is to include large scale maps, photographs and other exhibits from the leading astronomers, and will be an impressive introduction to a region not yet claimed by land speculators.

MARRIED LIFE AS IT IS AND MIGHT BE

AS IT IS.

"You remember, Jack Henderson, that I said I was going to have an automobile?"

"I have a dim recollection of your having made such a threat."

"So you do once in a while remember what I say?"

"Don't begin that kind of a talk. What about the auto? Someone made you a present of one?"

"That sounds sensible! Do you happen to know anyone likely to give us one?"

"Us? I didn't know I was in this."

"Who's to pay for it? Of course, you're in it!"

"Mable what have you done now? I can't afford any nonse this fall, and I told you so long ago!"

"You always say that when I propose anything."

"Don't be childish, but I certainly mean it. I never was so pushed for money as I am now."

"Well, how much did you lose in the stock market?"

"About five thousand. That's past, but never again for little Willie!"

"I guess if you can lose five thousand dollars I can spend two for something for my comfort!"

"You have another guess coming. Two thousand! I only wish I knew where to put my hands on that amount—it would help me immensely in my business now."

"Well, I bought the car this morning, and you will have to pay for it."

"What?"

"Don't yell so—I'm not deaf!"

"You bought—a—car? Are you crazy?'

"Not a bit. I told you I'd have one, and I have been looking for a bargain ever since."

"A bargain — two thousand — gee whiz——"

"It's a beauty, a Paragon. The people that owned it had an accident and sold it for almost nothing so as to get rid of it quickly. It's the most beautiful maroon colour and has the loveliest big lamps—oh, just lovely!"

"Well, now that you have bought it, you may go and cancel the order. I pay for no car this year!"

"And lose all I paid down? I guess not!'

"What did you pay them?"

"I gave them fifty dollars of my own, then I gave them the hundred and fifty you gave me for the house, and the forty I had for the coal man."

"One hundred and fifty and forty and fifty—two hundred and forty dollars, whew! Now, let me see—where is this car?"

"In a garage—here's the address."

"The car will be for sale again in about ten minutes. Talk about foolishness—why, it costs three hundred a month to run such a car!"

"You horrid, mean thing, I have half a notion to go home to mother!"

"If you are going to do stunts like that, the quicker you go the better."

"If I was sure you meant that I would go to-night."

"I do mean it—I can't afford such nonsense—and you might as well understand it."

AS IT MIGHT BE.

"You remember, Jack, dear, you said, if you could afford it, we would have an automobile some day?"

"I have a dim recollection of saying some such foolish thing."

"Was it foolish?"

"Yes, in our circumstances. But why?"

"Oh, nothing!"

"Come now, Puss, what is it — what's on your mind?"

"And—a—motor car, Jack."

"It must hurt; they're heavy!"

"Now, dear, that's not worthy of you."

"Well, what about the motor car? Never mind my little joke."

"Ever since you said that perhaps some day we would have one, I have been reading the sales of second hand cars and looking around in the garages for a bargain."

"You have, you sly Puss, and never said a word!"

"I found such a lovely one to-day—a Paragon, 1909, in perfect condition and so cheap."

"How cheap?"

"Only two thousand dollars, Jack."

"That don't sound so cheap."

"Oh, it was! It's such a beautiful car—the loveliest color, a rich dark blue, and such big lamps and things!"

"A touring body?"

"No ,a limousine."

"Well ,that is cheap, but, dear, do you realize how much it costs to run a car like that?"

"Well, I had some idea of the garage charges, and the gasoline and the repairs, which wouldn't be much if we were careful and didn't have accidents."

"And how much for a chauffeur that was to be trusted to see that we didn't have accidents?"

"I thought you might like to run it for yourself."

"So I should immensely, if I had time, but you know, dear, I have only Saturday afternoons and Sundays. It would be rather foolish to buy a car to stand in the garage all the week".

"How much would it cost, Jack, dear, if we did have a chauffeur all the time? Of course, you would save all car fares and that would help."

"What a kid you are, Mabel—ten cents a day toward running a car! Why, child, it would cost about three hundred dollars a month if we didn't have much tire trouble. If we did, goodness knows how much more it would be."

"I had no idea it cost so much."

"Of course, you didn't, Pet, but just now if I had two thousand I could use it to great advantage in my business. I don't remember ever being so pushed for money."

"Really, is that so, Jack? Well, I won't look at any more automobiles until you say so."

"That's the best way. I want one as badly as you do, but we must wait."

ABOUT THE HOUSE

A cereal pan is much more easily cleaned if cold water is allowed to run into it as soon as the cereal is dished. Hot water hardens the mixture.

Covering a pan when fish is frying is apt to make the fish soft. A solid firm meat, which is at the same time flaky, is what a good cook likes.

Ammonia should not be used in the evening, or near a fire if the bottle is uncorked. It is inflammable, and the fumes are not specially healthful.

A glass of milk, to which has been added a raw egg, beaten light, a little sugar and grated nutmeg, will relieve physical exhaustion in hot weather.

In place of grape fruit for the first course at luncheon, serve the pulp of orange, ice cold, in sherbet glasses. Add a little lemon juice and chopped mint.

If a plate of sandwiches is prepared beforehand for a luncheon, it is a good plan to pile them on a plate and then wrap the plate and all in a waxed paper.

A good rule for making sponge cake is to devote exactly the same time to beating the yolks of the eggs as it takes to beat the whites to a perfect stiffness.

Mint may be raised in a rose bowl, and thus a supply may always be had on hand for seasoning. The bowl should be kept where there is plenty of sunshine.

Fresh green vegetables will retain their bright colour best if cooked uncovered. The steam confined beneath the cover of the kettle deadens any fresh colouring.

It is a mistake to think that ice tea can be cooled by a few lumps in the pitcher. There must be either finely cracked or shaved ice in the glasses to make it palatable.

A careful seamstress always has a piece of cloth under the presses foot of the machine. This not only saves wear of the machine, but will absorb any drop of oil that may gather and would soil the next fabric stitched.

STEVENSON NOT A CONSUMPTIVE

In "The Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette" for December is a sketch of Robert Louis Stevenson, together with some remarks concerning the disease from which he died. The writer shows that although Stevenson was born in Edinburgh of parents typically Scottish, that in his personal characteristic he was eminently nu Scottish, that is, as the Scots character is generally understood. Steven so his thought by most people to have suffered from tuberculosis throughout his life and eventually to have died from that disease. However, Dr. Tru deau, of Saranac Lake, in whose sanatorium Stevenson was a patient for a time, doubts that this was the cause of death. According to Dr. Trudeau, Stevenson was not consumptive when at Saranac, and believes that he succumbed at last to a hemorrhage of the brain.

COLD AND COLDS

An editorial in "The Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette" for December draws attention to the intimate relationship of cold and colds, notwithstanding some strenuous contemporary effort to belittle the nomenclature of our ancestors. The writer contends that what is known as catching cold is by far more often the result of cold itself, getting a chill, sitting in a draught, and so on, when in a heated condition, than the invasion of cold-producing bacteria into the system. He supports his arguments by various illustrations, and ends by saying: Because cold is an enemy of the body, the body reacts against it as against any stimulant. But the body can go only so far, and cold which at first is an excitant, may quickly become a depressant. When fresh and active we may laugh at, and laugh with, cold; but when fatigued, or in bodily repose, we would better beware its subtle approach.

FOOD TREE FOR BIRDS

An artificial food tree is one of the devices employed in Germany for feeding birds in winter. A small evergreen tree, preferably spruce or fir, is chosen, writes Julia E. Rogers in "Country Life in America," on account of its short leaves and stiff twigs. It may be a weak or ill-shaped specimen that will be dug out in the spring, or it may be temporarily planted, like a Christmas tree. No healthy tree is put to this use, for a food tree perishes through the treatment it receives in one winter. Stale white bread, meat, dried and ground, millet, dried elderberries, sunflower seeds, ants' eggs, and a few other ingredients are mixed in certain proportions, about one and a half the quantity of hot fat is added, and the food is ready. The aim in provisioning the tree is to imitate a natural one that is being eaten up by the larvae of insects. The liquid hardens at once by contact with the cold air, and adheres smoothly and securely to the branches. An enterprising German baron has been so interested in the food tree that he has invented a set of utensils for the perfect dressing of it. It is easy to believe that the enjoyment that the birds get from these trees, laden with more food than any tree they ever saw before, is shared by all the human beings that have such a tree in sight from their windows.—New York Evening Post.

APARTMENT HOUSES IN AMSTERDAM

Plans have been made and a site is being sought in Amsterdam for a building to contain nearly 200 rooms wherein families may each have an individual and separate suite of apartments and may take their meals in a general dining-room. There are many flat and apartment houses in Amsterdam, but this project contemplates the first one where the tenant may enjoy the independence of keeping house without the troubles of kitchen, dining-room and servants. A dozen families are already promised for the house, which will cost nearly $400,000. In addition to the general dining-room several smaller ones will be provided, where tenants may entertain guests at dinner, etc. The house will have central heating arrangements, baths, elevators, general telephones on all floors and house telephone in each room, library, reception, drawing and smoking rooms, and a bicycle and automobile garage.—Consular Reports.

THE AIR MILE

The "air mile" is a unit of measurement that has come into use with the advancement of aviation. We had the land mile and the sea mile, which is approximately one-seventh longer than the land mile of America. The nautical mile is often incorrectly called a knot as a measure of both distance and time. It is correct to say that she makes 10 knots, but to say that she makes 10 knots an hour is tautology.

The air mile is measured differently from the land mile and the sea mile. It is a land mile minus the retardation of an adverse wind or plus the acceleration of a favouring wind. Thus an aviator could cover many air miles while hovering over a given point on the earth's surface.—Browning's Magazine.

SUN POWER USED

After many years' experiments it is stated that a method has at last been discovered of harnessing the power of the sun. In the current number of "The Engineer" there is an account of a "sun engine," the invention of Frank Shuman of Philadelphia.

The engine, it is said, develops thirty-two horse-power during the hottest part of the day, which gradually decreases as the afternoon passes.

"Of course," says "The Engineer," "everyone recognizes, and no one more than Mr. Shuman, that it has a limited scope. No one expects to see sun plants in use in England or even in Europe, but in tropical regions, say for twenty degrees on either side of the equator, it becomes a practical proposition, for, in that area, not only may plenty of snushine be relied upon, but oil and coal are expensive, and, where coal or its equivalent cannot be purchased for less than ten shillings a ton, a sun power plant has its chance.

"Another thing is also to be remarked. Sun power, like wind power, being inconstant, the most profitable use to which it can be put is pumping, and in tropical countries a great need for water-raising machinery for irrigation purposes exists."—New York Times.

The holding of landed estates implies a development with which birds have not been hitherto credited. Of the English Robin, F B Kirkman asserts that individuals retain solitary possession of fairly well defined feeding grounds from the end of August to the middle of February, and all others of their own species are excluded. This naturalist has even mapped the robin holdings on an English farm during one winter. The boundaries seemed to overlap not more than a yard or two, and intruders beyond the limit were promptly expelled.

Some experimental motor barges on English canals are 71½ feet long, with a beam of 7 feet, and with 30 tons of freight they have a daught of 3½ feet. A 10 horse power Brooke oil engine gives a speed of 3½ miles an hour. Fuel consumption is small, and the economy over horse towing is said to promise a new era in canal transportation.

So Dreadful Was the Suffering From Itching Piles

After Twenty Years of Pile Torture Relief and Cure Came with

Dr. Chase's Ointment

You take no risk and you make no experiment when you use Dr. Chase's Ointment for piles. Many doctors still cling to the idea that nothing but an operation will effect a cure. But operations are expensive and dangerous and often fail in their results. Some have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment after operations had failed.

Dr. Chase's Ointment truly has a wonderful record as a cure. Here is a case which was reported recently:

Mr. John P. Marshall, 14 Barnes road, St. John's, Nfld., writes: "For upwards of twenty years I was troubled terribly with itching piles; at times so bad that I was obliged to lay up unable to attend to business. I tried many treatments without benefit, until II accidentally read of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and found at last a cure by using this ointment. I only used one box and part of a second one when I was completely cured, and have had no return of the piles. That was eighteen months ago, and, needless to say, I attribute this cure to Dr. Chase's Invaluable Ointment."

Many sufferers from piles have tried so many scores of treatments that they cannot believe that cure is possible. In order to convince the skeptical we are always willing to send a sample box free to anyone who encloses a two -cent stamp to pay postage.

No healthy tree is put to this use, for a food tree perishes through the treatment it receives in one winter. Stale white bread, meat, dried and ground, millet, dried elderberries, sunflower seeds, ants' eggs, and a few other ingredients are mixed in certain proportions, about one and a half the quantity of hot fat is added, and the food is ready. The aim in provisioning the tree is to imitate a natural one that is being eaten up by the larvae of insects. The liquid hardens at once by contact with the cold air, and adheres smoothly and securely to the branches. An enterprising German baron has been so interested in the food tree that he has invented a set of utensils for the perfect dressing of it. It is easy to believe that the enjoyment that the birds get from these trees, laden with more food than any tree they ever saw before, is shared by all the human beings that have such a tree in sight from their windows.—New York Evening Post.

APARTMENT HOUSES IN AMSTERDAM

Plans have been made and a site is being sought in Amsterdam for a building to contain nearly 200 rooms wherein families may each have an individual and separate suite of apartments and may take their meals in a general dining-room. There are many flat and apartment houses in Amsterdam, but this project contemplates the first one where the tenant may enjoy the independence of keeping house without the troubles of kitchen, dining-room and servants. A dozen families are already promised for the house, which will cost nearly $400,000. In addition to the general dining-room several smaller ones will be provided, where tenants may entertain guests at dinner, etc. The house will have central heating arrangements, baths, elevators, general telephones on all floors and house telephone in each room, library, reception, drawing and smoking rooms, and a bicycle and automobile garage.—Consular Reports.

THE AIR MILE

The "air mile" is a unit of measurement that has come into use with the advancement of aviation. We had the land mile and the sea mile, which is approximately one-seventh longer than the land mile of America. The nautical mile is often incorrectly called a knot as a measure of both distance and time. It is correct to say that she makes 10 knots, but to say that she makes 10 knots an hour is tautology.

The air mile is measured differently from the land mile and the sea mile. It is a land mile minus the retardation of an adverse wind or plus the acceleration of a favouring wind. Thus an aviator could cover many air miles while hovering over a given point on the earth's surface.—Browning's Magazine.

SUN POWER USED

After many years' experiments it is stated that a method has at last been discovered of harnessing the power of the sun. In the current number of "The Engineer" there is an account of a "sun engine," the invention of Frank Shuman of Philadelphia.

The engine, it is said, develops thirty-two horse-power during the hottest part of the day, which gradually decreases as the afternoon passes.

"Of course," says "The Engineer," "everyone recognizes, and no one more than Mr. Shuman, that it has a limited scope. No one expects to see sun plants in use in England or even in Europe, but in tropical regions, say for twenty degrees on either side of the equator, it becomes a practical proposition, for, in that area, not only may plenty of snushine be relied upon, but oil and coal are expensive, and, where coal or its equivalent cannot be purchased for less than ten shillings a ton, a sun power plant has its chance.

"Another thing is also to be remarked. Sun power, like wind power, being inconstant, the most profitable use to which it can be put is pumping, and in tropical countries a great need for water-raising machinery for irrigation purposes exists."—New York Times.

The holding of landed estates implies a development with which birds have not been hitherto credited. Of the English Robin, F. B. Kirkman asserts that individuals retain solitary possession of fairly well defined feeding grounds from the end of August to the middle of February, and all others of their own species are excluded. This naturalist has even mapped the robin holdings on an English farm during one winter. The boundaries seemed to overlap not more than a yard or two, and intruders beyond the limit were promptly expelled.

Some experimental motor barges on English canals are 71½ feet long, with a beam of 7 feet, and with 30 tons of freight they have a daraght of 3½ feet. A 10 horse power Brooke oil engine gives a speed of 3½ miles an hour. Fuel consumption is small, and the economy over horse towing is said to promise a new era in canal transportation.

Wainwright Continues Argument In Hebert Case.

Montreal, Dec. 15.—The continuation of argument in the Hebert case, which was to have taken place yesterday afternoon, was deferred till this morning, on account of the fact that the hearing of the cases on the Practice Court roll extended till late in the afternoon.

In his coming address Mr. Wainwright will take up the thread of historical argument at the session, and will proceed thence to the year 1886, when the present code was brought into effect. His contention that in the interval between 1670 and 1866 there was nothing in law then existing to oblige Catholics to go before their parish priests or bishops in order to be married, and that consequently ministers of any faith other than the Catholics were not restrained from officiating at such marriages.

Mr. Wainwright will also claim that if an illegality was really committed in the solemnization of the marriage, then the author of that illegality was the officiating minister. If so, how does it come to pass, that the sanction of, punishment of that illegality in the form of a judgment of annulment is visited upon a third party or parties and not on the person responsible for the commission of the illegality?

Wife Sues "Pinafore" Captain.

Montreal, Dec. 15.—The "Captain of H.M.S. Pinafore" was sued yesterday in the Practice Court of Montreal, for $1,200. His name is George J. Macfarlane, and the lady who sues is his wife, Dame Emily Whatt. The money is claimed as alimony and an interesting trial is promised unless an amicable arrangement is arrived at before the departure of the company, now playing at the Princess Theatre, takes place on Sunday morning next.

It is not a theatrical quarrel; quite the reverse. Mr. Macfarlane is a native of this province and as a result of trouble with his wife she awaited his coming to Montreal. Victor Harmon, the manager of the company, says that he knews nothing whatever of the suit beyond the fact that he had heard that trouble might take place in Montreal between the two parties. The hearing began this morning.

Control of Shoe Machinery.

Montreal, Dec. 15.—The local sessions of the United Shoe Machinery Co. of Canada investigation ended yesterday afternoon, when the testimony of F. W. Knowlton, general manager of the company was concluded, and next Tuesday the investigation will reopen in Quebec to take the testimony of plaintiffs.

The chief point of interest yesterday was evidence relating to the control of shoe machinery in Canada previous to 1899, when the United Shoe Machinery Co. of Canada was formed. It was shown that while a few companies had supplied machinery before that date, the machines made by them had either become obsolete or passed under the control of the company whose affairs are now being investigated.

More Outlaws Slain.

Lanano, Mindanano, Philippines, Dec. 15.—Forty-two Moro outlaws were killed here yesterday in an engagement with a detachment of United States scouts. There were no fatalities on the American side. The battle occurred in connection with the campaign for suppressing organized brigandage among the Moros.

The disarmament of the entire Moro population of Mindanano and Jolo was ordered by the military authorities three months ago, following a number of murderous attacks on Americans. Since that time the troops have been actively engaged in carrying out the order. Most of the chiefs gave up their weapons peaceably, but there has been a series of sharp engagements with bandits.

"John Strange Winter" Dead.

London, Dec. 15.—Mrs. Arthur Stannard, the famous novelist, known throughout the world by her pseudonym of "John Strange Winter," died yesterday. She had been confined to her bed for the past five months as the result of an accident while stepping out of an elevator. She slipped and fell on her elbow. The wound never healed.

Mrs. Arthur Stannard, who was born at York, England, in 1876, had been for years one of the most prolific fiction writers. Her stories were chiefly about army life, and the late John Ruskin referred to her as "The author to whom we owed the most finished and faithful rendering ever yet given of the character of the British soldier."

Conscription For Women.

Dusseldorf, Germany, Dec. 15.—The introduction of obligatory military service for women was proposed at a meeting yesterday of the Patriotic Women's Union here by Privy Medical Councillor Witzell, professor of the Medical Academy at Dusseldorf.

The lecturer, who is a well-known physician, suggested that women should be enrolled in the military hospital, transport, provisioning and clothing services, and should be mobilized with the other auxiliary troops in case of war.

The proposition has been taken up enthusiastically by the suffragettes, as it is regarded by them as eliminating any argument against the granting of the franchise to women.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The announcement of new telephone rates in Winnipeg has aroused a storm of opposition.

The Duchess of Connaught was confined to her room at Montreal yesterday with a severe cold.

Lawson H. Moore was killed in the McCormick biscuit works at London by being caught in a shaft.

The Government will probably make Saskatoon or vicinity the eastern terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway.

It is believed that the U. S. will abrogate the 1832 treaty with Russia, because of discrimination against American Jewish citizens.

Andrew Leslie, Rodney, Ont., was a victim to an old "con" game on a train from Buffalo to the Falls last night, when two strangers got away with $76 of his money.

The British War Office announces an offer of several prizes for competition by military aeroplanes. Two prizes of $20,000 and $10,000 respectively are open to the world.

Peter Lindores and William Lovegrove, workmen at the new museum building in Toronto were killed, when the scaffolding in the elevator shaft collapsed and dropped them 80 feet.

Prof. Alex. McPhail, Queen's University, has been notified he will not have to contest the riding of Queen's, P.E.I., in the general election, Jan. 3. He will be returned by acclamation.

There is rejoicing among the Conservatives of North Essex over the revised figures, which show that Hon. J. O. Reaume is elected by a majority of 56 over Ducharmi, his Liberal opponent.

The Dominion Millers' Association, meeting at Guelph, passed a resolution urging the Government to take over the terminal elevators at Port Arthur and Fort William as soon as possible.

One hundred men, artisans in the Dominion Public Works Department, were discharged by the Government yesterday, being laborers temporarily employed since September. Partizanship is alleged.

The allegation recently publish in Humanite, a Paris journal, of German intrigues to restore the Portuguese monarchy and that Royalist meetings had been held at various places in Germany, is officially denied.

Mrs. Maggie Smith, 127 Cannon street west, Hamilton, took an ounce and a half of laudanum last night with suicidal intent. Her action was discovered before the poison took effect, however, and her life was saved.

The formation of a Dominion Department of Public Health, will be one of the principal topics of discussion at the annual meeting of the conservation committee, and will be recommended to the Government by the commission.

Fruit Inspection Changes.

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—The Hon. Martin Burrell has made a number of changes in the fruit inspection department. About a dozen fruit inspectors have been dismissed for non-political reasons. The dismissals had been urged for years by officials, but political pull was strong.

A reorganization of the fruit section of the agriculture is being contemplated by Hon. Mr. Burrell. The fruit industry is now under the direction of the dairy commissioner, whose interests are naturally not with fruit farming. Strong representations have been made by the various fruit farming associations that there should be a special fruit commissioner appointed. It is almost certain that the change will be made.

Delhi's Passengers All Safe.

Tangier, Dec. 15.—All the passengers of the wrecked steamer Delhi have now been landed. Only one of the passengers was injured in the most difficult task of rescue, he having a leg broken. Three Lascars, members of the Delhi's crew, were drowned by the capsizing of a boat which was returning to the ship after landing a batch of passengers.

The sea continues to run high. The starboard side of the Delhi is now completely stripped of its planking. A tug from Gibraltar, which came to assist in the rescue, was driven ashore by the heavy sea. The crew escaped.

Check on Drugs.

The Hague, Dec. 15.—(Can. Press.)—The International Opium Conference yesterday, adopted two resolutions presented by the British delegates. The first declares that it is desirable that the Governments decide whether it is possible to punish those having morphine illegally in their possession. The second resolution urges the Governments to restrict the traffic and use of such substances to medical and other legitimate purposes.

The Dutch delegates referred to a future conference a proposal that the Governments interested in the production and consumption of raw opium should arrive at an agreement to limit the trade therein, in view of international measures already taken.

Borden's Busy Week.

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—Premier Borden's return to Ottawa on Saturday will be followed by a week of hard work. The intention is to rush the work of preparation for the re-opening of the House in January. Probably the first thing to be done will be the appointment of the promised tariff commission and the commission which is to study the needs of agriculture with a view to co-operation between the Dominion and the provinces.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as without fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Dec. 14.—A fair amount of business continues to be done in all grades of Manitoba spring wheat over the cable, the demand being still good from both the United Kingdom and continental buyers at steady prices. There was also considerable enquiry for oats from foreign buyers and as buyers have advanced prices 6d per quarter during the past two or three days a good business could be done at a profit if ocean freight room was obtainable. The local trade in oats and American corn is fair. Flour is steady under a fair demand. Millfeed is active. Cheese is quiet but firm. Demand for butter and eggs continues good. Provisions are fairly active. Supplies of dressed poultry are large and demand slow on account of mild weather.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Dec. 14.—The railways reported 69 carloads at the City Market, comprising 573 cattle, 1211 hogs, 932 sheep and lambs, 42 calves and 1 horse.

Butchers.

Christmas quality cattle, $6.25; picked butchers $6.00 to $6.10; good, $5.70 to $5.90; medium, $5.20 to $5.60; common to medium, $5 to $5.25; inferior light eastern cattle, $3.75 to $4.75; cows, $3 to $5.25; bulls, $3.50 to $5.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

Some light feeders sold at $4 to $4.50, light stockers, $3 to $4.

Milkers and Springers.

There were too many of the common, backward springers and light weight common milkers on sale, the supply being greater than the demand, and for these prices were from $3 to $10 per head lower. The good to choice cows were not hurt as much as the common ones. Prices ranged all the way from $20 to $70, but not many above $60.

Veal Calves.

Common eastern rough grass calves sold from $2.70 to $4.25; veal calves ranged all the way from $4.50 to $8.

Sheep and Lambs.

The market for lambs was firmer at $5.50 to $6 per cwt.; sheep ewes, at $3.50 to $3.75; bucks, $3 per cwt.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris paid $6.50 for selects fed and watered, a price, he stated, that he had been paying all week.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—Cattle—Receipts, 7000, market, dull and weak; beeves, $4.55 to $8.10; Texas steers, $4.10 to $5.75; western steers, $4.50 to $6.60; stockers and feeders, $3.25 to $6.30; cows and heifers, $1.90 to $6.25; calves, $5.50 to $8.

Engine Was Ditched.

Brockville, Dec. 15.—From yesterday afternoon until night traffic was suspended on the B. W. & N. W. R. by an accident which occurred to the westbound express, two miles from Delta. The spreading of the rails caused the engine and the baggage coach to go into the ditch, the crew and the passengers escaping injuries.

John Tait Promoted.

Winnipeg, Dec. 15.—John Tait, superintendent of Canadian Pacific Telegraphs, Winnipeg, has been appointed assistant general superintendent of western lines.

ALBERT MATTHEWS, Toronto, Ont., General Manager. Director, Geo. Matthews Co., Limited.

TRUSTEES ..... THE ROYAL TRUST COMPANY.
BANKERS ..... BANK OF MONTREAL, DOMINION BANK

SECURITY

These bonds are secured by a trust deed held by The Royal Trust Company, upon all of the Company's properties, comprising modern packing plants and stock yards, at Montreal, Toronto, Hull, Peterborough and Brantford, valuable city properties used for retail markets in Montreal, Ottawa, and Peterborough together with branch distributing houses at Montreal, Ottawa, Sydney, Halifax and other points.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE AND DESCRIPTION OF BONDS

These bonds are issued for the purpose of furnishing additional working capital to extend the Company's operations.

Under the trust deed the issue represents a closed mortgage on all the fixed assets of the Company. The proportion is therefore only 60%. The remaining $800,000 can be issued subject to the mortgage, upon new property only, and to the extent of 66⅔% of the actual outlay. Furthermore, no additional bonds may be issued unless the net earnings for the year previous to such date of issue shall have amounted to three times the amount necessary for interest on the existing bonds.

The Trustee for the bondholders is The Royal Trust Company. The trust deed provides for a sinking fund of 2% per annum, commencing 1914. The bonds redeemed by means of the sinking fund are to be kept as cancelled by the Trustees, but the interest coupons thereon are to continue payable. All or any part of the issue of bonds may be redeemed after December 1st, 1915, at 105 and accrued interest.

SINKING FUND.

On or before Dec. 1st, 1914, and annually thereafter, a cash sinking fund of 2% of all bonds outstanding, plus an amount equal to the annual interest on all bonds redeemed through the sinking fund is to be paid to the Trustees and shall be invested by the Trustees in the purchase of the bonds of this issue in the open market at a price not exceeding 105 and accrued interest. If bonds are not obtainable in the open market, the Trustees may retire bonds by means of drawings at 105 and accrued interest.

PAST EARNINGS

Joke Ends In Murder.

London, Dec. 15.—Fred. Culbert, aged 27, died last night from loss of blood from a wound caused by an ax slash at Graham's Hotel, a roadhouse three miles from this city. A middle-aged gypsy, Dan Reynolds, was arrested late last night, charged with the assault.

The two men met at the hotel early in the evening and got into an argument over a gun which had been hidden as a joke. Reynolds, the gypsy, accused Culbert of hiding the gun. After some arguing Reynolds went to his wagon and got the ax and attacked Culbert. He escaped, leaving Culbert on the road. The wounded man dragged himself into the hotel and a physician was sent for, but arrived too late.

Reynolds was arrested some hours later at his home in Pottersburg.

It's Hamilton Now.

Hamilton, Dec. 15.—Some alarm has been caused in the city by the report of City Bacteriologist Dr. Fidlar, presented to the board of control yesterday morning. The report states that colon bacilli have been found in the water taken from taps in the city. The doctor says that the condition is serious, but as the infection is only occasional, there is no cause for immediate alarm. The source of the city's water supply has been found to be pure, and the doctor concludes that the water is probably infected from the bay inlet through seepage.

Sun Yat Sen at Penang.

Penang, Straits Settlements, Dec. 15.—Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the Chinese reformer, and Gen. Homer Lea, the American who, it was alleged, would take charge of the military government in China, landed here yesterday. Dr. Sun Yat Sen declined to grant an interview, preferring to reserve his judgment on the situation in China, and not desiring to commit himself to a definite policy until he was in full possession of the facts and acquainted with the intentions and views of the reformers.

Would-Be Suicide In Jail.

Galt, Dec. 15.—Thomas Sayles made a desperate attempt to take his own life and yesterday afternoon was removed to Berlin jail to await sentence, having pleaded guilty to the charge at the police court yesterday morning. Sayles is a [illegible] Englishman and ex-soldier, aged 60. He slashed his throat with a razor and nearly bled to death.

Blackmailers Sentenced.

London, Dec. 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—For blackmailing Elijah Fader, a Canadian financier, by falsely declaring he had committed an indictable offence against a young woman, Butler was sentenced to nine months and Henry Marshall to three years in prison. Marshall stated to have been a secret service agent in Canada.

Will Oppose Graham.

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—Interest is growing in the political situation in South Renfrew. The Conservatives are calling a convention to consider the selection of a candidate to oppose Hon. George P. Graham, to provide a seat for whom Thomas Low, M.P., resigned.

Novelty.

Willis—See the crowd going in to view Deadbeat's remains. He must have been well liked. Gillis—No; those are collectors who were never able to see him while he was alive!—Puck.

THE DECEIVERS

(Short Story)

BY A. G. GREENWOOD

"I shall never forget first meeting my wife," declared old Tom Hardy. "Tom," they said, "this is Miss Fields." He glanced fondly across the room as he spoke, and his wife smiled. But Stanley Young, solicitor's clerk, and Mr. Hardy's prospective son-in-law, looked suddenly startled.

"Not—not of Thomaston?" he gasped almost involuntarily.

Mr. Hardy nodded, oblivious of Stanley's expression and his tones.

"And though it's forty years ago," he added, "and we've been married thirty-eight of them, I've never had a sorrow—only——." He hesitated; Mrs. Hardy laid down her work and looked nervously at her husband.

"Tom, I think he—he ought to be told," broke in Mrs. Hardy.

"So do I," answered her husband. "Stanley, since you and our girl got to going together, we've been meaning to tell you and her. Kit doesn't know. It's our one sorrow, Stanley, we——." Again he hesitated, and then said bluntly, "We never had a child."

He looked at Stanley, expecting to find him dumfounded, but the young man was staring at his boots, white-faced, immobile.

"We adopted Kit," said Mr. Hardy, loudly, thinking he was misunderstood.

"She's not a child of ours. But we wanted her to love us as if Bess was really her mother, and I her dad. She hasn't deceived you, Stanley——"

"Oh, I know. Kit couldn't deceive anyone. It's not her nature——." But he spoke at random, suddenly standing up.

"She's late," he ejaculated, looking at his nickel watch. (Kit was a typist in a city office.) "I think I'll go for a stroll and look in after supper. Thank—thank you for telling me——"

"Knocked all of a heap!" gasped Mr. Hardy as the front door slammed. "Never thought he'd take on so. It's a lesson not to have no secrets——"

But Stanley, striding down the dingy street, was not thinking of Mr. Hardy's deception. He crossed the high road, dodging the cars, and plunged down another mean street, calling at a house where a friend lived.

"Ted," he demanded as the door opened, "'bout that girl you spoke of to-day. An heiress you said——"

Ted, another solicitor's clerk nodded. "I should say so," he agreed vehemently. "Four thousand a year — parents dead seventeen years — adopted by a married woman whose maiden name was——"

"Miss Fields, of Thomaston—you told me——"

"Yes, Bessie. She had been maid in the boarding house where Miss Katherine's parents resided. Barring that she walked out with me, Tom, and subsequently married him and bettered herself, nothing is known of her—not even her name. The child's mother was friendless and dying—the present fortune's from an uncle——" Stanley raised a pale face, and a pair of strained eyes.

"I've found her," he jerked. The other expressed doubt and astonishment in somewhat heated slang. Stanley explained.

"I'll tell you her address if you promise to keep my name out of it," he added, "and if you leave her alone for a week." His friend argued and protested, but Stanley was firm. In the end Ted, seeing a feather in his cap, gave in, and Stanley took himself off. He walked to the park, throwing himself down on the grass. Telling Ted his discovery marked a momentous decision; Kit was a rich girl now, could live a different life, marry someone very different from Stanley. He could not stand in her way. He had decided that. She was only eighteen. She'd forget—and he dug his fingers in the turf. He'd go out of her life—leave her alone—not give her the chance of making a sacrifice—of marrying him out of a sense of duty, or pity, or for fear of seeming mean. She was fond of him—that could be altered.

He reviled himself because his eyes burned, used a little bad language, and kicked his toes on the ground. But he was tolerably calm when he called on the Hardys, so calm, so cool, so very nonchalant that Kit looked surprised.

"You never asked me why I was late," she said reproachfully.

"Girls always work overtime — always undersell men," he retorted. "That's why they're unpopular in the city——"

The Hardys—including Kit—looked at him in surprise, and kindly put his

A WEAK, ACHING BACK CAUSED HER MUCH MISERY

Could Not Work and Had No Ambition For Anything.

Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know the suffering and misery which those afflicted undergo.

Weak, lame or aching back comes from the kidneys, and when the kidneys are out of order the whole system becomes deranged.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a specific for all kidney troubles.

Mrs. W. R. Hodge, Fielding, Sask., writes:—"A few lines highly recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. For this last year I have been troubled very much with nasty sick headaches, and a weak, aching back which caused me much misery, for I could not work and had no ambition for anything. My kidneys were very badly out of order, and kept me from sleeping at nights, I tried many kinds of pills and medicines but it seemed almost in vain. I began to give up in despair of ever being well and strong again, when a kind neighbor advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and am thankful for the relief I obtained from them, for now I am never in trouble with a sore back or sick headaches. I will always say Doan's Kidney Pills for mine, and can highly recommend them to any sufferers."

surliness down to his being tired. But Kit went sorrowfully and thoughtfully to bed. Stanley had been sarcastic about her piano playing, about the new way in which she did her hair (and he had admired it the day before), had left early, forgetting to kiss her, had altogether been the very opposite of his usual self. Stanley, walking home, wondered if he could keep it up.

A man who purposely stirs up scandal about himself has an easy task. From different quarters Kit heard a great many detrimental accounts of Stanley during the next few days. He had gone several times to a billiard hall, where he had gambled, he had been late at the office, had even taken Rose Kent to the theatre. Rose was Kit's pet aversion, and Stanley's choice of her should have warned his sweetheart that there was more in Stanley's doings than met the eye. But Kit acknowledged herself to be jealous, to be angry at his treatment of her, at his snubs, at his ill temper.

The climax was reached five days afterwards when a quarrel was terminated by Stanley saying: "If you want to end it all—say so. If you want to be free—you've only to say the word——"

"If you're always going to be angry," she began.

"I'm always going to be myself," he retorted. "Take me or leave me. It's all the same to me." Of course, after that Kit had no choice. Stanley was handed back the engagement ring and thrust it moodily into his pocket. Kit tearfully told Mrs. Hardy and sobbed herself to sleep, while downstairs her foster parents discussed the amazing topic, finding but one crumb of comfort.

"She needn't be told," declared Mr. Hardy. "Bess, there's no call to tell her. She'll want a mother's love in her trouble—and if ever I see that Young here again——" Mr. Hardy blew out his cheeks and left the threat unfinished, while his wife nodded, with tears coursing down her cheeks. Promptly on the seventh day Ted called. He interviewed Mrs. Hardy, learned her history, and made certain of her—and Kit's identities. But he was secretive of his object, till at last Mrs. Hardy exclaimed:

"Haven't I seen you with that Stanley Young?" (the "that" indicated a world of scorn). "I seem to recognize" (your hair, she was going to say, but more politely added) "your colouring."

Ted nodded. "He's chucked his job—gone abroad, I fancy," he blurted out. "He sent me a short note saying good-bye, but didn't say where he was off to. He's been on the loose lately—funny—such a steady chap—" Then he recalled his promise and shut his mouth, becoming officially reticent, and taking his departure with the exciting comment that Mrs. Hardy was to expect a visitor and some news. The Hardys talked it over, receiving on the morrow a solicitor's letter informing them that "our Mr. Carstor" would wait upon them, and requesting the presence of "Miss Kathleen Fuller," their adopted daughter.

In trepidation the three of them waited the solicitor, received him, and heard his news. Kit an heiress! It was staggering—it took their breath away—it left them gasping. But it was not until Kit had left them — round-eyed, trembling, astounded — that Tom Hardy muttered:

"We'll have Stanley round when he hears. Don't it just serve him right? He'll come round—crawling. Ain't he just kicking himself. My stars, I'd like to see his face when he hears." Presented with this side of the matter, another reason for Stanley's conduct never occurred to them.

As for Stanley Young himself, his going abroad was a bluff. He had not sufficient money to leave the country. It was with difficulty that he paid off his landlady and managed to get out. He went by train to Dalston, taking a small room there, and setting out in search of work with his late employer's somewhat unwilling "character" in his pocket.

One thought comforted him. He had played the game. He had gone through with it, and if he despaired—well, Kit had had her eyes open — would soon forget even his name and marry. But he could not pray for that. The weary days passed. His little ready money dwindled. All his applications for employment failed. Wearily, he turned into the park one night, mechanically picking up an evening paper, carelessly discarded, on one of the seats. He read it through, turning and returning the sheets, reduced at last to the advertising columns.

Two initials caught his eyes. "S Y." he read, "it was all a mistake. I am poor—so poor. Come back for love of Kit." The type danced before his eyes. Eagerly he re-read it—not that he did not understand it, but to make sure—very sure—of the wonderful news. Ten minutes later he was swinging down the street where Kit lived. Kit opened the door to him. Kit in her typing clothes—unchanged. "Kit—it's true—you're poor." She nodded. Both his arms went out, and his eyes filled.

"I'm sorry—oh, you must believe that. I wanted you to be rich and happy. But Kit—I—I'm selfish I knew—I had to give you a chance—I was acting—trying to act—I've always loved you so—"

"I heard," she said, and she drew him into the passage. "Mr. Ted let it out. He said you had come to him. I knew then why you did it." Before he could speak, before he could touch her, Mr. Hardy lumbered out into the hall.

"So it's Stanley," he said slowly. "You've heard, eh? Poor little Kit—"

"I'll kill myself working for her," cried Stanley.

Mr. Hardy blew his nose violently. "So that's why you went?" he mumbled. "I misjudged you. I beg your pardon, Stanley Young." He glanced at Kit.

"You'll manage him?" he asked doubtfully.

"I'll try," said Kit meekly.

"What does he mean?" inquired Stanley.

She went close to him, holding the lapels of his shabby coat. Did you read my advertisement carefully?" she asked.

"Why—yes."

"It was intended to mean that our quarrel was all a mistake, that—that I was poor, very poor without your love, that I wanted you back. Did you read it like that?"

"No," he said, and his voice seemed strangled.

"I—I thought you wouldn't," she muttered, and clung to him more tightly.

"You've cheated me," he stammered.

"As you cheated me," she retorted, and stood on tip-toe, her lips not two inches from his. "We've both deceived each other—once. But, Stanley" (and this said very severely), "my husband must never deceive me again. Now give me back my engagement ring, and—and you may kiss me if you want to." Stanley looked, tried to be firm, then fumbled in his pocket for the ring.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hins, Brodhagen, Ont "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

If you get too much salt into your tomato soup, add a bit of brown sugar. It seems to make salty soup taste all right. But better still, is to add a few slices of raw potato.

To mend linen tablecloths remove the presser-foot from your machine. Insert the place to be darned under it, and stitch back and forth. It is much quicker and neater than when done by hand.

Probably everybody knows that boiled ham and corned beef have a nicer flavour if left to cool in the liquor in which they are cooked, but a lot of people don't follow the practice, possibly because they dislike the large greasy kettle to wash late in the day.

To take the smell of fish from hands, wash them in water which contains a few drops of ammonia.

To take the odour of onions from dishes, after washing them, put them in the stove for a few seconds to be heated thoroughly. When cool again the odour will be gone.

SICK HEADACHE

A Symptom of Troubles Which are Removed by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Sick headaches are not merely afflictions to be borne as patiently as possible — they are danger signals. They never come unless the digestive system is out of order, and their regular recurrence is proof positive of serious trouble and a warning that should be heeded promptly.

These terrible headaches permanently banished by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Sick headaches are caused by Indigestion, Biliousness or Constipation, and no amount of "headache powders" will do more than temporarily relieve them. The only way to get rid of them entirely is to cure the Constipation or Indigestion that is causing them, and nothing will do this quicker or more effectively than Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are purely vegetable in character, and are free from any harmful drug. For over fifty years they have been in constant use in Canada, and have proved most effective in regulating the bowels, aiding digestion, banishing sick headaches and restoring vigorous health.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have stood the test for over fifty years. 25c. at all dealers. W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., Brockville, Ont. 7

Nearly All The Famous Prisoners In History Have Been Women

One Woman in Holland Was Responsible for the Death of Sixteen People.

UNITED STATES CASES

The case of Louise Vermilya, who is held to the grand jury on a charge of poisoning Police Officer Arthur Bissonette, and who is suspected of the murder of nine others, three of whom were her children, calls attention to the fact that nearly all the famous poisoners of history have been women.

Locusta, Lucretia Borgia, Spara and Tofana in Italy; Brinvilliers Lavagson, Lavigoreux and Catherine de Medici in France, and the Countess Somerset in England, all attained in their day infamous notoriety as poisoners. Perhaps it is to the poor credit of the ancient poisoners that they killed not for money as it is alleged by the State of Illinois that Mrs Vermilya killed, but slew husbands inconveniently in the way of lovers, of persons who stood between them and their ambitions or who aspired to deprive them of their places. A motive so sordid as robbing an insurance company had not been thought of in the days of De Medici, for there were no insurance companies to rob.

Tofana, who admitted having employed an arsenical solution in 600 cases of murder, was never accused of killing her own children for pecuniary profit. Mme. Brinvilliers murdered her husband and brothers because they stood in the way of her amatory intrigues. Lucretia Borgia and Catherine de Medici poisoned for political reasons, and many historians have taken a charitable view of their cases, holding that they have been more sinned against than sinning. Their murders, instigated by political intrigues and treacheries, were to some extent in keeping with the period in which they lived.

The Champion Female Poisoner

Pre-eminence or championship honours among the female poisoners, whom it is alleged murdered their very children for gain, belongs to Mrs. Hedwig Van der Linden, who was tried and executed in the historic old city of Leyden, in Holland, in 1883, for the murder by poisoning of 16 persons, including five of her own children, whose lives she had insured in her own benefit. The murders all took place within a period of five years. Mrs. Van der Linden made a complete confession. Her story was so boundlessly wicked that most persons refused to believe it in all regards, even on the basis that the woman was possessed—as the Chicago police claim Mrs. Vermilya is possessed—by a homicidal mania. If the statements of Mrs. Van der Linden are true, she capped the climax of all female poisoners.

Difficult to Convict Women

Happily enough the United States seems to enjoy much greater freedom from this class of poisoners than European and Asiatic and South American countries. The number of female poisoners in the United States has been comparatively small and the difficulty of convicting them is great. Indeed, the entire history of female poisoning in the United States bears the record of but one conviction. On June 25, 1899, Sarah Jane Whiteling was executed at Moyamensing Prison, Philadelphia, for the arsenical poisoning of her husband, John, aged 36, her daughter Bertha, aged 9, and her son Willie, aged 3.

Whiteling's life was insured for $230, Bertha's for $129, and Willie's for $47, a paltry total of $399. The woman's confession showed a calculation so cold and a purpose so deliberate that suspicion was aroused as to her sanity. But a carefully conducted trial proved that she was, beyond all question, sane. Yet, in spite of the fearful enormity of her offences, the usual engineering of morbid sentimentality was put to work to save her from the gallows. The plea that a woman should not be hanged, even though when by such crimes she unsexes herself, was pushed to the limit by the sentimentalists who seem to expend upon murderers the sympamentalists was added the ingenuity of thy that should go to the murdered. To the untiring energy of the sentithe criminal lawyers, but Governor Beaver, of Pennsylvania, resisted all organized and unorganized pressure, and Mrs. Whiteling went to the gallows the only woman poisoner, or the only woman accomplice of an insurance murderer, to expiate her crime on a scaffold in the United States.

Poisoners of New England

At the time when the case of Frankie Morris was exciting the attention of the west, and that of Mrs. Whiteling of the east, Mrs. Sarah J. Robertson was being tried and convicted in New England for the poisoning of her husband, Moses; her daughter, Lizzie; a son, William; a brother-in-law, P. A. Freeman; his son, Thomas; his wife, who was her Sleeper, who lived in her residence. In each case the insurance policies were paid over to her. Mrs. Robertson was convicted, but like most of her sex, escaped the penalty of death.

Holyoke, Mass., furnished a second edition of Mrs. Robertson, when, in May, 1889, Mrs. Lizzie Brennan was arrested for the poisoning of her husband and two sons in the usual manner—by arsenic. Mrs. Brennan also escaped paying the debt she owed society, though, compared with women such as her, Lucretia Borgia might very well pose as a saint.

In August, 1893, Mrs. Mattie C. Shann, a woman of apparent refinement and education, was arrested for poisoning her son, John F. Shann, 22 years old. She varied from her sisters in this fearful art by employing bichloride of mercury instead of arsenic. To prevent analysis she had three men enter the house and eviscerate the body, leaving the chemists but the brain and the kidneys for analysis.

An old case of attempted poisoning was that of Frank C. Norman by his mother, Helen Vandegrift, at Mount Holly, N.J., in 1890. Mrs. Vandegrift used croton oil. Young Norman had an insurance policy of $15,000 on his life. A clever physician, Dr. W. E. Hall, detected the villainous scheme and saved the life of the young man, who denounced his unnatural mother as a fiendish poisoner. The evidence showed that her deceased husband had died of croton oil poisoning and had told persons before his death that his wife was killing him by inches.

The Case of Mrs. Maybrick

England has not been without its female poisoners, but the British justice has a way of dealing with its women convicted of murder that is deterring in the extreme. Mrs. Maybrick is about the only woman who, having been found guilty of murder by poisoning, escaped the British gallows. In Mrs. Maybrick's case it was proven that her husband had been in the habit of taking arsenic in large quantities and an element of reasonable doubt was injected into the testimony, enough to induce a commutation of sentence.

Like almost all her partners in crime, the alleged poisoner, Mrs. Vermilya, appears to have employed arsenic, for the reason that it is cheap and can be easily secured and administered. "Rough on Rats," freely sold in every drug store, is really crystallized arsenic. Arsenic seems to be the favourite, almost the sole weapon of the female poisoner. Where the man poisoner has employed other drugs it has seemed that he is usually a physician or a chemist or enough of either to have a knowledge of how such drugs can be administered and of their subsequent workings.

The Career of Burns

How He Has Risen to Be Greatest American Detective

Common sense, the most uncommon thing in the world, is the secret by which William J. Burns, whose mark in connection with the McNamara cases has made his name world-wide, has risen to be the uncrowned king of American detectives. Although he has dealt with some of the most hardened criminals in the country, he has never fired a shot at a human being.

Burns is the essence of the ordinary. A man about middle height, broad shouldered, with prominent features, and a pair of gray eyes that bore through you and the wall beyond, reddish brown hair, untouched by age; his moustache tinged with gray, attired probably a bit more carefully and up-to-date than the average business man, and with a manner alert and positive, he presents not the appearance of a detective, but to the unknowing passes off for a prosperous citizen of fastidious taste regarding dress.

Burns was appointed to the Government secret service in 1880 and was located in the west, working in Indian Territory, Texas, Arkansas, and the south. He was soon placed in charge of that district, and in 1894 was transferred to Washington, where he was promoted for good work, and got a roving commission, going wherever there was an unusually important case.

One of the biggest feats in those days was the running down of the principals in the Brockway-Bradford-Courtney gang of counterfeiters. When this gang were run to earth and cornered in a building in West Hoboken, N.J., they had in their possession more than $2,000,000 in gold certificates an da lot of Canadian counterfeit notes. So accurate were the gold certificates, the Government had already accepted $80,000 worth of them, and in order to pick the bogus from the genuine it was necessary to summon one of the counterfeiters to Washington.

Another brilliant piece of detective work by Burns was in connection with extensive land frauds in the west. He was more than three years on this case, and when he had finished and turned the evidence over to the Government it resulted in the conviction of United States Senator Mitchell, of Oregon, and of two wealthy landowners, Hyde and Benson, of California.

From these land cases Burns went to San Francisco to dig amid the mass of political and municipal corruption in that city. Three years were necessary for the investigation. It resulted in sending Mayor Schmitz to the penitentiary for five years; Reuf, the political boss, for fourteen years; Glass, vice-president and general manager of the Pacific State Telephone Company, and several others to prison for various periods.

Burns, notwithstanding the nature of his profession, has a strong belief in the integrity of human nature. "There never was a time," he says, "when the moral sentiment of the people was more easily and quickly aroused than at present, or when there was a finer sense of honesty in the various relations of daily life.

"Even had men want good government—if they are not making money out of bad government. Nor do I believe in the heredity of crime. Lombroso and other scientists speculate and write essays, but coming right down to common experience, which is a better test than philosophy or long tables of figures, I know that environment and not birth is the one great cause of criminal conduct.

"Furthermore, a young man who does wrong should be given another chance. Plenty of good and useful citizens were unwise in their youth. I have always pleaded with the attorneys of the government, therefore, to show leniency toward the young."

He has always held that the detective business was simply a matter of commonsense. He is continually telling his subordinates that every crook, no matter how clever he is, always leaves a trail behind.

In following that trail it is necessary to consider why he did not do certain things as why he did do certain others. All these things have to be taken into account, and after that it is simply a matter of commonsense and intuition.

Intellectually, Burns is the most resourceful and brilliant detective in the United States. Nowhere else on earth, perhaps, can anyone match him in the ability to think out the snarled problems of mystery and crime.

700 Fewer Votes in Provincial Than in Last Dominion Election

The returns for East Peterborough are now complete—the last of the outlying polls having been heard from at a late hour Wednesday night. Mr. James Thompson, the Liberal-Conservative candidate, is re-elected by a majority of 514 over Mr. Edward Hawthorne, the Liberal candidate, and has a plurality of 394 over Mr. Hawthorne and Mr. David Andrews, the Independent candidate.

The total vote polled at Monday's election was 2762.

At the recent Dominion election Mr. Sexsmith received 1922 votes and Mr. Kerr 1540 votes, making a total of 3462 or 700 more than were polled at this election. The total number of votes polled at the 1908 election exceeded the number polled this election by 473. The decrease Monday may be attributed to the disagreeable weather and the bad condition of the roads as well as to a seeming lack of interest.

CROUTER GETS THREE MONTHS IN GAOL

Was Convicted of Stealing $25.00 From William Stewart by Jury at Quarterly Sessions---Sentenced This Morning By His Honour Judge Huycke.

Three months in the county gaol, was the comparatively lenient sentence meted out to Albert Crouter in the County Court this morning by His Honour Judge Huycke.

Before sentence was passed, Mr. G. N. Gordon, counsel for the defence, was given the privilege of speaking a few words in favour of the prisoner. He drew attention to the unreliable character of the evidence which was brought against the prisoner, and the condition of the latter when the offence was committed. It being Crouter's first offence of this nature, and his first serious offence of any kind, Mr. Gordon urged the court to exercise its right in extending leniency to the prisoner, claiming thereby that it would make a better citizen of him, than if he was made a hardened criminal by being given a long term. He pointed out that it would not only make him worse, but that it would make it very hard for his family, which was depending on him for a living. After a few other remarks, the judge addressed the prisoner.

"Have you anything to say?" asked His Honour.

"No." said the prisoner.

"Your case is a very difficult one to deal with," said Judge Huycke. "Had it not been for the admission you made yourself, the Jury might have brought in a different verdict. However, they have found you guilty, and I must deal with you accordingly. You don't appear to have been living the life you should have, and you are old enough now to know that drunkenness and drunken sprees are very degrading and not conducive to a good reputation. If I thought that you brought this man to your house and set him drunk for the purpose of getting his money, as the learned Crown Attorney tried to bring out, I would impose a very heavy sentence, but I do not know that the evidence justifies me in coming to that conclusion. In that case, the months in the sentence I am going to impose, would be years. However, you got the money from him somehow, but under the drunken condition you were in, I will take the lenient view of your offence, and in so doing I hope when you get out that you will brace up and be a man. I will give you a short sentence and in so doing I hope you will occupy the time in reflecting upon your past, and decide to lead a higher and better life when you are free again. The sentence of this court is, that you be confined in the common gaol for three months at hard labour.

The Evidence.

It will be remembered that Albert Crouter was arraigned in the Police Court, a few weeks ago, charged with stealing $25.00 from Wm. Stewart, while the latter was at his house.

Crouter was sent up for trial by Magistrate Dumble.

He was represented by Mr. G. N. Gordon, and entered a plea of not guilty. The following jury was empaneled: Walter Rosoborough, F. J. Pearson, Thos. Franks, H. Hamilton, Alex. Archibald, E. H. Christie, W. Garnett, Henry J. Hanwell, David Garathy, Geo. G. Hamilton, Richard White, James Jackson.

At this juncture the case was adjourned until the afternoon.

At 2.15 the case was resumed. Crown Attorney R. E Wood outlined the case, as the evidence taken at the Police Court showed:

Wm. Stewart, from whom the money is alleged to have been stolen, was the first witness called. He gave evidence similar to that taken in the Police Court, stating the circumstances of his going to Crouter's and also told about giving the $5.00 to Albert Crouter to get provisions and going to bed, while he was away for it.

He stated that when he was lying on the bed, half asleep, Crouter came into the room and started searching him, pretending he was looking for a bottle. He stated that he knew what Crouter was after, and made up his mind that he would not let him have it. He went down to the front room and Crouter followed him.

"I just let him take it, then," said the witness. "I had to let him have it, or he would have torn me."

Mr. G. N. Gordon, counsel for the defence, then began cross-examining the witness. "Didn't you have a few drinks at Montgomery's that night," asked Mr. Gordon.

"What are you asking me that for?" retorted the witness. "I am an older man than you, and you have no business asking me such questions."

"Did you find your money lying on the floor one morning?"

"No, I found it in the back yard, though."

P. C. Meharry's Evidence.

P .C. Meharry was then put in the box, and related his visit to Crouter's house the night of the incident. He stated that Stewart came to the Police Station about 9 o'clock, and related his story about Crouter taking the money and he and Detective Newhall and P. C. Meagher went over. He told of bringing Albert and Mrs. Crouter to the Police Station, and the condition of affairs in general.

Detective Newhall was then put in the box, and corroborated P. C. Meharry's statement.

Wesley Crouter went into the witness box, and stated that Stewart got into bed with him and about 8.30 Stewart charged him with stealing his money. They then got up, and he (Crouter) saw a roll of bills under the bed. He drew Stewart's attention to it ,and, after counting it, Stewart said that it was not all there. He got back into bed again, however, and later got up and went out.

Albert Crouter, the prisoner, was then called, and told his side of the case, after which Mr. G. N. Gordon addressed the Jury on behalf of the defence. He drew the Jury's attention to the evidence taken, to the effect that Stewart comes to the city now and again, and gets drunk, and finishes up in the Police Court. He also charged that Stewart had told two different stories about losing the money. He stated at first that the money had been stolen from him, while lying in bed. The second story was to the effect that the money was taken from him by force in a downstair's room, and on these grounds, he asked for an acquittal.

After the Crown Attorney addressed the Jury, the Judge gave his address, after which they retired to their quarters to consider the evidence, at 4.05, and at 4.20 returned with a verdict of guilty. Mr. R. E. Wood requested that an order be made returning the stolen money to Mr. Stewart. This was granted and the Jury was discharged.

Bishop O'Connor Blesses New Church At Orillia---An Interesting Event

ORILLIA, DEC. 14.—The handsome Roman Catholic church building, which has been in course of construction for rather more than a year, was opened to-day, the solemn ceremony of blessing and dedication being performed by Right Rev. Bishop O'Conner of Peterborough.

The building is of cut limestone from the Longford quarries and presents a massive appearance. It has cathedral windows, slate roof, and a large square tower surmounts the entrance. Eventually a tall spire will be set on the tower, but the lateness of the season prevented this being done this year. The building is 66 x 162 feet, with a wing at the rear, used for a sacristy, 30 x 35 feet. The basement is the full size of the church. Mr. Richard Sheehy, of Peterborough, who in this building completes his seventh church building, was the contractor.

The church stands upon the site of the old building, which was torn down to make room for it. Bishop O'Conner was present at the laying of the corner stone of the old building 40 years ago. He was then a priest at Barrie, and the late Father K. A. Campbell, whose remains lie beneath the new church tower, was the priest at Orillia.

The main floor of the church is a magnificent auditorium. Gothic arches on marble columns support the roof, and the centre ceiling is 58 feet above the floor. The interior wall finish is stucco plaster, and the woodwork polished Georgia pine. There are three altars, a large main altar, with smaller ones at either side. The floral decorations to-day were very beautiful. The organ loft and choir gallery are at the opposite end of the church. The building is steam heated and the seating capacity is about 1,200. The cost of the entire building was in the neighbourhood of $55,000, and the work so well begun by Father Moyna of Barrie, was successfully completed by his successor, Rev. Father Trayling.

Some 40 visiting priests were present at the opening ceremonies this morning and the church was crowded to the doors, a great number from other churches accepting the invitation to be present.

After the dedication Monsignore

PANIC IN LONDON

Another Rumour of King George's Assassination in India Caused Great Excitement in England.

NOTHING IN STORY

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., DEC. 15.—All Britain was shocked this morning by another rumour that King George has been assassinated in India. There was tremendous excitement in London streets and almost a panic in front of the Royal Exchange Bank of England in the city, but the officials declared the story without foundation. At noon the Indian office received a direct cable stating that the whole Durbar programme had been carried out without mentioning any untoward incident.

CHARGE OF SEDUCTION

Serious Accusation Will be Investigated on Wednesday

Edward Tighe of Douro, who resides near Lakefield, was arraigned in the county police court last evening before Magistrate Edmison on a charge of seduction. The charge was laid by Mr. John J. Rowe, father of the young girl. As the latter is only 15 years of age, Mr. Geo. Cochrane, agent for the Children's Aid Society, claimed that the Society had a right to take steps in the matter, and on account of the illness of Mr. E. L. Goodwill, Hon. Solicitor for the Society, the case was adjourned until next Wednesday, when it is hoped that Mr. Goodwill's health will have improved sufficiently to enable him to officiate on behalf of the C. A. S.
